Magee Convinces Judge To Review Los Angeles Cases

By MARY LEYDECKER

San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee yesterday enjoyed probably his most triumphant day in court since he was first sent to state prison eight years ago for armed robbery and kidnapping from Los Angeles.

During the eight years, he was peppered the courts with handwritten writs and peititions calling the 1963 conviction a "railroad" and a "known fraud conviction."

Throughout his present case in Marin, where he is accused of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the August 1970 shoot-out at the Civic Center, the 32-year-old convict has based his hopes of acquittal on overturning the earlier conviction.

He has maintained that since, in his belief, he was illegally imprisoned, that he would not be found guilty in connection with the events of Aug. 7, 1970.

Yesterday Magee finally got a judge, Leonard M. Ginsberg of Tulare County, sitting in Marin Superior Court, to set a hearing on Nov. 10 on going into charges of possible error in the 1963 trial and a retrial granted in 1965.

(Magee won the 1965 retrial on the grounds that the judge had committed prejudicial error by combining the case with that of his codefendant.)

The retrial by the same judge, Herbert Walker, did not satisfy Magee, however, because the matters he had challenged were not taken up. He ened up by "taking the fifth" (refusing to testify on the grounds it would incriminate him) in the second trial.

Yesterday Magee got a big assist from his court-appointed attorney, Ernest L. Graves of Los Angeles, who was acting only as a "friend of the court," in the challenge of the old case.

Graves, a tall, gray-haired man, made an impassioned plea to the court in which he listed 11 "prejudicial errors" by the trial judge and Magee's earlier attorneys.

He claimed that a plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity" entered by an attorney against Magee's will had prejudiced the jury and that a defense attorney had not tried to produce evidence that would have established his client's innocence.

Even at this late date, Graves said, "I believe I can still show Magee's innocence."

"That was a nice argument, Mr. Graves," Magee said graciously when the lawyer had finished. He qualified his compliment, however, by adding, "It could have been shorter, more precise and to the point."

(Magee long has insisted that his present plight is due to attorneys and that he should be allowed to represent himself.)

Apparently pleased with the progress he made today, Magee who was allowed by Judge Ginsberg to appear in court without handcuffs although still chained to a chair, exhibited model behavior.

He apparently was especially pleased that Judge Ginsberg found his handwritten petition for a writ of habeas corpus in legal order and said he saw no reason not to allow the convict to continue to act as his own attorney in the matter with assistance from Graves and attorney Robert D. Carrow of Novato.

Graves said after court yesterday that if Magee's earlier conviction were overturned, the convict probably would be transferred to Marin County Jail to await trial on the shootout charges.

Winds Snap Tree Limbs, Power Lines

Brisk autumn winds, gusting up to 40 miles per hour, swept Marin County yesterday, snapping tree limbs and power lines in scattered areas.

On San Francisco Bay, where the Coast Guard reported winds at about 20 miles per hour with gusts up to 40, a houseboat broke loose from its moorings in Greenbrae and drifted past San Quentin Point.

A Coast Guard spokesman said a patrol vessel caught up with the bobbing houseboat at about 2:30 p.m. and towed it back to its berth.

In Santa Venetia, the wind lifted a 15-by-20 foot fiberglass patio cover over the roof of a home at 631 Vendola Drive, occupied by two women, Elise Doolittle and Gwen Davis.

After grazing the roof, the cover struck a parked car and came to rest in the driveway.

Elsewhere in the county, minor damage was reported from

HALLOWEEN DECOR

Skull — Forgotten Remains Of Murder

An old skull, used by a Sausalito family for eight years as a Halloween decoration, is apparently all that remains of a long-forgotten murder.

The Marin County Coroner's office said yesterday that the skull, turned in to Sausalito police Wednesday, was that of a man who had been dead 15 to 40 years.

Cause of death, the coroner said, was apparently a blow to the right side of the head which fractured the victim's skull.

Police are investigating the identity of the forgotten victim. The rest of the skeleton has not been found, déspite a search of her backyard, Mrs. Gallagher said.

Mrs. Gallagher said the family thought the grisly find was an old Indian skull and decided to use it as a scary Halloween decoration. When not in use, it was stored on a closet shelf.

However, when she removed the object from its keeping place this year, a neighbor asked if the find had ever been reported to police.

Mrs. Gallagher followed her neighbor's advice and took the skull to police, who turned it over to the coroner's office.

Yesterday, the coroner's office reported that two College of Marin anthropoligists had studied the jawless skull and reported it was that of a muscular young man about 25 years of age.

REDWOOD IS VICTOR OVER SAN RAFAEL

Marin County Athletic League football teams began a third week of conference competition last night with Redwood High defeating host San Rafael 21-13.

College of Marin opened its 1971 Camino Norte Conference play, losing 16-9 to West Valley College of Campbell in Buck Stadium, Santa Clara. Clara.

In a non-league high school game, Novato beat Vallejo 9-6 on the loser's field.

Tamalpais and Drake battled at College of Marin this afternoon, while San Marin takes on Terra Linda tonight at 8 o'clock at San Rafael High. Marin Catholic hosted Healdsburg today in another non-conference game.

Building Ban Is In Court

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — The first constitutional test of the state's water pollution control law went to trial yesterday.

The challenge came in a bid by Marin developers to overthrow a ban by the Regional Water Quality Control Board on new construction in much of the Ross Valley and Southern Marin.

Superior Court Judge Ira A. Brown Jr., however, again refused to consider lifting the ban until he reaches a final decision on the constitutional challenge. He indicated his decision will be reached sometime after Nov. 8.

"There is much too much here for me to assimilate to rule today," he said, pointing to a foot-high stack of legal documents filed in the case.

The ban was imposed on the City of Mill Valley and Richardson Bay Sanitary District in June, and on the Ross Valley Sanitary District in July. The court action was filed against the regional board by the Ross Valley district and the Citizens Assistance League to Marin County Sanitary Districts, a group of developers and real estate men.

The audience of more than 30 persons packed the small courtroom in city hall. Also present were top state water officials, who told newsmen that the state's 1969 Porter-Cologne Act was at stake in the court action. Without the power to ban new connections to force improvement of sewage treatment, the act would be gutted, they said.

Seaside attorney Saul M. Weingarten, representing the Ross Valley district and the citizens league, argued that the ban violated the equal protection provision of the 14th Amendment by denying owners of undeveloped land their right to develop their property.

He also asserted the regional board acted unfairly because it never heard testimony on the issue itself, accepting a recommendation from a hearing group.

Weingarten also branded the ban as "arbitrary and totally unreasonable," producing a witness who assured the judge that only "an inconsequential amount" of increased pollution would go into the bay without the ban.

The attorney claimed that the ban was based on standards tougher than those imposed on dischargers elsewhere, but Judge Brown quickly noted that other parts of the bay may not have the problems of Richardson Bay.

Weingarten's witness, Pal Alto consulting engineer John Jenks, testified that the regional board's standards for the three Marin dischargers were "excessively restrictive" because they were the same as for a recreation lake with no dilution of pollution.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Roderick E. Walston, however, won concessions from Jenks that he did not know the ban allowed additional construction as treatment was improved and that he was not familiar with the dischargers' violations.

Another witness called by Weingarten, Jeffory S. Morshead, Mill Valley real estate company owner, testified that the additional construction allowed as improvements are made did not satisfy the demand for building permits. He said he still could not sell more than $500,000 in property because of the ban.

After more than an hour of testimony by Jenks and Morshead, Walston moved that their testimony be removed from the record since they had had an opportunity to testify before the regional board. The judge reserved his decision on Walston's motion, but told Weingarten the court was interested only in testimony that had been excluded from the hearing by the regional board.

Weingarten challenged the re-

Cambodia Assembly Stripped Of Powers

Government Orders A New Constitution

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — The Cambodian government today decided to strip the sometimes maverick National Assembly of all lawmaking powers and order it to write a new constitution, government sources said.

The sources said the decision to form a "Constituent Assembly" was a compromise between factions who favored ending the parliament entirely or extending its mandate as a law making body.

The decision affects both upper and lower houses of the Cambodian parliament, but is aimed primarily at the National Assembly which roughly equals the American House of Representatives.

The government sources said Chief of State Cheng Heng played the final mediating role between the government of the prime minister Marshal Lon Nol, who favored letting the Assembly die when its mandate runs out Monday, and parliamentarians who wanted the mandate extended.

Under the Cambodian constitution, the chief of state is supposed to make the final decision on extending the life of the Assembly when elections are not possible but in fact its fate is decided by the cabinet.

The high command in Phnom Penh also reported today that Cambodian and Communist forces fought a bloody, hand-to-hand battle on the slopes of Mount Santuk Friday. A spokesman claimed 100 Viet Cong were killed while the Cambodians lost only 14 dead.

In Saigon, the U.S. command said B52 Stratofortresses raked Communist positions in Tay Ninh province at the Cambodian frontier, dropping tons of high explosives Friday night and once again today.

The strikes hit targets on three sides of Fire Base Pace, an embattled American artillery outpost which provides support for South Vietnamese troops who are engaged in a three-week-old battle against a Communist offensive.

The North Vietnamese Army (NVA) shelled three South Vietnamese bases today, wounding six soldiers at one of them.

In two ground skirmishes, both near highway 22, three NVA and one South Vietnamese soldier were reported killed.

In other action South Vietnamese forces killed 23 Communists in a battle near Song Mao, 130 miles east-northeast of Saigon Friday, the South Vietnamese command said. Another 11 Communist troops were killed in skirmishes in the central coastal region. No South Vietnamese casualties were reported.

Iranian Students Protest

FBI agents and bomb experts arrived in San Francisco today to investigate the blast that caused approximately $1 million damage to the three-story building and surrounding homes.

"At first we thought it was an earthquake—the shaking," Mrs. Homa Adle, wife of the Iranian consul general said. "Then we heard the blast and the shattering and breaking of glass. It sounded as if the house were falling down.

"Then the fire and smoke."

No one was seriously injured in the bombing. Both the blast and demonstration coincided with the glittering celebration held by the Shah across the world in Persepolis to commemorate the 2,500th anniversary of the Persian Empire.

"It is only a miracle that my whole family is not dead," said Consul General Dr. Parvis Adle, who rushed home from a meeting after Thursday's 11:44 p.m. blast. He blamed the bombing on "professional criminals" and called it a "definite plot to kill me and my family."

Mrs. Adle and her three children escaped from the flaming building through broken glass and shattered furniture and only suffered cuts and bruises. Police immediately cordoned off the area where nearly 50 homes were damaged.

"We had a terrible time at the front door," said Mrs. Adle. "The door is glass and it had shattered and the glass was on the hall floor. It jammed between the bottom of the door and the carpet and I couldn't open the door. We pulled on it, my son and I, and finally got it a little open and we ran out in our bare feet."

FBI bomb expert Tom Howard said it "was a blast of major proportion" such as would result from a minimum of 30 sticks of dynamite.

"We are not sure yet what kind of bomb it was," Howard said, "but the area smells of ammonia and ammonia is usually associated with dynamite."

Adle blamed the bombing on the same Iranian emigres who have repeatedly demonstrated at the consulate against the Shah's government.

"We know the names of the persons involved," said Adle. They are not students. They are professional criminals. They wanted to kill. This is not a political action, this is a criminal action."

Fairfax Recinds Townhouse Order

A stop-work order on a townhouse development in Fairfax was lifted yesterday at a special meeting of the city council.

City Clerk Eileen L. Foster reported the council lifted the order after representatives of the developer, Gentry Development Co., agreed to conditions in connection with their work in Fairfax Creek.

The council had ordered work on the Village West project halted Tuesday when Councilman Frank J. Egger charged Gentry was "violating" the creek and destroying trees and ground cover on a 150-yard stretch of creekside.

The council last night directed Gentry to restore the stripped area as close as possible to its natural state and ordered that — with the exception of one particular fig tree and one apricot tree — no more trees are to be cut.

The council also ordered that no further tree-trimming be done without specific permission of the council or its representatives. Mayor Cornelis van Vliet last night named Egger and planning commissioner Hugh O. Winn as council representatives in the matter.

Furthermore, the council ordered, clearing of blackberries, dead wood and debris from the creek was not to be done with bulldozers.

The apartment development is on a 6.8-acre site at Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Olema Road, adjacent to the creek.

Agnew In Greece For Short Visit

ATHENS (UPI)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew arrived today to visit the land of his ancestors and said the United States and Greece shared an inherited spirit —"the right of men to seek their own destiny and pride."

Hours before Agnew and his wife arrived for a combined official and private visit lasting eight days, two small explosions slightly damaged cars owned by two U.S. military men.

Police did not link the vice president's arrival and the explosions although leftwingers announced they would conduct an "Agnew, get out of Greece" campaign.

Strict security measures were in force when Agnew flew in from Iran where he represented President Nixon at the Shah of Iran's celebrations marking 2,500 years of the Persian Empire.

Premier George Papadopoulos greeted Agnew at Athens Airport. A crowd of cheering Americans was on hand and Agnew ignored the security cordon to shake hands with them.

Athenian crowds were so enthusiastic along the route into the city that Agnew twice stopped his limousine, which he shared with Papadopoulos, and got out to shake hands.

"When an American visits Greece for the first time it is a little like coming home," Agnew said in a statment at the airport.

"For those of us with Greek blood in our veins, it is a particularly moving experience."

Agnew's father, Theofrastos Anagnostopoulos, left Greece for the United States 75 years ago. The family name was changed later.

"The United States and Greece are joined today in a defensive alliance which in many ways is based on the spirit we inherited from your ancestors and mine...the right of men to seek their own destiny and pride," Agnew said.

He said he looked forward to talks with Greek officials during an official three-day visit starting Saturday and also to visiting his father's hometown of Gargalianoi.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Reagan Next?

SAN JOSE (UPI) — Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., says he expects President Nixon to dump Spiro Agnew in 1972 and indicated Gov. Ronald Reagan might be the vice presidential nominee.

McCloskey told newsmen yesterday that Nixon could be expected to "certainly look for a good-looking conservative" to maintain the GOP's appeal to that faction of the party.

Condor Count

BAKERSFIELD (UPI) — The rare California condor population that once ranged in the thousands has dwindled to 34.

That number of sightings was reported yesterday by the state Fish and Game Department, which held a two-day bird watch in the Tehachapi mountains — breeding grounds of the nearly extinct creature.

Rate Drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The unemployment rate among Vietnam era veterans aged 20 to 29 dropped to 8.3 per cent during the July-September period, compared to 8.5 per cent in the previous quarter, but still remained above the 6.4 per cent rate of one year ago.

Heart Pledge

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Stanford University's famous heart transplant team will continue its surgery to save lives, Dr. Norman E. Shumway, its director, said Friday.

Shumway made the pledge at the San Francisco Heart Association's 41st annual symposium on heart disease, which is being attended by more than 1,000 doctors, medical students and heart workers.

More Shootings

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A police detective and a British soldier here shot and wounded in Belfast today hours after attackers in a speeding car used a machine gun to kill two other detectives.

A group calling itself the Irish Republic Movement claimed responsibility for killing the two detectives yesterday.

Dayan Predicts Mideast Truce Until The Spring

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan predicted yesterday the Middle East truce will continue at least until spring.

Dayan, in a speech to a group of engineers in Tel Aviv, also said he would prefer war to submitting to a proposal by Cairo that Egyptian soldiers be allowed to cross to the Israeli-occupied east bank of the Suez Canal as part of an agreement to reopen the waterway.

International guarantees for security under those conditions would be "like leaning on crutches which have insecure foundations," he said. He referred to such guarantees as "illusions" and said "the day when America will have to send its boys to die for Israel will become a very black day."

The defense minister said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had told Washington "the United States must squeeze Israel like an orange" to get it to accept an interim peace settlement before the end of the year.

"Israel can be pressured, but it cannot be squeezed or blackmailed," he said.

Dayan's brother-in-law, retired Gen. Ezer Weizman, said in a radio interview Friday night that Israel retains its air of superiority and can knock down anything the Egyptians put up — including the modern MIG23s believed flown by Soviet pilots.

"Its a question of pilots, and we have the advantage," Weizman, an architect of Israel's aerial victory in the 1967 war, said.

In Paris, a French aeronautics official said Israel is using spare parts to build its own jets in an attempt to get around a French arms embargo imposed by the late President Charles de Gaulle. He said the Israelis are using French Mirage jet bodies and U.S. Phantom jet engines.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said in an interview Israel and the United States have not reached agreement on Secretary of State Rogers six-point interim peace plan, which revolves around the reopening of the Suez Canal.

New HEW Rules For Its Nonsmokers

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Health, Education and Welfare Department, which has 107,000 workers across the country and is the government's second largest employer, has announced new rules to separate nonsmoking workers from those who smoke.

The agency said no-smoking areas would be established in cafeterias, no-smoking policies will be instituted for HEW conference rooms and there will be no-smoking work areas wherever possible.

Nixon Honors Evangelist With An Old-Time Religious Speech

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI)— President Nixon, sharing a platform with evangelist Billy Graham, warned Friday that despite its wealth and power American society cannot survive without religion and strength of character.

The President's old time religion speech drew cheers from a crowd of 13,000 persons at a testimonial rally for Graham, but outside the arena Nixon faced a few of the most determined hecklers he has seen in several months.

Demonstrators made up a small percentage of the 150,000 persons who, by police estimates, viewed the President's motorcade through downtown Charlotte; but one youth was about to get close enough to Nixon to shout "murderer" virtually into his ear and others chanted slogans against the Vietnam War.

Nixon flew to Charlotte in his blue, white and silver "Spirit of 76" jetliner to unveil a plaque which will be put at the birthplace of Graham, the 52-year-old evangelist.

"He is one of those few people who is a prophet with honor in his town," Nixon said of Graham in a brief interview before he flew to Camp David, Md., his retreat in the western Maryland mountains, to spend the weekend.

In his speech during the ceremonies at the Charlotte Coliseum, Nixon called for a renewal of the religious faith, morality and strength of character that American had when it was young.

He said the civilizations of ancient Greence, Rome and Persia all fell when they were seemingly at the height of their wealth and power.

"As they became wealthy, they became soft," Nixon said. "As they became better educated without principle, they became weak."

In a similar vein, Graham was applauded for reminisinces of his youth on a North Carolina dairy farm.

"We wrestled with poverty, if you did not have sociologists, educators and newscasters constantly reminging us of how poor we were.

"We also had the problem of rats," he said. "The only difference then and now is we didn't call upon the government to kill them. We killed our own."

Following the ceremonies, Nixon and Graham strolled through a grassy plaza to Ovens Auditorium for a private reception. On the way they encountered about 20 college-aged hecklers interspersed with about 80 well-wishers. With Nixon only about three feet away one of the demonstrators shouted "murderer" at him.

$1 Billion Program Proposed To Save Endangered Coastline

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A $1 billion program to create a new state agency and save the endangered California coastline has been proposed by the state Parks and Recreation Department.

A department report, prepared more than two months ago, was distributed publicly Friday after Democratic lawmakers leaked it to newsmen.

A dispute immediately arose over whether the report amounted to endorsement of the only surviving legislation to protect the state's 1,072 mile coast from exploitation and overdevelopment.

Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, said the 123-page document, dated Aug. 6, was "a strong endorsement for the policies embodied" in his bill which has passed the Assembly and is now in the Senate.

But Robert Meyer, deputy director of the parks department, said his agency had "no position" on Sieroty's bill.

He also said the report was not distributed sooner because of editorial revisions, delays at the state printing office and the need to get special permission from Gov. Ronald Reagan to print four color maps.

Predicting a 36 per cent increase in the utilization of coastal areas by 1980, the report declared "the use of the shoreline is presently proceeding in a random, often uncontrolled fashion, not always in the interest of all people."

It was sharply critical of local actions in connection with coastal development.

"In the process of protecting the private owner or increasing the tax base, the public's natural resources are being bargained away," it said.

"In the meantime," the report said, "the natural beauties of the California coastline are gnawed away into the insatiable maw of civilization and commerce.

"Because many of the changes, if not most, are irreversible, permanent damage is done which cannot be repaired."

It proposed a statewide agency to draw up a comprehensive coastal plan and to regulate development. Day-to-day administration would be left up to local authorities and regional commissions.

The report recommended acquiring hundreds of thousands of acres of coastal land, including 236 miles of shoreline, and expansion of state parks in 15 counties.

Currently 61 per cent of the shoreline is privately owned.

Land to be acquired would include areas seaward of every coastal highway where the distance is 300 feet or less.

The department estimated the cost of its proposals would be more than $1 billion at current land prices. It proposed financing the acquisitions by bond issues, gas tax revenues, toll roads, federal funds and general fund revenue.

The department also advanced a suggestion for a "modest tax shared by all of the Western states" because coastal parks in Washington, Oregon and California benefit all the people living in the area.

HEART OF THE SYSTEM — Programmer Lt. David H. Cookerly feeds information into a Univac 1218 computer, which interprets data from the powerful new radar installation on Mount Tamalpais. $3.7 MILLION MACHINERY

A New 'Eye' For Radar Station

The Air Force radar station atop Mount Tamalpais has a new $3.7 million eye.

The eye — actually, it's a sophisticated radar and computer combination designed to detect hostile missiles launched from submarines or the ocean surface — has been in operation for about a year but was only announced this week.

The device is called a Sea Launch Ballistic Missile Protection and Warning System — SLBM, in military parlance — and joins the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) System on Mount Tamalpais.

SAGE is designed to detect attacks by jet bombers.

The new radar installation is one of seven SLBM sites in the U.S., three on the west coast, three in the east and one in Texas. The other western installations are at Mount Laguna, near San Diego, and Mount Hebo, on the north coast of Oregon.

"I can't tell you that," said Capt. James L. Juntunen, commander of Detachment 3 of the 14th Aerospace Force, which operates the system.

"Obviously, though," he added, "we wouldn't have put it in if it wasn't worth it." The seven SLBM sites cost $26 million, he said, with the Marin installation running roughly $3.7 million.

Juntunen explained how the system works: the radar unit, housed in the westerly of the two white domes on the middle peak of Mount Tamalpais, constantly scans the horizon for possible missiles. All flying objects, including airplanes, are detected, and the information is fed into a Univac 1218 computer.

The mechanical brain is programmed to weed out airplanes — whose velocities are much lower than those of missiles — and sounds an alarm only if a missile is detected.

All information on sightings is relayed to the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo., where it is combined with other data on possible enemy action and sent on to the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb., and to the Pentagon.

The range of the radar unit also is classified, Juntunen said, although he disclosed the three West Coast installations cover the western flank of the U.S. and overlap considerably.

Judge Orders Dockers To Work For Full 'Cooling Off' Period

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—West Coast longshoremen were ordered to work for the full 80-day "cooling off" period of the Taft-Hartley Act by a federal judge yesterday despite union protests that it was illegal to move against only the Pacific portion of the nationwide dock strike.

U.S. District Judge William T. Sweigert called the union position "certainly intriguing" but said under the circumstances the 15,000 dockworkers must remain on the job. He then extended a temporary restraining order that suspended the 100-day strike Oct. 6, and said he would issue the formal injunction next week.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union attorneys argued that it was illegal for President Nixon to move against the West Coast while 32,000 longshoremen were striking the East, Gulf and Great Lakes ports. That walkout enter its 16th day today.

"The President has never made a finding that a strike on the West Coast alone affects the national health and safety," said ILWU attorney Norman Leonard.

"The government cannot pick and choose," and enjoin "a little piece" of the nationwide shipping tieup, he said.

After rejecting the argument, Judge Sweigert set next Thursday to hear a government motion that the ILWU should be cited for contempt because of alleged work stoppages and slowdowns in key ports.

In answering the union's presentation, Sweigert said:

"I think under a reading of the statute, the President had the power under the circumstances to order the attorney general to enjoin this strike on the West Coast. For that reason, I believe I must order issuance of a preliminary injunction."

Previously, affidavits were filed by the governors of the Pacific Coast states saying the lengthy strike was causing millions of dollars in damage and irreparable harm to the economy.

Local labor-management disputes have disrupted port operations in Los Angeles-Long Beach, San Francisco-Oakland, Portland, and Seattle.

An estimated 3,000 longshoremen in Los Angeles area had refused to work because of a dispute over which men should be hired first. That controversy was resolved and men began returning to the port complex yesterday.

Attorneys for the Pacific Maritime Association, representing shippers, said docks in Porland and Seattle were still only operating at 50 per cent or less capacity because of slowdown and obstructionist tactics.

After setting the hearing on the contempt issue for 10 a.m. Thursday, Sweigert told U.S. Attorney James Browning and E. Grey Lewis, deputy assistant U.S. Attorney General, to be prepared to present witnesses proving the union had defied the original back to work order.

Plea Made To Felony Pot Charge

James Christopher Wright, 22, of Sausalito, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to felony charges of possessing marijuana and car theft and a misdemeanor count of possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 26.

Wright was arrested Sept. 24 when San Rafael police raided a motel room at the Bermuda Palms Motel. Police said they found marijuana and a hypodermic syringe in the room and the car Wright was using had been stolen in San Francisco.

James Phillips, 26, of Sausalito, who was with Wright at the time of the arrest, was sentenced to 15 days in Marin County Jail after he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of being in a place where marijuana was used.

Class Action Suits Will Be Discussed

John Kelly, an attorney for California Rural Legal Assistance (CRLA), will speak on class action suits as a means of securing consumer rights at a Thursday meeting of the Mill Valley branch of the American Association of University Women.

The meeting, set for 7:30 p.m. in the gallery of the Mill Valley public library, is open to the public.

UC Scientists Find X-Ray Star

BERKELEY (UPI)—University of California astronomers report the discovery of an invisible star-like object that is only 10 miles in diameter but emits x-rays powerful enough to be detected on earth.

The scientists speculated Thursday the object might be a "neutron star," a type of body whose existence has long been suspected but never proven.

They said the evidence fits the characteristics of theories about neutron stars —the collapsed remnant of an old and large star whose matter is packed so densely that it is all transformed into the explosive energy of neutrons.

Such a star would be so dense that its weight and gravitational pull, even if the object is only 10 miles across, would be far greater than that of the sun.

Orbiting Space Lab To Earth

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Salyut orbiting laboratory plunged like a meteor into the Pacific Ocean last Monday at the end of a six-month mission that brought grief and glory to the Soviet Union, it was announced Friday.

The Official Tass news agency announced Salyut's fate Friday night and hailed its historic achievements as the first manned orbiting space station.

It did not mention that the three cosmonatus who had manned it in June died during their return to earth aboard Soyuz 11 on June 30.

Miller Slide Will Be Viewed Monday

Time may be running out for Mill Valley's massive Miller Avenue landslide.

After 984 days of partially blocking the city's major thoroughfare, the city council will consider removing the slide when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

City Engineer Stanley M. Bala will recommend the city immediately advertise for bids to remove the slide. The cost is estimated at between $20,000 and $30,000.

The city is preparing to take the action, according to City Mgr. William H. Cunningham, because an abatement order issued by the council Aug. 2 has been ignored by the three persons whose land, the city says, caused the slide.

Bala's proposal calls for "removal and disposal of all unstable materials," Cunningham said. Unstable materials are defined as those "still in the process of sliding."

Bala further recommends cutting terraces into the flank of the slide to discourage further movement and providing surface drainageways to channel rainwater to the sides of the mound of earth.

If the council accepts Bala's recommendations and calls for bids on the project, it will have to appropriate more funds, Cunningham said, because only $3,000 has been earmarked for removing the slide.

The city manager said the city, if it pays for cleaning up the slide, will bill the three property owners: Melinda Rowe-Beddoe, Joseph A. Moore and Henry T. Gunderson.

Montly meetings between prison officials and prisoners are held in Sweden for the purpose of discussing conditions and problems.

WHY "YES" ON ANNEXATION?

Protection Of Our Environment.
Every week, we see more and more results of the county's high density corridor theory. Our open land is disappearing under irreparable scars. Strawberry Cove will be next to succumb to land promoters and high densities - unless annexation passes! We helped draft the Tiburon Master Plan in 1967. Tiburon has vainly urged the county to follow the plan in our area. Through annexation, that plan would restore the Cove and preserve our other areas.

A Voice In Our Affairs
Right now we vote for only one of 5 supervisors. No wonder the county is deaf to our voices! By annexing, we end "taxation without representation". We gain immediate area representation on Planning and Parks Commissions. We elect all 5 councilmen. Those who are trying to scare you with misinformation about higher taxes are simply worried that you'll have a voice over their special interests!

Protection Of Our Tax Base and Revenues.
$340,000 a year in non-property taxes are right now drained from our community. Only by annexation to Tiburon can we gain control over those funds and retain them in the community! The Strawberry Rec. District is on record that only Tiburon's plan "will protect the integrity of the Strawberry District as a whole". In contrast, defeat of annexation means that Strawberry Shopping Center's property tax base will be stripped from our special districts and go into Mill Valley. The people will be left outside - but our tax base will be depleted, and our taxes will rise with no increase in service. What do you prefer: a small tax increase ($32 a year on a $40,000 home) for better services and local control, or a tax increase for which you get nothing?

Better Police Services
County figures show the crime rate is three times greater than it is in Tiburon. Why? Because Tiburon has triple the coverage we presently have. Moreover, annexation means a substation in Strawberry, with additional staffing. On top of this, we will have a voice in phasing in by Tiburon of its new department which will have even more extensive servicing. Under policies we help develop.

VOTE YES ON OCT. 19

Cycle Crash Is Fatal To 19-Year-Old

A 19-year-old Mill Valley youth was killed today when his motorcycle failed to make a turn on Shoreline Highway in Tamalpais Valley.

A passenger on the bike was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital.

Robert H. Hansen of 164 Janes Street was dead on arrival at Marin General, the California Highway Patrol said.

Officers said the motorcycle ran off the road near Shasta Way about 1:30 a.m.

The passenger, Richard Nielsen, 19, of 468 Wellesley Avenue, Mill Valley, suffered a broken jaw and cut chin, the hospital reported.

Hansen was the son of Haral Hansen of the Janes Street address. His death was the 27th traffic fatality this year, compared to 31 at this time last year.

Funeral arrangements were pending today at Russell and Gooch Mortuary in Mill Valley.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Trademarks Are Protected

By reason of advertisement or product identification, the average consumer is conscious of brands. The law protects trade names and trademarks. Even though the name is not registered, the law will not allow one to benefit from a "good name" of another. A competitor cannot "reap what he has not sown."

The name must have gained a secondary meaning. A product's shape or business' name may become so familiar that it gains a special meaning to consumers.

"Packaging" is often as important to name identification as the name itself. The familiar yellow box, the squeeze bottle, the cleaner in a drum, the Coke bottle, and thousands of other packages gain an identifiable shape. These are also protected.

Sellers often spend a great deal of money on the packaging and advertisement of a product. The configuration of the package is a factor in impulse purchases. If purchasers are likely to be deceived by similar packaging, even though the products are labeled differently, the court may put a stop to the copying competitor. The competitor will have to pay damages for deceiving customers.

In our free enterprise system imitation is part of competition. The law protects only against similar packaging that is "unfair," which is deceptive or in violation of special trademarks.

Free enterprise allows wide latitude in competition. True, the first maker of the product may have a great competitive advantage. But unless he has a patented trademark or similar protection, he must show that the competitor was unfair or deceptive. This is hard to do. There are cases involving claims of exclusive rights to the design and shape of biscuits, bread, pills, cologne bottles a wrench, a padlock, and many other items. Few have been successful.

It must be shown that the shape of the item has gained a special secondary meaning identified with the first businessman. And that a similar shape or packaging will result in public confusion over the product. Also there is usually an element of unfairness, dishonesty or piracy in copying the competition.

Tiburon Will Ponder Cove Moves

The Tiburon City Council will consider adoption of an ordinance paving the way for condemnation of land on Strawberry Cove when it meets at 6 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The council approved the ordinance on first reading Monday. It would permit the city attorney to file a condemnation suit against Leonard B. Fleischman of Belvedere for a 6.7-acre parcel on Strawberry Cove.

The city moved to condemn the land after Fleischman, who has proposed building 72 apartments on the site, turned down an offer of $125,000 for the property. The city wants to buy the land for a park.

Faire Operators To Seek Permit

Operators of the Renaissance Pleasure Faire will appear before Deputy Marin Zoning Administrator Harvey E. Bragdon Monday to seek a use permit to conduct the annual fair and open a cultural center on an Upper Lucas Valley ranch.

A hearing is set for 11 a.m. in the planning commission chambers of the Civic Center Administration Building.

About 100 protests have poured into county planning officials from residents of Lucas Valley, who fear traffic congestion and damage to environment.

Tools Stolen

Tools valued at between $800 and $1,000 were stolen from a carport at the residence of Robert K. Lane of 360 Tennessee Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, last Friday or Saturday, Marin County Sheriff's office reported yesterday.

Officer Is Faced With A Shotgun

A Fairfax policeman, responding to a phone call that a resident at 351 Olema Road "was ready to see an officer," found himself face-to-face with a shotgun barrel yesterday.

Officer John Cooper who was confronted with the weapon, radioed for assistance, and Jane Thompson of Apt. 23 at the Olema Road address soon was disarmed and taken to the Marin Community Mental Health Center for obervation.

Cooper responded to the telephone call to Fairfax police, although the apartment building is just outside the city limits.

Cooper said that as he approached the woman's apartment, the door opened and all he could see was the shotgun barrel sticking out.

Mrs. Thompson, about 42, handed over the gun when Sheriff's deputies arrived to assist Cooper.

Developer, Six Others Hurt In Crash

A Novato developer and six other persons were injured today in a traffic collision on an approach to the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

California Highway Patrol said the Novatan, Timothy W. O'Donoghue Jr., 36, suffered a collapsed lung, broken right arm, fractured ribs and head cuts in the 12:30 a.m. accident. O'Donoghue was in Mission Emergency Hospital in San Francisco today, although his condition was unavailable from hospital officials.

O'Donoghue apparently was driving north in the southbound lane of Funston Avenue, the highway patrol said, when his auto collided with a car driven by Samuel F. Russel, 20, of Alameda.

Russel and his five passengers, who are from San Francisco and Stockton, also were taken to Mission Emergency, but no information on the extent of their injuries was available.

STORM

falling tree limbs and broken power lines.

In Inverness Park, a tree limb crashed through a power line, setting off a small grass fire and halting service to about 12 homes on Pinecrest Road. Power was restored in about 20 minutes after the 11:30 a.m. break, a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. spokesman said.

In San Anselmo, an arcing was reported outside 333 Fawn Drive. There was no report of damage from the 2 p.m. break.

POWERS

American command had decided to continue manning the base, located only five miles from the rubber plantation town of Krek in Cambodia. Krek has been the center of bitter fighting for weeks.

American officers had been considering a possible pullout of the artillery located on Pace, along with the GIs assigned to protect it.

Leaching Lines Plan Rejected

Marin County's fill committee has turned thumbs down on a proposal to build septic tank leaching lines next to a sea wall on the east shore of Tomales Bay.

Arthur A. Bostow of Valencia applied for permission to build a four bedroom home on Tomales Bay north of Marshall, near Clark Road. To install a septic tank and leaching lines, he wanted to build a concrete retaining wall along the waterfront and fill behind it. Bostow said the retaining wall would also stop erosion of his property.

Pablo Magat and Jack Lee, district sanitarians with the county division of environmental control, said Bostow's plans do not meet county requirements.

OBITUARIES

GIUSEPPE MEZZETTA

Private funeral was held yesterday in Larkspur for Giuseppe L. Mezzetta of Larkspur. Entombment was at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery in San Rafael.

Mezzetta, 79, of 40 Bayview Avenue, died Thursday at a local hospital following a long illness.

He was a native of Italy and had lived in Marin County 52 years.

He came to San Francisco from Italy in 1912 and opened a food importation and packing business. Mezzetta retired eight years ago and the company is now operated by his son, David Mezzetta of San Rafael.

In addition to his son, Mezzetta is survived by his wife, Colomba Rose; a daughter, Anna Fyfe of San Rafael; a brother, Augustino Mezzetta, and a sister, Carmella Mezzetta, both of Italy; four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

MRS. QUINN

Private inurnment is scheduled for Lilian Louise Quinn, 54, of Corte Madera, who died Wednesday in a local hospital following a long illness.

Mrs. Quinn was born in Alaska and came to California in 1952. She and her husband, Joseph, moved to Marin County after their marriage in 1954. The couple resided at 11 Lupine Drive.

Mrs. Quinn formerly was a director of military service clubs in Japan, Hawaii and the U.S. During the Korean War, she was supervisor of the largest service club in Japan, located in Okinawa.

JACK LILLESTOL

Jack Lillestol of Mill Valley, retired marble mason, died yesterday in a local hospital after a short illness. He was 84.

Born in Norway, Lillestol lived at 120 Ricardo Road for three years and had been a resident of California for 50 years.

He worked as a marble mason for Vermont Marble Co. in San Francisco for 20 years prior to his retirement.

He is survived by a son, Jack K. Lillestol of Mill Valley, and two grandchildren.

Funeral will be at 1 p.m. Monday at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley, with burial at Cypress Lawn Cemetery in Colma.

HAROLD MURRAY

Funeral for Harold C. Murray of San Anselmo, who died Thursday in a local hospital, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

Murray, 68, was born in Mound City, Mo., and came to San Francisco 48 years ago. Hd moved to Marin in 1942, living the rest of his life in the county, except for six years in Paradise, Butte County.

He was a former superintendent for an oil burner manufacturing company, and had served in the Navy.

Murray is survived by his wife, Flora Mae, of the family home at 15 Rowland Court; three daughters, Patricia Smith of Petaluma, Linda Elliot of San Francisco and Nancy Rickman of Soquel, Santa Cruz County; four sons, William and Charles Murray of San Anselmo, Robert Murray of Rohnert Park and Ronald Murray of Ignacio; two brothers, two sisters, 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial will be at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

Couple Is Given Term Of Probation

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Marin couple accused of performing sexual acts for an undercover officer has been placed on two years' probation and fined $5 a month in probation costs in superior court.

Prior to sentencing, Judge Walter Calcagno reduced felony charges of oral copulation against Michael Marsolais, 29, and his wife, Frenchie, 27, of San Quentin Village, to misdemeanors.

The judge ruled on the basis of evidence presented at a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court and after the defendants waived their right to a trial.

The couple was arrested in a San Francisco motel room March 4 after a policeman took about 300 feet of film and still photographs of the pair allegedly performing sexual acts.

The couple said, according to police, that they had appeared in virtually every erotic film then running in San Francisco movie theaters.

gional board for accepting last-minute testimony from its staff before ordering the ban in Ross Valley. He said the board barred him from rebutting the staff testimony, but the staff testified yesterday that the only effect of the last-minute evidence in July had been to ease the order against the Ross Valley district.

In a related issue, the judge set for trial Nov. 17 a separate legal action by a group of developers against the Richardson Bay district and the regional board.

HOWARD BARNES
Posse captain

Barnes To Be Seated As Leader

Howard Barnes of San Rafael will be installed as captain of the Mounted Sheriff's Posse of Marin County at the group's annual installation dinner tonight at the Hamilton Air Force Base Officers Club.

The volunteer organization takes part in searches, rescues, trail rides and parades under the direction of Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos.

Barnes, a Marin resident for 12 years, is an estimator and manager for James E. Marsh contractors in Concord. He has been with the sheriff's posse for four years.

Other new officers include 1st Lt. Paul Hughes of Petaluma, 2nd Lt. Richard Todd of Novato, Secretary William Dreusike of Novato and Treasurer Oscar Montgomery of Novato.

Another Police Discussion Set

The Marin County Police-Community Relations Department will hold another in a series of discussions between law officers and citizens at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Terra Linda Recreation Center.

Participants in the seminar will be Marin Superivsor John F. McInnis; Fred E. Jensen and John A. Miskimen, San Rafael city councilmen; Robert Bennett, chairman of the Terra Linda Community Services District board; Richard Less, president of the Las Gallinas Valley Council, and Gerald Green, community relations officer with the San Rafael Police Department.

Others present will include Capt. Harvey Teague of the sheriff's department; Donald Bowden and Frank Wells, both teachers at Terra Linda High School; George Walser, chief of public safety of the Terra Linda Community Services District, and Dr. William Scalapino, behavioral science teacher at the College of Marin.

Tough Drug Law In West Germany

BONN (UPI)—The West German Parliament has passed a tough new drug law which provides for imprisonment of up to 10 years and a fine of $15,000 for drug-related offenses.

Health minister Kaete Stroebel said the law was an "attempt to force unscrupulous criminals to quit their handiwork."

The old drug law dated back to 1929 and had a maximum penalty of three years in jail.

The new law is aimed primarily at drug peddlers and distributors, rather than persons found in possession of drugs.

No Support For Nominee From State

By BENJAMIN SHORE
I-J Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Romana Banuelos of Los Angeles, President Nixon's controversial nominee for the ceremonial post of treasurer of the United States, has failed in her attempt to receive the open backing of California's two U.S. Senators.

Mrs. Banuelos called upon Democratic Sens. Alan Cranston and John V. Tunney this past week, but she came away empty handed.

"I will not take a position until after the confirmation hearings," Cranston said in an interview after his talk with Mrs. Banuelos. He declined to comment on the specifics of the case.

Tunney, who was represented by aides in a meeting with Mrs. Banuelos, also is declining any comment until the Senate confirmation hearing is held.

Mrs. Banuelos, 46, was accompanied by her husband, Alexander, and Gene Knorr, a Treasury Department specialist in Congressional relations.

Visiting with senators before confirmation hearings is considered traditional for Presidential nominees. However, it was learned that Mrs. Banuelos was also looking for open support from her state's two Senators.

The fact that she is making the customary rounds on Capitol Hill is considered a sign that the Whita House wants to push ahead with her nomination.

However, some Senate observers believe that if her personal contacts with Senators and the Treasury Department's own assessment indicate that she might be rejected, the White House may be prepared to withdraw her nomination.

Mrs. Banuelos seemed assured of quick and routine confirmation until her food products plant was raided last week by U.S. immigration officials looking for illegal Mexican aliens employed there.

Thirty-six aliens were caught and sent back to Mexico, and another 35 were reported to have escaped during the raid, which was the sixth in four years at Mrs. Banuelos' plant.

Several Senators, including Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee which will hold the confirmation hearings, have expressed doubt since the raid that Mrs. Banuelos' confirmation will be routine.

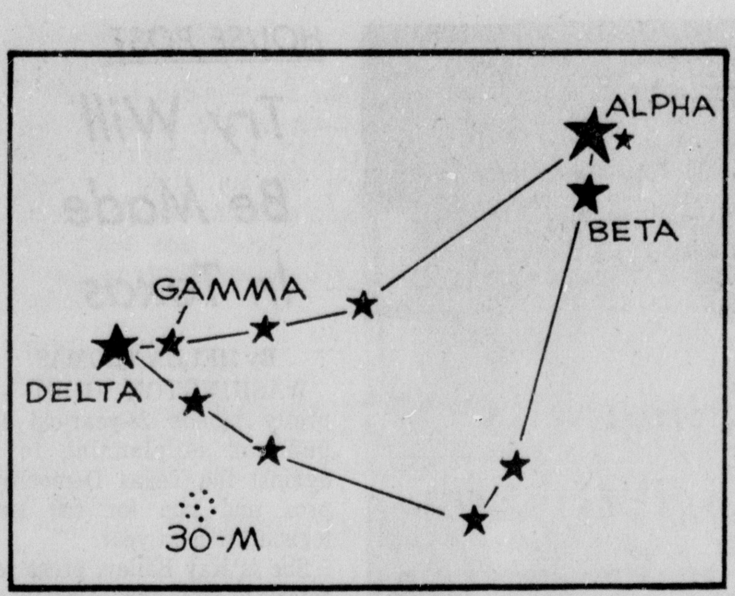
Joan Garrity Files Huge Suit

NEW YORK (UPI)—Joan Garrity, who under the initial "J" authored the best-selling book "The Sensuous Woman," has filed suits in federal and state courts seeking nearly $4 million in damages from the book's publisher.

In Manhattan Supreme Court, Miss Garrity demanded treble damages of more than $3 million and unpaid royalties of $145,913 from Lyle Stuart Inc., and Lyle Stuart, president of the publishing firm. In Federal court, she sought $737,740 in treble damages.

Her state suit charged the defendants and others not known to her with conspiring to defraud her and with harassment, including making her come from her Palm Beach, Fla., home to New York to collect her checks.

Her federal suit claimed the defendants discriminated in the price the book sold to distributors by offering a discount to selected retailers.



STARS ABOVE

Capricornus — The 11th Constellation

By SHERMAN WALKER

Capricornus, the Sea Goat is the 11th constellation of the zodiac and one with considerable historic significance. It can be imagined to look like the head of a goat, but that's as far as the resemblance goes.

To locate the Sea Goat in the sky, face southward at 9 p.m. and look at the region of the sky that is one-half of the distance up from the southern horizon to overhead.

The bright star of this figure, Alpha Capricorni, is a double that can be separated without telescopic aid (if your eyes are a lot better than mine). Each of the companions are telescopic doubles, making a system of at least four stars. The two Alphas are also known as Prima Gaedi and Secunda Gaedi and they are of magnitudes 3.2 and 3.8 respectively. Beta Capricorni is also a double star with components of orange and blue. They are magnitudes 3 and 6.

Gamma Capricorni is magnitude 4, and its Arabian name means the Bringer of Good Tidings.

It was on the eastern edge of this figure that two mathematicians named Leverrier and Adams computed that a previously unknown planet would be found. In 1846, the planet Neptune was discovered less than a degree from the predicted place.

It was known to be there by its gravitational influence on Uranus.

Auto Burglaries Are Reported In Wide Area

A series of auto burglaries in unincorporated areas of the county has been reported by the Marin sheriff's office.

Deputies reported five such crimes in the last week, occurring in Lucas Valley, Muir Beach, Santa Venetia and Terra Linda.

Belmont M. Speroni of 330 Johnson Street, Sausalito, reported that a watch, wallet, camping gear and other items, valued at a total of $835, were taken Monday from his car, parked in a lot at Muir Beach.

Camera equipment, valued at $300, was taken last Friday from the auto of Henry H. Wallerstein of Paramus, N. J., while it was parked on Shoreline Highway near Muir Beach, deputies said.

Beverly Leach of 60 Vendola Drive, Santa Venetia, told deputies a tape deck and tapes, valued at $250, were taken from her car last Friday while it was parked in her driveway.

No Licenses

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court has ruled 5-2 a Los Angeles County ordinance requiring licensing of bookstore operators is unconstitutional. The court said the ordinance set no adequate standards for issuing a license and was therefore an invalid prior restraint of first amendment rights.

College Bond Has Endorsement

The Marin Alternative has endorsed a $16.7 million bond issue on the Nov. 2 ballot to finance construction on the College of Marin's Novato campus, chairman Alan Barnett reported.

Measure A on the ballot would go toward building a second campus in Novato and completing the buildingprogram at the Kentfield campus. A similar measure, for $16.9 million, went down to defeat last November, although it received a 62.5 favorable vote, 4.2 per cent shy of the necessary two-thirds approval.

Marin Alternative also passed several resolutions calling for the Marin County Board of Supervisors to initiate and support prison reforms.

Mill Valley Education To Be Aired

Parents dissatisfied with the quality and kind of education in the Mill Valley School District will voice their concerns at a special meeting of the district board at 8 p.m. Monday at Tamalpais High School.

Trustees have agreed to discuss two topics: the trend of education in the district and how to provide disgruntled parents with alternate choices.

The special meeting, which may be followed by others, was prompted by a petition to the board signed by 1,233 persons protesting "the experimental changes taking place in the Mill Valley schools."

The meeting also may mark the first time the specific complaints of the residents are aired. Two private meeting were held last week between board members and petitioners, but school officials have declined to discuss the outcome.

Monday's session will be held in the high school's Ruby Scott Auditorium.

Bars Banned

DJAKARTA (UPI) —A new national ruling has been sent to provincial authorities throughout Indonesia forbidding establishment of bars, night clubs and casinos in the vicinity of schools or places of worship. The ruling was made to "preserve a healthy morality," according to a joint statement by the home Affairs and Social Affairs ministries.

Park To Become A Playground

The Terra Linda Recreation-Park District board has voted to transform Munson Park from a builder's park into a playground for tots.

General Manager Zonwice Mulhaupt said the park has been a place where children could bring tools and make things but in the past year it has fallen into disuse.

The board, she said, decided Thursday night to use money left in the William Munson fund to put up a fence and buy playground equipment within the next two months to make a park for preschool children.

Two of the board members, Robert Bennett and Harold Reese, signed a letter from the Galinas Valley Council opposing the Renaissance Faire from moving into Lucas Valley, Mrs. Mulhaupt said. Elroy Munson, the only other board member attending the meeting, did not sign the letter, she reported.

Children's War On Castor Oil

CHICAGO (UPI)—Two 10-year old girls have circulated a petition against castor oil among patients in the pediatrics ward at West Suburban Hospital in Oak Park.

The petition read: "Petition against children having to take mineral or castor oil in the hospital or anyplace else."

The document —with nine signatures on it —was turned over to the supervising nurse. The hospital promised to give the petition "serious consideration."

Drama Class For Children Is Approved

Drama classes for children have been tentatively approved by the Petaluma Recreation, Music and Parks Commission.

Dale Meador, a retired actor, said he wanted to begin classes for children in which they would dramatize classical literature and plays. He said no full-scale play productions would be planned so that classes could be reserved for fun with little work or pressure.

Meador said he thought the classes could also be offered to pre-school youngsters and would stimulate young imaginations.

Commission secretary Phyllis Brewer said the commission on Wednesday instructed recreation director Richard W. Sholenberger to work with Meador in setting up the classes.

In other action, the commission agreed to solicit cost estimates on cleaning and gilding the town clock.

Innocent Plea To Burglary

Robert Miles Knox Jr., 18, of Terra Linda, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglary.

Preliminary hearing was set Wednesday for Oct. 26.

Knox and Donald Ray Simmons, 17, of Terra Linda, were arrested Tuesday after Fred M. Schalit of 751 Montecillo Road, Terra Linda, awoke in the middle of the night to find the youths in his home.

Simmons was booked into Marin Juvenile Hall.

NO MORE MOWING LAWNS

The Shelter Ridge project will include 187 units with six different styles to choose from. Density will be about four townhouses per acre, and 85 per cent of the site's 41 acres will be devoted to natural open spaces and landscaped greenbelt areas. Landscaped common areas will include meandering paths and miniparks separated from vehicular traffic. All outside areas are maintained for you by the Shelter Ridge Homeowners Association.

FUN AND GAMES

Your automatic family membership also entitles you to use of the recreation center clubhouse, game rooms, swimming pools, sundecks, tennis courts and saunas.

G.E. KITCHENS

Shelter Ridge units will be both one and two story, with sizes ranging from two to three bedrooms. Each home will have cedar-shingled roof, fireplace, private deck or patio, wall-to-wall carpeting, and kitchen with formica cabinets and counters and G.E. appliances. Underground cable television connections will be available.

COMMUTER'S PARADISE, WITH PRIVACY

The development has excellent freeway access, yet is sufficiently removed from traffic and commerical areas to provide a sense of privacy. It is within easy traveling distance of shopping areas, schools, churches, golf courses and numerous outdoor recreation areas. Driving to Golden Gate Bridge, takes about 7 minutes.

THE SPOUSE GAP

More On Marriage Drama's Second Act

(Condensed from the book, "The Spouse Gap")

By ROBERT LEE and MARJORIE CASEBIER

As the second act of the marriage drama continues to unfold, we confront complications aggravated by the middlescent malaise. Our spotlight now turns to sex as we look with candor at the sex life of middle-aged couples.

Since the bond of marriage admits its lovers to the basic ritual of intimate sexual life, this aspect of wedded life frequently raises complications and crises of its own. To the extent that a couple's sex life is a kind of barometer for their marriage as a whole, it is appropriate to consider it as the focus for much of the suspense in the marriage drama. "Facing it like it is" always carries with it the suspense of wondering how it will all turn out. And nowhere, perhaps, are there greater attendant feelings of anxiety, frustration, excitement, ecstasy, and anticipation than in the sexual side of marriage during middle age. Sexuality may contribute to the development of the well-made marriage or add misery to the growing spouse gap.

IF THE MARRIAGE is out of kilter, then the sex life of the partners will reflect that lack of zest and spice. The dangers of the middlescent malaise often threaten the marriage in such a way that the couple are reluctant or unable to relate on the sexual level at all. Difficulties of this kind hasten the spouse-gap crisis.

Their poor sex life reveals other hostilities and reasons of frustration toward each other. A familiar figure is the wife who complains that her husband expects her to be nice to him in bed on Saturday night after ignoring her all week — "all he wants from me is sex." Thus sexual incompatibility can be a cause of marital failure, or a result of it, or an accompanying symptom of the general marital malaise.

There is a story about a couple who had been married for almost 20 years and were experiencing the spouse gap during middlescence. A typical morning at breakfast found the husband and wife deeply engrossed in reading the morning newspaper without any conversation. Suddenly the husband peered over the top of his part of the paper, reached across the table to his unsuspecting wife, and wham! he slapped her across the face, saying, "That's for being such a lousy lover." Then he went back to reading his newspaper. Suddenly from across the table the wife reached out and wham! she slapped her husband across the face and said, "That's for knowing the difference."

PROBABLY THE basic general answer to the question of sexual complaints rests in the simple fact that any human activity can be used by men and women for destructive as well as for constructive and creative ends. The more delicate and intimate the expression of a relationship, the more likely it is to fall prey to manipulation and misuse. The sex act is the most intimate of all human relationships, with an unspoken language which richly expresses a host of emotional states of being. Through that language we can convey deep love and a desire for total closeness. But we can also convey fear, hatred, and impulse to punish or control, as well as many other such abuses. The very power of the sex drive makes it a viciously effective weapon. Many spouses, therefore, can twist sex to control or punish the partner, perhaps unconsciously but just as completely as if it were planned.

Of course, the various problems of the middlescent malaise form a vicious circle in realtion to sexual functioning. For instance, the burden of business worries weighs heavily on the libido. One man avoided sexual relations with his wife when he was unable to find work, saying he "felt shriveled." Another man brought on a self-induced impotence because he was failing in his business and did not want to assume adult male responsibilities.

It is apparent that one of the primary aids to the sexual rehabilitation of the man in the throes of his climacteric crisis in an understanding and reassuring wife. The best prescription is "TLC" — tender, loving care.

SEXUAL RELATIONS in middle age can become an important springboard into the wider vistas of human meaning. It can grow into maturity and meaning to rekindle the incendiary powers of love. Bertrand Russell expresses this beautifully in his autobiography:

"I have sought love, first, because it brings ecstasy — ecstasy so great that I would often have sacrificed all the rest of life for a few hours of this joy. I have sought it, next, because it relieves loneliness — that terrible loneliness in which one shivering consciousness looks over the rim of the world into the cold unfathomable abyss. I have sought it, finally, because in the union of love I have seen, in a mystic miniature, the prefiguring vision of the heaven that saints and poets have imagined. This is what I have sought, and though it might seem too good for human life, this is what — at last — I have found."

Suspense of this kind within the marriage-life drama is an experience to which we might all aspire. For Russell, in the long run, all was found and nothing lost in his sense of the sustaining power of love and the goodness of human sexuality. And he made his observations long after he passed middle age!

Pants Will Move Back Into The Sports Scene

BEVERLY HILLS, (UPI) — Pants, worn in recent years to full dress balls and white house weddings, move back into the sportswear field next spring.

"Pants are far from out," Mr. Blackwell told fashion editors attending the California fashion creators 21st national press week here, but now they've become a fashion classic for daytime wear at the office or shopping, and at night at home or the country club.

For spring and summer 1972 there was a trend back to the dress or blouse and tailored skirt for evening wear. And the hems for night were long —to the ankle or the shoe.

"Women are comfortable in the long skirts," said Michael Calderon, who designs for S. Howard Hirsch, "because their legs have been covered in pants for so long."

THE MORE casual pants, both fitted and flared, had a menswear look, and many sportswear firms showed them with a wide, wide cuff.

Topping the trousers were jackets —safari coats, battle jackets, crop jackets, cardigans, and blazers, blazers blazers and more blazers.

Casa Di Cole had a blazer in poppy-colored tablecloth plaid in texturized polyester, worn over cuffed pants with a zip front.

KORET OF California had white seersucker blazers with a red or blue pinstripe, worn over white pants, and madras seersucker blazers over pants or pleat front skirts.

BLAZERS were also worn over hot pants or the ankle-length skirts that Fleischman-USA called bistro skirts.

Michael Calderon showed belted jackets over front-button long skirts for evening or daytime entertaining.

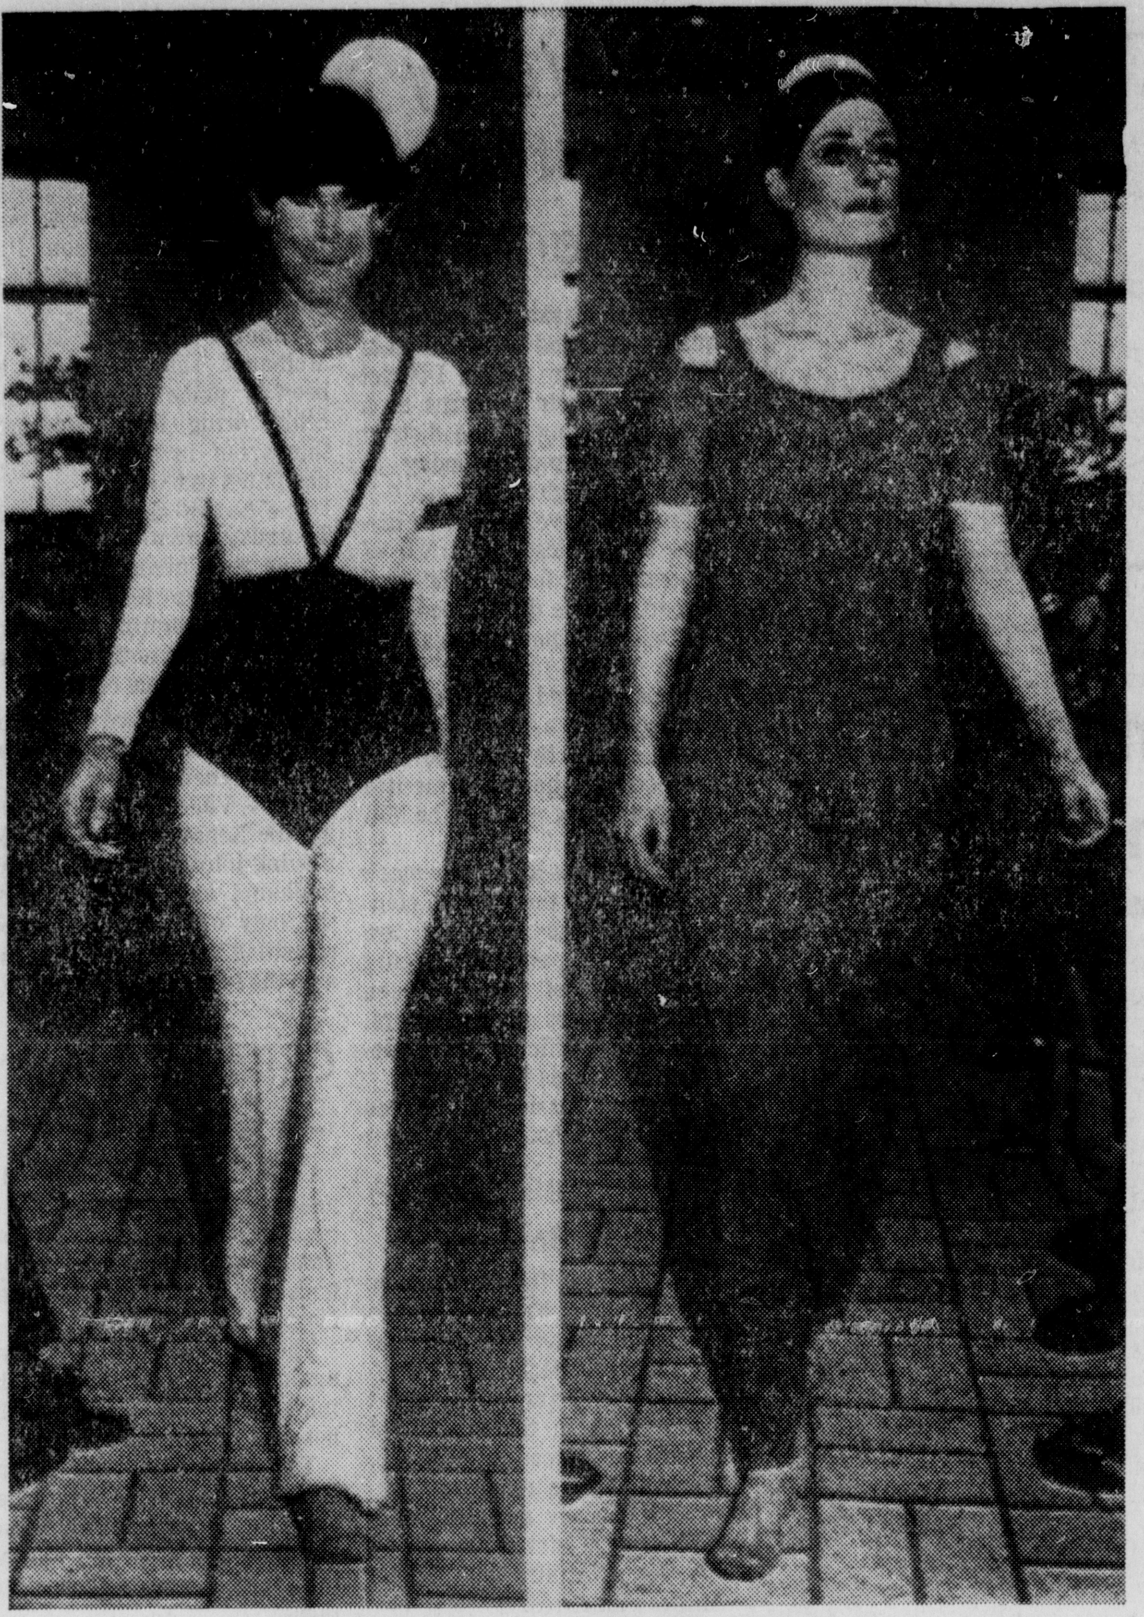
Calderon also had a striking army green chino ankle-length shirtwaist with a shirttail hem, similar to the St. Tropez shirts White Stag showed with appliqued sea gulls, anchors and ships on the front. White Stag used terry cloth in popsicle colors to make slacks and shorts, as well as beach cover-ups.

The firm also used corduroy in in spring colors in jackets and pants.

Slip Dress Carried One Step Further

The slip dress, one of the big looks from Paris and Rome fall couture collections, has been carried one step further for spring by Italian ready-to-wear designer Walter Albini, who has designed the slip jacket.

According to Women's Wear Daily, Albini's Misterfox collection, which will be shown Sunday in Milan, will feature a white pique slip jacket worn with a long black, bias striped, cotton skirt.



THE T-SHIRT GROWS UP

Fashion leader Rudi Gernreich believes the T-shirt and sleeveless undershirt will make it to fashions' front ranks come spring. In a knitwear collection he showed Tuesday in New York are (left) a jumpsuit with Bikini shapes appliqued on them and (right) a sleeveless T-shirt worn over the sleeved kind in contrasting colors to emphasize the layered look. HOUSE POST

Try Will Be Made In Texas

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A pretty blonde 28-year-old Republican is planning to go against the Texas Democratic pros and run for the state legislature next year.

She is Kay Bailey, press secretary to Mrs. Anne Armstrong, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee. She is quitting the Washington scene in December to begin her campaign.

Miss Bailey, who comes from La Marque, a small town outside of Houston, covered the Texas Legislature as a journalist before joining Mrs. Armstrong's staff. She also received her law degree from the University of Texas in 1967.

"I HAD been thinking about it before I took this job," she said. "I'll be running for the House from a new district. A lot of people back home encouraged me. I'm really excited. I've got some Democratic support as well."

She said she feels the Texas legislator should "be a higher caliber person," and added: "I'd like to get better people interested in the legislature."

So far there are only two women in the legislature, one in the House and one in the Senate —both Democrats.

"My real main aim is to get the legislature upgraded," she said.

She is no big women's liberationist, asserting: "I believe in equal rights for women but I like being protected.

"I just believe in a place for women that's different from men," she explained.

SHE INTENDS to carry on a door-to-door campaign to meet people. "I think its effective and necessary," she said.

"I'll do every kind of speaking engagement that I can," she said.

As a Republican, Miss Bailey is under no illusions that her party is going to make big gains in Texas territory. But she said: "I really believe in a two-party state. I want to help make the Republican party at least a forceful minority."

"We are not responsible in our budgeting and I also will campaign to hold taxes down," she said, in outlining her view of the issues.

"I'm really optimistic about my chances," she said. "I plan to work hard."

HER PARENTS, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey, are supporting her too. "But they're a little bit afraid," she said. "They know it's a tough world."

She is not going into politics for the money. She checked out the salary of a House member —$4800 a year, which she said is a "whopping $400 a month." So she plans to practice law on the side.

One thing she probably will get if she goes to the State House in Austin is a good press. She covered many stories with the reporters on the scene and says—"they are my friends."

'Black Identity' Program Topic

"Black Identity" will be the program at 8 p.m. Thursday in the "Search for Identity" series sponsored by the Marin Jewish Community Center and the Young Women's Christian Association at Edna Maguire School in Mill Valley.

Speaker will be Wallace K. Sheppard, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority, who will discuss his experiences with Marin institutions and what needs to be done to help them relate to people.

Reservations are made through the YWCA or the Jewish Community Center, both in San Rafael.

Foundation Will Salute Volunteers

By MOLLY MARIN

Members of the Marin Regional Council of the San Francisco Symphony Foundation will attend the sneak preview Wednesday of the renovated Stanford Court on Nob Hill, where a 5:30 to 7 p.m. cocktail-reception for over 200 workers will salute the foundation's 17th annual membership drive.

Champagne iced in wheelbarrows and eight-foot hero sandwiches served by "hard hats" in white gloves and overalls will carry out the party's building motif.

In addition to entertainment by the New San Francisco Jazz Band under the leadership of Symphony Foundation board member Dr. Charles Eberle of Belvedere, guests will meet orchestra members and see the debut of the foundation's first color television spot featuring conductor Seiji Ozawa in rehearsal.

A TRIP to Europe was the surprise birthday gift for Elizabeth Banning Davies planned by her husband, Charles P. Davies, in September.

Elizabeth and Charles left their Indian Valley Ranch home to arrive in London for her birthday dinner. Elizabeth, a former Marin County Parks and Recreation commissioner and a member of the American Interior Designers, raved about the beautiful flowers this time of year in Europe as they toured London, Paris, Vienna, Rome and Madrid. Before leaving London for Paris they attended the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra concert at Royal Albert Hall.

At each stop they spent one day in the country and in Paris they made a trip to the Fountainbleu Forest. Vienna was a "first" for them . . . "We longed to see the Vienna Woods of Schubert, Mozart, Hyadn and Beethoven, and it seemed unreal in following their footsteps, Elizabeth says. "My interest being park oriented, I was stunned to learn that these woods were to have been sold in 1870 to a timber syndicate which would have cleared the woods of timber." She added. At the last moment one man was successful with his flaming speeches and convincing appeals and the sale was cancelled, she learned.

On the same day they left Madrid they were met in San Francisco by friends, Mmes. Wilbur Tapscott and Jerry Kievenaar and returned to their Novato home.

WHEN JIMMY Allen Folkner Jr. was baptized at all Saints Lutheran Church in Novato on Sunday, five generations were in attendance at the baptism, but the baby's father was unable to attend as he is serving in Vietnam.

Attending the ceremony were the baby's mother, Mrs. Jimmy Folkner, and his grandmother, Mrs. Richard E. Hobbs, both of Novato; Mrs. Jud Siercks, his great grandmother and Mrs. A. M. Anderson, his great, great grandmother, both of Landa, N.D. Jimmy wore a christening dress made by his great great grandmother and first worn by his great grandmother.

THE ALFRED Patricks of San Rafael became parents of their first child, a son named David Adam, on Oct. 11. David's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Emile Patrick and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Campbell, all of Novato.

NEWLYWED MR. and Mrs. Carl H. Allen Jr. are living in Tiburon after a wedding trip to Maui in Hawaii. The bride, the former Fran Spiking, is a stewardess instructor for United Airlines and her husband is attending Hastings School of Law. They were married at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church, with the bridegroom's father, Judge Carl H. Allen of San Francisco officiating with the Rev. David Jacobsen.

AT HOME in San Rafael are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lautsch, who have returned from their wedding trip to Carmel. The former Linda Thomson and Ernest Lautsch were married Oct. 2 at St. Rita's Church in Fairfax and greeted guests afterward at a reception at Peacock Gap Country Club.

Tim Frost Is Wed To Miss Crosbie

Marriage vows were exchanged by Laurel Crosbie of Oakland and Charles Whitfield (Tim) Frost of Belvedere last night at the Piedmont Community Church in Piedmont.

A reception followed at the Officers Club at Treasure Island Naval Station.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert R. Crosbie of Oakland, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Frost of Belvedere are the parents of the bridegroom. He is the grandson of Mrs. Charles W. White of San Francisco.

The bride's sister, Mrs. John Gaston of Berkeley, was the matron of honor. Celinda Tabucchi of San Francisco was the bridesmaid.

Kenneth A. Frost Jr. of El Cerrito was best man for his brother, and R. Blair Evans and Robert and Scott Crosbie, the bride's brothers, all of Oakland, ushered.

Laurel is a graduate of Skyline High School in Oakland and the University of California. She also studied at the University of Padua in Italy and did graduate work at Hayward State College, where she obtained the teacher's credential.

Tim is a graduate of Redwood High School and studied at the Schiller Gymnasium in Preetz, West Germany. He was graduated from the University of California and attended the University of Goettingen, in Goettingen, Germany. He received the master's degree from Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University in Medford, Mass., and is now an ensign in the Navy.

The couple will travel to the East Coast on their wedding trip, and will live in Charleston, S.C.

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Parent's Reasoning On Trip, Money Is Familiar 'Cop-Out'

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

Two years ago my parents said I could go on a cross-country trip to visit friends if I earned my own money. I helped elderly people, mowed lawns, got a paper route, did odd jobs and even saved some of my birthday money. Now I've got a carry-out job at a market, so I'll have enough saved by next summer.

But last night I mentioned my plans and they said "Absolutely not!" When I asked why, they wouldn't answer. — HOW COME?

HELEN'S ANSWER
DEAR HOW:

Your folks may tave taken the easy way. Believing you'd never save the money for the trip, they resorted, perhaps, to ā familiar cop-out: "If you want it, earn it!"

Now that you have, they should either keep their word, or come up with a solid reason for backing down. — HELEN

SUE'S VIEWS
DEAR HOW COME:

Parents sometimes forget their promises because they have to make so many.

Here's a suggestion that often works: When your folks say "yes" to a long-range plan (which they may figure will "go away" before they need to face it), keep bringing it up in the conversation, like very casually, every day or so. (Parent psychology, get it?)

This reminds them that you're really counting on it, and you think they're great for cooperating.

It might even work for your next summer's cross-country trip. After all, you've got eight months to prove that if you can earn the money, you're mature enough to spend it wisely — especially since they thought so two years ago.

NOTE FROM HELEN:

Hm-m-m-m . . . So that's why our not-quite-definite trip to Hawaii just "happens" to pop up in the family conversation every day or so.

. . . The things a mother learns when she writes a column with her teen-age daughter!

LAST WORD FROM SUE:

. . .Me and my big mouth!

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I've been seeing this boy for a year. He's also been seeing at least one other girl — maybe two — but for his "needs" only. The way he talks about them, they're just dogs to him.

He respects me and says he loves me. We've never gone further than we should. Once he mentioned marriage, and an hour later he said, "Nobody's going to tie me down!"

I'm 22 and ready for a husband. If I just wait patiently do you suppose he'll decide for True Love? — W.C.

P.S. He's 20.

HELEN'S ANSWER
DEARW.:

They say patience is a virtue and virtue is its own reward. Which in your case might mean that all you'll get for your patience is a lot more waiting!

I think this "boy" is too young for you — and not just in years.

SUE'S VIEWS
DEAR W.:

The guy sounds like the Sultan type to me. Get out of his "harem" while you're still just a visitor.

Sympathy For Fat Persons

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fat is good and misunderstood if one is to place credence in Hippocrates' Aphorism 35. To wit:

"In all maladies, those who are fat about the belly do best. It is bad to be very thin and wasted there."

Dr. George V. Mann, cites the aphorism in a report title "Obesity, the Nutritional Spook." He sympathizes with contemporary men and woman plagued by experts, professional and otherwise, who view obesity as a moral issue.

He reminds that obesity has some uses that are often forgotten. These include: Flotation, flirtation, starvation and insulation.

Yes. Fat helps to keep one afloat, helps to keep one alive during periods of starvation as when no food is available and one lives off one's fat, stored calories, helps insulate in cold weather and, where placed in certain ways on a female, leads to flirtation.

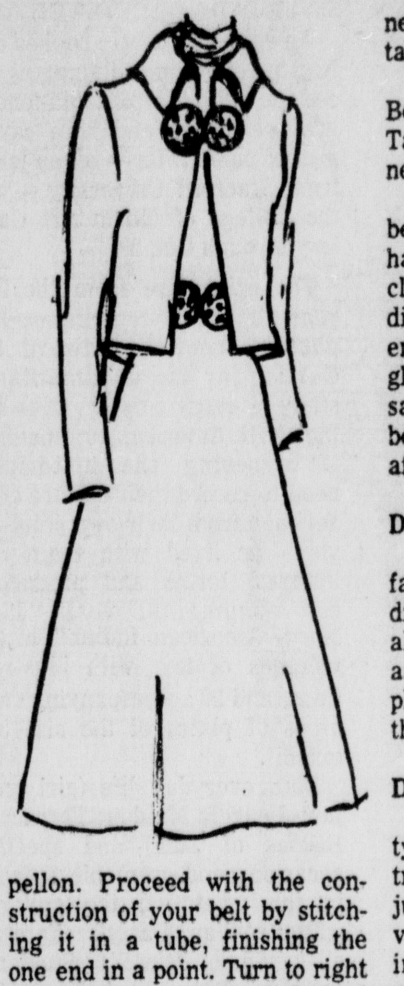
Buckles Are Becoming Big On Today's Fashion Front

By EUNICE FARMER

Buckles are the latest accessory in fashion importance. We see buckles everywhere, and they can completely change the appearance of a dress. In one of the European magazines I read for new ideas, there was a use for buckles that I would like to pass on to you.



When you make one of those little jackets for a dress-jacket combination, many times they are not closed with the conventional buttons. Why not use a duplicate of the buckle from your dress for a dramatic closing of the jacket. It ties the whole thing together, and the look is new and different. Why not try it?

One of the most worthwhile and informative experiences I have ever had was on a recent trip to New York, where I spent a few hours at the Pellon research laboratory. In this spot many types of interfacings are tested in every possible type of application. These are done primarily for the manufacturers' benefit, but I learned a lot to pass on to you.

The most exciting to me was the way a contour belt could be made from a straight piece of knit fabric in a matter of seconds.

You must begin by cutting the belt on the cross-grain of the fabric. First, press the web-like fusible that is attached to paper, to one half of the width of the belt, eliminating the seam allowance. Next, remove the paper and fuse to a lightweight piece of bias, non-woven pellon. Proceed with the construction of your belt by stitching it in a tube, finishing the one end in a point. Turn to right side and top stitch if desired about 1/2 inch from the outer edges.

Now, the magic, place with the wrong side up on your pressing board, curve gently as you press firmly in the shape of a contour belt. Proceed until you have completed the belt area. You can go back and repress again if you didn't get the correct curve. It is simply beautiful, and a very flattering type belt for those of us who need a little slimming advantage.

MRS. STEPHEN York, New Bedford, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"My sewing career is just beginning. With a new baby, I have been making lots of baby clothes. Here's a little tip I discovered that might help other beginners. I put a little white glue on the cut edges of all my satin ribbons used for ties and bows. They never ravel even after many washings."

DEAR EUNICE,

When I use the press-on interfacing, it seems that I have difficulty in keeping the material from stretching out of shape as I press the interfacing in place. Is there a special trick to this?

MARY R.

DEAR MARY R.,

Yes, applying the press-on type interfacing can be a little tricky because the iron doesn't just slip over it. If you're not very careful, the section to be interfaced can be distorted completely. We use the expression "touch baste" when applying this type of interfacing.

First, in most cases, you will cut away the seam allowance on the interfacing before application to avoid the extra bulk in the seams. Then, position it carefully and touch the tip of the iron to it in several places over the entire area, this is what I refer to as "touch basting". This will hold the interfacing in place until you can proceed with the normal application.

To those who constantly write that the press-on type interfacing pulls off either during construction, wearing or cleaning, it simply was not applied with the proper heat. If it was, it wouldn't pull apart because the proper fusing makes this impossible.

It is always best to pretest any application of this type because the type of fabric can make such a difference. Where the fabric does not permit excessive heat, you will have to rely on a different type of interfacing. You simply can't use this product halfway and expect good results.

Mrs. Gage To Top GOP State Post

I-J Special Report

FRESNO — Mrs. William P. Gage of Belvedere has been elected to one of the top posts of the California Federation of Republican Women at the federation's 17th biennial convention here.

Mrs. Gage was chosen Northern California vice-president of the federation, which also has vice-presidents for central and Southern California.

Mrs. Harry Umhey of Los Angeles was elected president.

Mrs. Gage is a director, parliamentarian and bylaws chairman of the Marin Federated Republican Women and is president of Marin's California Lambda Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians. She and her husband, a retired chemical engineer, are parents of two grown sons and reside at 12 Eucalyptus Road.

Bound Over To Superior Court

Carol Ann Daenzer, 28, of Corte Madera, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on two felony counts and one misdemeanor count of passing bad checks.

She is to be arraigned in superior court Oct. 27.

She was arrested Sept. 28 on a warrant charging her with passing a series of bad checks in Corte Madera during July.

Similar charges are pending against her in San Mateo and Orange Counties, according to police.

Standard Fined For Oil Spill

RICHMOND (UPI) — For the second time in less than a month, Standard Oil of California has been fined $1,000 for spilling oil into San Francisco Bay.

The fine was levied for a 10-gallong spill which occurred in July when a company employee had trouble with a valve on an oil truck.

On Sept. 30, Municipal Judge Charles Baldwin fined Standard and placed the company on two years probation for a spill which occurred July 18.

12 Selected To Assembly At School

The 12 winners for the San Marin High School representative assembly for this school year have been announced by Asst. Principal William M. Stiveson.

The assembly consists of three candidates at large and three from each of the three classes, he said. This year, the three representatives at large were all seniors. They were those receiving the largest number of votes. There were 35 candidates running Tuesday — 21 seniors, eight juniors and six sophomores.

Voting was done before school, during the noon hour and after school. There were 324 votes cast out of the 916 enrolled, or 35 per cent, Stiveson said.

San Marin High School does not release the number of votes cast for individual candidates because it might cause hard feelings, Stiveson said.

Joyce Beedle, Daniel L. Connell and Wendy Putnam were elected from the junior class. They won over Stacey Crosby, Cindi Duncan, Rori Giannini, Liz McFarland and David Milano.

Drake Delzell, Kenneth Kassenbrock and Ann Sorensen were elected by the sophomore class over Aletha Conett, Liz Hamon and Joe Marcum.

ART REVIEW

Gallery At College Of Marin Has Outstanding Indian Show

By ADA GARFINKEL

An easy way to get hooked on North American Indian art is to see the exhibit of 20 sepia-toned gravure prints and rare samples of handcrafts — all on loan from Stanford University — at the College of Marin Art Gallery through Oct. 29.

The prints are from the 23-year (1900-1923) compilation by photo-journalist, Edward S. Curtis, for his documentary study of every existing tribe on the North American continent.

Foreseeing the historical need to record their culture and heritage from their own point of view, he lived with them on intimate terms and produced his monumental work "The North American Indian" in 20 volumes of text with illustrations, and 20 accompanying volumes of plates of the size on exhibit.

Both everyday life (girl and jar; Jicarilla Maiden; Terraced Houses of Zuni) and special occasions and cremonies occur in the prints on the gallery walls: "War Party's Farewell"; "Snake Priest"; "Sundancer"; "Blackfoot Tipis"; "Navaho Medicine-Man". An interesting annotation to "A Zuni Governor" reads: "This portrait may well be taken as representative of the typical Pueblo physiognomy." One is captured by the presence and dignity with which these early Americans are pictured.

Gallery director Ann Jack has done a handsome installation of the artifacts. Using various enclosed, free-standing and wall cases, she has placed the rare potteries and baskets on beds of sand. For the silver jewelry and beadwork, her choice has been flat and sloped clear shelves which allow close observation of intricate design and facture.

Basketry and pottery were the North American Indian's foremost crafts. A rare example is the large Apache grain-storage basket showing an unusual combination of human and animal figures as design. And the Pomo Indians of Northern California wove finely-worked small baskets decorated with brilliant feathers. The one on display is a cherished "wedding basket." When wither one of the couple died, the basket was destroyed.

Potters used the coil method rather than the wheel, and a sample of this is the rare "corrugated" ware dated 1,000 A.D. Another, the striking black-and-white Zuni "heart-line" decorated water jar was supposed to direct the hunter's bow to the vital area for the kill.

Among the more unusual usage of beadwork are the Chest Piece and Neckband used by the Sioux Indians, and several ceremonial items, such as "A Medicine Bundle" and a "Peace-pipe Bag" from (respectively) the Plains and the Cheyenne Indians.

While basketry and pottery were "women's work", silverwork — jewelry making learned from the Spanish during the mid-1800s — was for men only! And the craft was passed from father to son.

Jewelry became a means of exchange — like money — and were often forfeited to local trading posts. However, some interesting samples of Zuni, Navaho, and Hopi work (both "tourist" and non-tourist types) are in the College exhibit.

Gallery hours during which the exhibit may be seen are Monday through Friday, from 8-5, and from 6:30-10 p.m.

$163,000 For Beach Development

A federal grant of $163,000 is just about assured so that McNear Beach can be fully developed with utilities and picnic facilities by next year, Marin's director of parks and recreation reported yesterday.

Pierre W. Joske said he received word from State Sen. Peter H. Behr that Marin's application for the federal grant had been approved by the state and was forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

The federal grant will be mated by $163,000 in county funds for the $366,000 needed for Phase Two development at McNear Beach.

James Vande Weg, park development coordinator, said second-phase development includes the installation of 75 picnic tables, two acres of lawn and play areas, a sewer system, new restrooms and dressing rooms, shore protection, bicycle and pedestrian trails and landscaping.

The park is now closed for a $130,000 Phase One development, which includes paving the parking area, turfing, water supply and a path system.

The first phase should be completed in January. "We hope to complete most of Phase Two by next summer," Wande Weg said.

Just One Way To Bag A Deer

RENO, Nev. (UPI)—Some hunters will do anything to bag their deer.

Devon Warren was in the hills on opening day when he heard a shot and saw a deer running down the mountain, a bullet wound in its shoulder.

Warren grabbed his hunting knife, jumped on the deer and rode the animal 60 yards down the mountain, wrestled it to the ground and slit its throat.

The hunter who shot the deer arrived at the scene and said: "anyone who can ride a deer down a mountain deserves to have it."

You Only Do It Once
"WHERE COULD I GO DANCING BY MYSELF?"
"Every Friday night there is an Arthur Murray party which is for all students. You have the opportunity of meeting many new friends your own age and of using your dancing right away in a real fun atmosphere. You'll have the time of your life . . . even if you've never danced before. Even refreshments are free. By the way, you can also use the studio facilities to practice in."
"YOU'VE GOT TO BE KIDDING! WHAT CAN I LEARN?"
"Any of the popular dances of your choice: Fox Trot, Waltz, Rumba, Swings, Cha-Cha, Tango, Merengue, Samba - even the Bossa Nova."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Even Though Mild, Treatment Of Acne Strongly Recommended

Ninety per cent of adolescent boys and girls develop acne that varies in severity. It is difficult for teen-agers to avoid the disorder because the sex hormones are flowing freely and stimulating the oil glands in the skin to overproduce sebum. Unfortunately this occurs at a time when the youngster is trying to make a good impression.

Other skin changes narrow the openings of the oil ducts. As a result, the pores retain the greasy material. A small thin cap of dirt collects in the area, but acne lesions are caused more by internal conditions than from failure to wash the face often enough.

PIMPES DEVELOP when the plugged sebaceous glands become infected. Acne is the name given this combination of greasiness, blackheads and pimples. Some youngsters are bothered for a longer period than others, but the majority improve spontaneously as the body matures. Marriage does not cure acne and any improvement that takes place after the wedding is due to growing up.

Treatment is recommended even though acne is mild. These boys and girls are self-conscious and want a clear complexion. Therapy minimizes and lessens the residual scarring which is likely to occur when sebum accumulates and forms hard bumps under the skin that heal with scarring.

EARLY AND constant treatment with salves, along with proper diet, cleanliness, ample exercise and sleep will go a long way toward prevention of these obstructive lesions.

An experimental product not yet approved by the Food and Drug Administration is showing promise. It is called retinol (vitamin A acid) and has been found superior to two widely used acne remedies.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

THYROIDECTOMY

A.G. writes: Are there any changes in body function after the thyroid is taken out?

REPLY

The surgeon usually leaves a small amount of thyroid tissue. This may be enough to supply the body with its quota of thyroid extract. If not, signs of hypothyroidism develop, such as dry skin, slow pulse, puffiness of the face, and lack of pep and ambition. Thyroid tablets correct the situation and may be needed for life.

SINUS INFECTION

A reader writes: Can chronic ethmoiditis ever be cured?

REPLY

Yes — with medication. Drug therapy is effective if there is no obstruction and the nasal passageways are not being irritated by nosedrops, swimming, or allergy. Surgery is done when conservative measures fall.

HEAD SWIMMING

Mrs. B. writes: What causes my head to swim and my stomach to burp when I raise my head from the pillow every morning?

REPLY

God works in mysterious ways. Do you have car trouble?

WANING IMMUNITY

H.P. writes: I was vaccinated against smallpox as a child. Do I need it again?

REPLY

Yes, if you want to be protected. Immunity from smallpox vaccination begins to wane after three years.

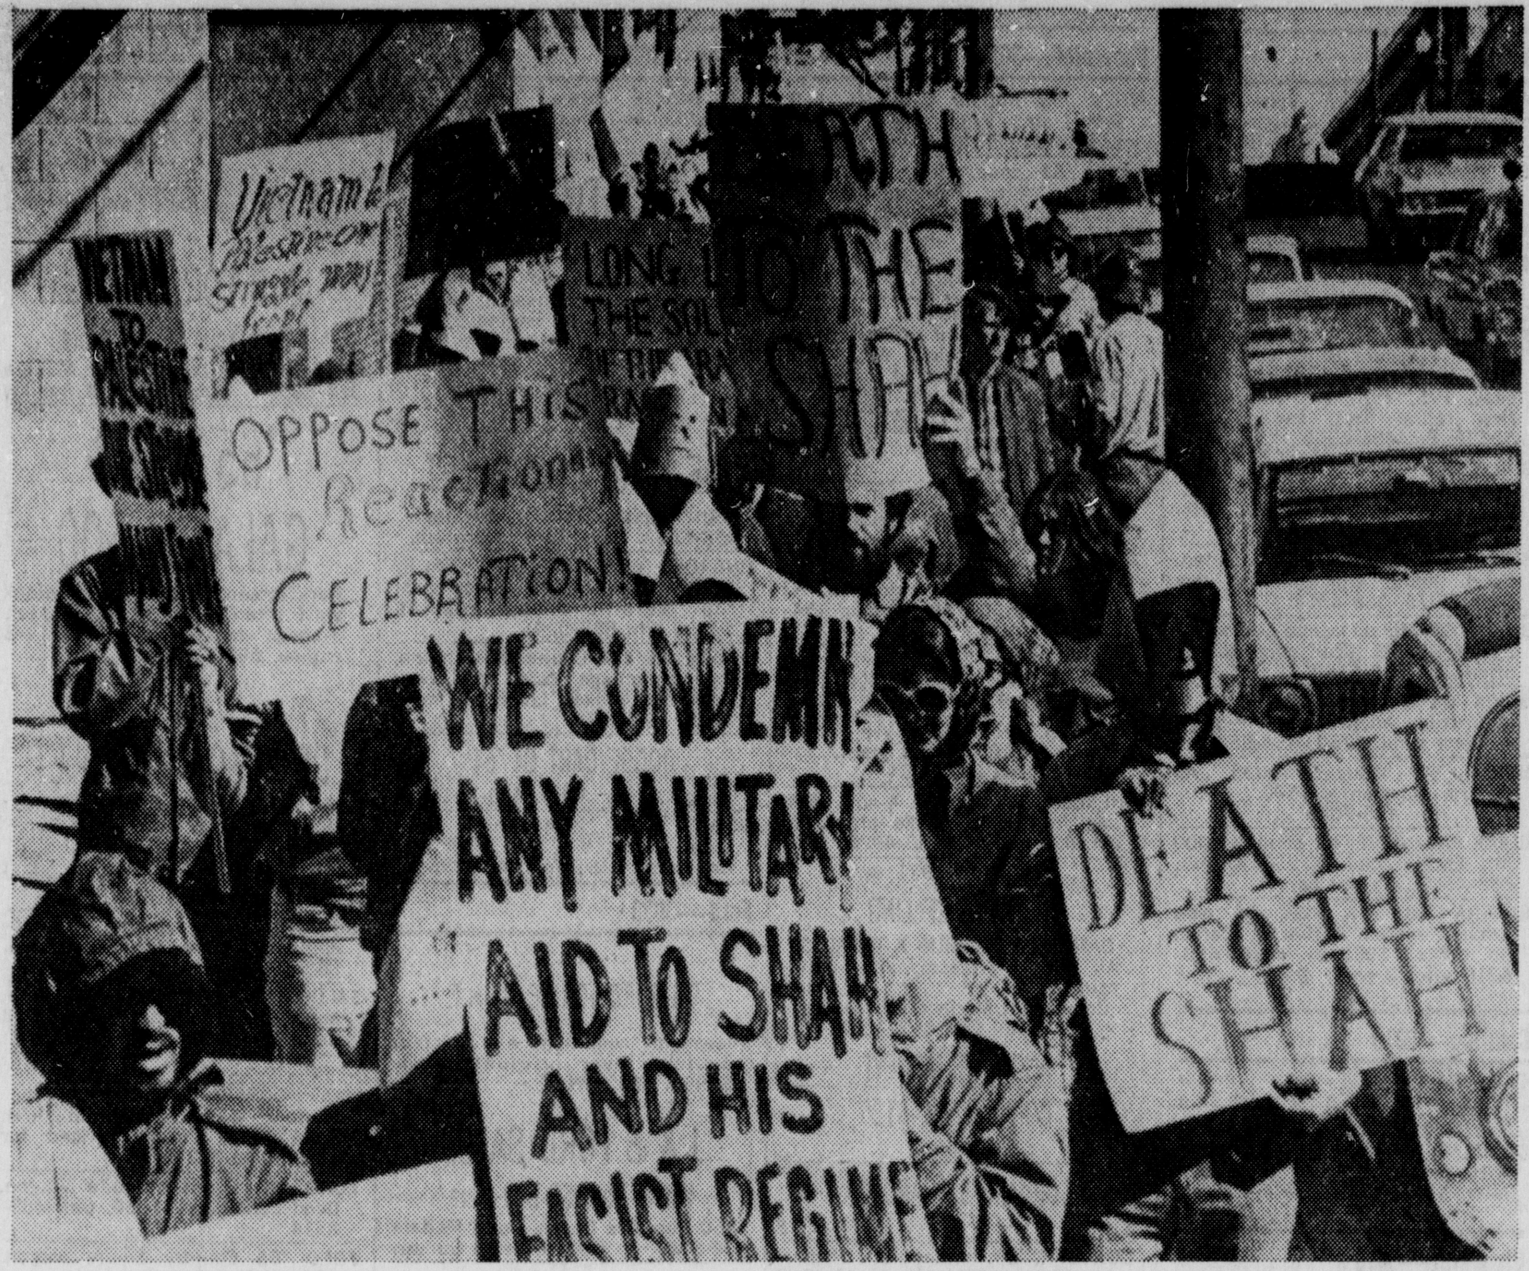
Cultural Enrichment Program Scheduled

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) —The Model Cities agency of Youngstown has selected Youngstown State University's Center for Urban Studies to direct the agency's cultural enrichment program there.

The program, a five-week intensive seminar involving 25 young persons, is designed to develop a greater awareness and pride in their cultural background.



MARCH ON BOMB-SHATTERED CONSULATE

Several hundred antimonarchist Iranian protesters march on San Francisco's shattered Iranian Consulate which was wrecked 12 hours earlier by a bomb. The students marched to the consulate yesterday after a rally sponsored by the militant Confederation of Iranian students. See story, page 1.

Cleaver's Wife Returns From Algeria; Plans A National Tour

BOSTON (UPI) — Kathleen Cleaver, the wife of black revolutionary Eldridge Cleaver, returned from two and a half years in Algeria Friday night and said her fugitive husband would sneak back into the United States "very soon" to help head "guerilla warfare."

Mrs. Cleaver, 26, who landed at Boston's Logan International Airport on a Swissair flight diverted from New York, was accompanied by a black woman who was handcuffed and taken into custody by FBI agents.

Mrs. Cleaver later identified the woman as Jessica Scott Weinrich, of Frankfurt, Germany. She said the FBI mistook the woman for Gwendylin Joyce Patterson, wanted for air piracy.

"I know Jessica and I know Gwen. She (Miss Patterson) is in Algiers. I saw her yesterday" just before leaving to return to the U.S., she told reporters outside the John F. Kennedy Federal Building where the woman was believed to have been taken.

Mrs. Cleaver, who returned with a two-year-old and a one-year old daughter born in Algeria, declined to say just when her husband, wanted in California for parole violation, would try to return to the U.S.

"I can't say, but it will be very soon. It's just a matter of waiting until conditions are favorable. It's just a matter of time," she said.

"There's only one way they can get back in and that is come in as guerillas and wage guerilla warfare,,' she said.

Wearing a beige turtle neck sweater and leather skirt and boots, Mrs. Cleaver said she was returning after 30 months in Algiers to make a speaking tour and to work "for revolutionary organization."

"I plan to speak in as many places as possible," she said, but added that no definite engagements had been made.

Mrs. Cleaver said she tried to stop FBI agents when they handcuffed the woman and took her from a U.S. Customs gate at the airport.

"We had a slight fight. I told them they had no right to handcuff her. They were pulling her one way, I was pulling her another," she said. "They told me if I didn't let go I could be charged with assault."

Bill Is Signed; Reverses Court On Access Rights

SACRAMENTO — A bill reversing a state Supreme Court ruling which gave legal access to private lands has been signed into law by Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke.

The measure (SB 504), introduced by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, and cosponsored by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, was submitted after the court ruled that private land open to public access for five years could remain open.

The bill had the support of the Marin Property Owners Association but was opposed by the Sierra Club.

The court ruling involved a dispute about access to an ocean beach at the mouth of the Navarro River in Mendocino County.

It was under that ruling that Marin conservationists had hoped to keep some of the county's undeveloped forest land and beach properties open to the public.

Although the measure does not guarantee public access to private property, after five years of use, supporters said it will free many property owners from fencing off their land in order to insure private title to the land.

Reinecke called it "a landmark measure that will allow private property owners to (voluntarily) open their lands to recreational use without facing the threat of losing title to the property."

Vassar Coed Files Suit Over Drugs

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI)—A petite coed sued Vassar College for $1 million Friday, claiming she flunked out because her roommate held marijuana parties and psychedelic gatherings and sang "with abandon all through the night."

The roommate, identified only as Pamela, "became a focal point of drug users on campus," Raymond Graber of West Hempstead, N.Y., charged in the suit filed on behalf of his brown-haired daughter Nancy, 20.

"Pamela insisted that the door from the corridor be kept open at all times when she was in the suite, even throughout the night. I was unable to shut my door to the noise and the haze of pot smoke in the corridor," the suit said.

The girl alleged that, when she complained to Mrs. Elizabeth M. Drouilhet, dean of residence at the former women's college which has since gone coed, she was told "open the window" if marijuana smoke bothered her. Prof. Robert F. Martin, a faculty member who lived in the dorm, said he was "powerless to act in drug matters," Miss Graber alleged.

As a result of sleeplessness brought about by the alleged drug activities, Miss Graber said she flunked out. She also charged she was unable to transfer to another college of her choice because Vassar refused to give her a recommendation.

A spokesman for Vassar said there would be no comment on the suit until the court papers reached the school.

Spectator Is Booted From Prison Round

The ejection of a female spectator from the courtroom marked an otherwise quiet Marin Superior Court session yesterday for six San Quentin inmates charged in connection with the Aug. 21 violence at the prison, in which three inmates and three guards died.

Little progress was made in the case as the inmates — again in the courtroom only one at a time — said they still had not obtained attorneys.

The session was repeatedly interrupted by an attorney, John Thorne, who said he was speaking as a friend of the court, until Judge E. Warren McGuire finally ordered him to sit down and stop interrupting.

A blond young woman in the last row of the room laughed at the exchange. McGuire ordered her out of the court and she left without further ado.

The judge continued the case to 9 a.m. Oct. 29 when he said, he would appoint attorneys if the inmates had not then arranged for their own.

Transfer Of Park Office Confirmed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—National Park Service Director George Hartzog confirmed Friday that the NPS Western Service Center here will close, and the office will be transferred to Denver with a sharp staff cutback.

Hartzog had said at least 90 employes in the center here would be fired if not transferred to Denver or if they refused to transfer.

But Friday, in a two-hour meeting with employes at the Federal Court Building here, he amended his position, saying anyone not transferred would be kept on the payroll if he elected to take a NPS opening elsewhere.

The service center employs about 300 planners, architects, and engineers who perform special services for the NPS.

Hartzog cited economy as the reason for the closure here.

Plan Advanced On Yacht Harbor

Conceptual designs for a development plan for the Sausalito Yacht Harbor have been approved by the Sausalito Community Appearances Advisory Board, Planning Director H. Eric Borgwardt reported.

The revised plans, submitted by architect Roland Mays, will now go before the planning commission which has been studying the development plan and recommending changes for the past several months.

The appearances advisory board also has approved plans for renovation of a building for Sasaki-Walker Associates Inc. at 2250 Marinship Way, according to the planning director.

Kaiser Blamed In Cancer Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A jury has awarded a woman cancer victim $300,000 in a suit against Kaiser Foundation doctors.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Hannlore Heilbrun, 46, San Francisco, was wheeled into court on a gurney to testify briefly during the six-day trial.

Her attorney, Gerald C. Sterns, said the doctors failed to properly diagnose cancer of the breast although she was under treatment from 1967 to 1970.

Lagoon Lock Bond Vote Is Approved

The Bel Marin Keys Community Service District Board has voted to go ahead with a special bond election in an attempt to raise money for a lock on the lagoon.

Secretary Betty L. Zoeller said that the board estimated that it would be for between $600,000 and $700,000. Tentative election date was set for Jan. 11.

The estimated cost of the lock if $456,000, with about $114,000 for contingencies and bond attorney, and possibly $130,000 for property purchase, she said.

The board awarded a $5,000 contract to Bresnan-Dalecio Inc. of San Rafael to construct a multi-use blacktop pad for two outdoor basketball courts at Montego Park.

It also accepted the resignation of Stanley C. Rakeman as maintenance man.

Eight To Seek College Posts

Eight College of Marin students have been nominated for six student government positions up for election Monday and Tuesday.

Only two positions, college center commissioner and sophomore men's representative, have contests.

Running for center commissioner are Janet Martinson and Delane Cochran while Will Devers and Tom Estudillo are competing for men's representative.

OF GOD AND MAN

Serious Illness Can Be Blessing

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

Serious illness can be a blessing.

I've been reading assurances to that effect in the Bible for many years. But on paper they sounded pretty far-fetched, and I guess I didn't take them very seriously. Now I know, from recent personal experience, that it really is so.

I'm not trying to suggest that a hospital is a jolly place to be. It isn't. But I never really expected it to be. What surprised me was the discovery that there are certain aspects of a heart attack which can invest the whole experience with good cheer, joyfulness, even a kind of zest.

The author of the 23rd Psalm glimpsed the basic reason, I think. When you walk through what is called the "valley of the shadow of death," your natural fear can be quite remarkably allayed by a strong awareness that God is with you.

It is important to realize that this phrase means exactly what it says: God is "with" you.

What He extends in an hour of real crisis is a sense of His presence — not magical protection from the natural consequences of your illness.

Neither the Bible nor the common experience of humanity offers us any ground for believing God will automatically intervene to spare from pain and death those who call upon him for aid. The noblest petitioner who ever lived, Jesus Christ, got no for an answer when he earnestly prayed that he might avoid the ordeal of crucifixion.

As Jesus once said, God allows the rain to fall impartially on the just and the unjust. He has bestowed on his creation a radical freedom. This freedom enables us to be men rather than puppets. But it also exposes the hardest-praying pietist and the most calloused unbeliever to precisely the same vicissitudes and accidents of an impartial order of nature.

So to say that God is with you when you enter the "valley of the shadow" doesn't mean you're assured of getting safely through. It simply means that in serious illness you can be aware of His presence and confident of his love to a degree not often attained in the peaceful and painless passages of everyday life.

This feeling that God is with you is a very wonderful thing. It does not merely comfort you. It gives you a new outlook, a different perspective on all your plans, problems, ambitions and worries. It liberates you — from fear, and anxiety, and petty ambitions.

The inner happiness, which sometimes is a strange fruit of illness, does not continue without interruption. Like all other human moods, it has its ups and downs. In cardiac cases particularly, there are periodic attacks of acute psychological depression, so familiar to doctors they are considered a normal progression of the disease.

But even in these intervals, I found my depressions were mainly at an intellectual-verbal level. I spoke sometimes quite gloomily and occasionally indulged in a bash of feeling very sorry for myself. But in hindsight, I realize that these transitory moods of depression never managed to shake what St. Paul (who had plenty of first-hand experience with pain and illness) referred to as "God" peace, which is far beyond human understanding."

No one can earn this peace. It is dispensed, thank God, quite without regard to one's just deserts. It is need, not righteousness, helplessness, not holiness, that makes it possible to receive this benison.

There are other reasons, too, why serious illness can be a blessing.

It teaches you how many really good, kind and loving people there are in the world—people who'll go to great ends to help you, for no reason other than their own warm compassion. It is good to be reminded how much sheer goodness there is among human beings—especially at times such as now, when we're all continually tempted into cynicism.

It helps, for example, to learn that most doctors and nurses, no matter what it is currently fashionable to say about them, really do care intensely and unselfishly about healing the sick.

It helps to find out, for sure, what I already had good reason to suspect—that the "heartless corporation" which employs you is in fact run by men with very big and generous hearts.

Finally, very far from least, it is nice to know that the girl you married 28 years ago meant all she said about "in sickness and in health," and that the son who seemed only yesterday a crazy kid has suddenly become a mature, thoughtful and responsible young man capable of taking over problems rather than causing them.

Synod Votes Pay Hikes For Leaders

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Despite vehement objections from some delegates, the United Presbyterian Church's Synod of the Golden Gate has approved a budget containing salary increases for headquarters executives.

Among the hikes approved during last weekend on a voice vote by 262 delegates to the synod was a "merit raise" paid the official who wrote national Presbyterian headquarters requesting $10,000 for the Angela Davis Defense Fund.

The $10,000 donation, which was eventually returned, caused a nationwide furor among Presbyterian lay groups.

Rev. Eugene Turner, of the synod's office of ethnic church affairs, who asked for the donation, received a raise to $17,115 annual in salary and housing plus $5,345 for "benefits and expenses."

Debate over the budget included disputes over the Angela Davis donation and over increases for executives at a time when many pastors receive only $6,000 or so a year.

Lecture-Dialogue Speakers Announced

Dr. James L. Sullivan, an executive with the Southern Baptist Convention, and Charles M. Schulz, creator of the comic strip, "Peanuts" will lead off the 1971-72 lecture-dialogue series at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary.

Sullivan, executive secretary-treasurer of the convention's Sunday School Board, will speak on Wednesday and Schulz will talk on Nov. 11.

In addition to eight lecture-dialogue series speakers scheduled, two agency leaders of the 11.7 million-member Southern Baptist Convention will speak. They are Dr. Foy Valentine, executive secretary of the Christian Living Commission, Nov. 18, and Dr. Baker James Cauthen, executive secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, Nov. 19.

On Dec. 8, Dr. Thomas Harris, a psychiatrist from Sacramento, will speak.

Dr. Claude Welch, Berg professor of religious thought at the University of Pennsylvania will lead off the series for the new year on Jan 12.

Other speakers in the series will be Dr. Langon Gilkey, professor of theology at the University of Chicago, Feb. 11; Dr. George E. Ladd, professor of theology at Fuller Theological Seminary, Pasadena, March 8; Rev. Culbert G. Rutenberger, professor of religion at the American Baptist Seminary of the West, Covina, April 12, and Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, May 10.

In addition to the dialogue speakers and agency chiefs, Dr. D. Manning Jackson, pastor of the El Bethel Baptist Church in San Francisco will speak on Nov. 9, and Dr. Browne Barr, current pastor of the First Congregational Church of Berkeley on Dec. 14.

IJ Church Page

Former Inmate To Be Series Speaker

Former San Quentin inmate Lawrence Baulch will be the speaker tomorrow in the fourth Sunday morning series on "Our Stake in the Prison Crisis" at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo.

Author of "Return to the World," Baulch served three terms in San Quentin and is currently head of Job Therapy, Inc., an organization fostering personal relationships between prisoners and those outside prison.

Rev. Byron Eshelman, former San Quentin chaplain, will lead discussion. The series, under Eshelman's leadership, will conclude October 31.

On Wednesday at 8 p.m. attorney Charles Garry will speak on "Is Equal Justice Possible in Our Courts?" in a special mid-week series which will conclude Oct. 27 with Arlo Smith, chief criminal deputy in the state Attorney General's office. The series is being moderated by former Superior Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr.

The two programs are part of the church's effort to bring a Christian perspective "to bear upon contemporary concerns," said Rev. John O. Najarian, church pastor.

GUEST — Rev. William A. Younger, an Assemblies of God Missionary to Malawi, Central Africa, will be guest speaker at tomorrow's 7 p.m. service at the Central Assembly of God, 517 D Street in San Rafael.

Science Writer To Talk Tomorrow Night

Alan Vaughan, science writer, will speak on "Spiritual Implications of Psychic Phenomena" at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the First Congregational Church on North San Pedro Road in San Rafael.

Vaughan, a founder of the Central Premonitions Registry in New York, has studied at parapsychological research centers in England, Holland and Germany.

Leadership Course Will Begin Monday

A six-week leadership course of Sunday school teachers will be offered beginning Monday at the Neighborhood Church of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Petaluma.

Classes for teachers, prospective teachers and youth group leaders will be given by Rev. Richard S. McMillan on Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Gargiulo Will Lead Bible Study

Joseph D. Gargiulo, Novato mayor and school administrator, will lead a four-month series on the Bible beginning tomorrow at the United Methodist Church in Novato.

The sessions will be held on Sundays from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. and will deal with the first five books of the Bible.

Gargiulo has 20 years' religious education experience and is former president of the Marin County Council of Churches.

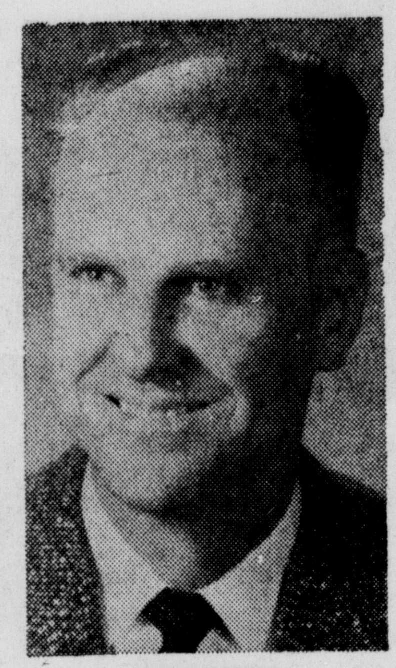
Witnesses Set Circuit Meeting

I-J Special Report

RICHMOND — More than 100 Jehovah's Witnesses from San Rafael are expected here next Friday, Saturday and Sunday for the semi-annual circuit assembly.

Key speakers of the conference will be Lyle E. Reusch, district minister for Northern California, and James L. Waddington, circuit supervisor.

The sessions will be held in the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.



BOB SMITH
To give two talks

Peninsula Pastor Will Give Talks

Bob Smith, associate pastor of the Peninsula Bible Church in Palo Alto, will be the guest speaker tomorrow at the 9:30 a.m. worship service of the Marin Covenant Church. He will be speaking on the theme "Saints Alive - Church Alive."

Following the morning service there will be a discussion of the message with adults and teenagers during the church school hour at 10:45 a.m.

Prior to joining the staff at Peninsula Bible Church, Smith was employed as an engineer for a research firm.

The two Sunday morning sessions with the congregation of the Covenant Church will conclude a three-day visit in Marin.

Beginning last night, Smith led an adult retreat for the congregation on the theme of "Saints Alive - Church Alive."

Mexico's famous San Francisco Church was established in 1524.

New Director Will Be Seated Tomorrow

SAN FRANCISCO (LC) — Lutheran Social Services of Northern California will celebrate its fifth anniversary and install a new executive director tomorrow.

Rev. Joseph A. Belgum formally will assume the agency's top post during an installation service at St. Mark's Lutheran Church, 1111 O'Farrell Street. The service begins at 3 p.m.

Belgum had served as executive director of Lutheran Social Services of North Dakota, with headquarters in Fargo, for the past 14 years.

The fifth anniversary celebration will follow at the Urban Center adjacent to St. Mark's.

Lutheran Social Services of Northern California was formed in 1966, bringing together the programs of Lutheran Child and Family Service and Lutheran Welfare Service of Northern California.

The new agency became the major social ministry arm in the northern portion of the state for the South Pacific District of the American Lutheran Church, the Pacific Southwest Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, and the California and Nevada District of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Lutheran Social Services of Northern California maintains its headquarters at 3208 16th Street, San Francisco. However, it has regional offices in Sacramento, Fresno, and Palo Alto.

The agency provides chaplaincy services for institutions, sponsors programs for family life enrichment, works with groups in community organization, counsels families and individuals in crisis situations, organizes various volunteer services, provides food and clothing in emergency cases, assists with the resettlement of immigrants to the U.S., and coordinates the gathering of clothing for overseas relief.

Faith Lutheran Adult Seminar Slated Tonight

Faith Lutheran Church of Terra Linda will offer the second in a series of four monthly adult evening seminars on the works of Teilhard de Chardin, at 7 p.m. today at the church.

Speaker for the evening's program, "Scientific Evolution and Religious Faith: A Search for an Integrated View to Life's Meaning," will be Dr. John Hopkirk, associate professor of biology at Sonoma State College.

Rev. Bliss W. Bellinger, pastor of Faith Lutheran, will be resource leader, presenting background on de Chardin, one of the leading theologians of the early 20th Century.

Science In Mind Lecture Wednesday

Dr. Jimmy Griffin will present a Science in Mind lecture at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. auditorium in San Rafael. His subject will be "Using Mind Power."

The PG&E facility is located at the corner of Third and Brooks streets.

All Faiths Church In Special Event

The Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera is hosting 26 youths and adults from 13 churches and communities in Northern California this weekend as part of its Lay Witness Mission.

The special witness program came to the forefront in 1961 when a group of Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal laymen visited a small Methodist church in Alabama. Since then the program has been used by more than 20 denominations throughout the nation.

The Corte Madera program began last night with a potluck supper. Group meetings, general sessions, and a farewell luncheon are on schedule.

Activities will conclude tomorrow with an evaluation of the program scheduled at 1 p.m.

Baha'i's To Observe Prophet's Birthday

The Baha'i Community of San Rafael will observe the 151st birthday of Bab, the prophet-herald of the group's faith, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Nura Samandari Loas, former pioneer of the Baha'i Faith in Mexico, will talk at a special meeting at 8 p.m. in the social hall of the First Methoidst Church of San Rafael.

What the boys do does something for the boys

So Junior gets on his bike and delivers the I-J to you. Big deal!

You may wonder what values a boy receives from doing this job. Money? Very definitely. Our boys are businessmen who know a dollar has two sides — work and reward.

But newspaperboys "earn" something else which parents and teachers consider is perhaps the most important kind of education: personal confidence and self-reliance . . . the feeling too, that their service is something genuine and needed by the community.

This comes gradually, day by day, as a boy realizes that this is his newspaper route, that he is the manager. He discovers that people are relying upon him, that punctuality and service are appreciated. He learns to manage time as well as money. Most important, he learns that even a boy has reserves of personal responsibility which increasingly develop as he draws upon them.

This is not random, hit-or-miss development. Supporting the youngsters is an unusual program of the I-J Circulation Department which provides guidance and training from men who understand a boy's needs and capacities. Junior always has an advisor to whom he can turn.

What the boys do, then, does something for the boys. And in turn does something for society. More than 800 I-J carriers prove it every day.

NATIONAL NEWSPAPERBOY
☆ DAY ☆
Today - October 16

800 I-J newspaperboys deliver that which lives only for a day — the news, the history of each 24 hours. Yet this "history", which will be entirely new tomorrow, is the strongest reinforcement of a free and informed society. It makes each boy's job important.

BULLDOG SURROUNDED — San Rafael High School fullback Mark Farrar was cornered last night by a bevy of visiting Redwood High School defenders in the Giants' 21-13 victory over the Bulldogs. Dan Young (65) was among those ready to pounce on Farrar in this sequence.

Redwood Holds On To Top San Rafael

Terrific 21-13 Win For Giants

By PAUL CANE

Redwood High School's Cinderella football team was about to turn into the proverbial pumpkin at the hands of San Rafael High last night, until Bob Fulton's last-minute goal-line interception helped the Giants hold onto an upset 21-13 decision in San Rafael.

Trailing 21-7 with seven minutes to go in the game, San Rafael drove 81 yards for a touchdown, and then recovered a Redwood fumble to move to the Giants' five-yard line, before a crucial penalty set the Bulldogs back. On third and goal from the 15-yard line with one minute remaining, San Rafael quarterback Dirk Gansloser fired over the middle, only to deliver Fulton's crucial interception.

Redwood's win was sparked by Mike Connor, who scored on touchdown runs of two and 45 yards, and by running mate Daryl Edralin. Connor rambled for 131 yards, while Edralin riddled the Bulldog linemen for 92.

Individually, however, Bulldog Scott Duncan really stole the show in defeat, breaking away for 187 net yards on 23 carries. Redwood coach Phil Roark cited Duncan as a "real outstanding back," but added that the Giants relied on "all 32 varsity team members," instead of having "a one-man offense."

Redwood, who hadn't scored first in any of its four games up to now, scored a touchdown late in the first quarter last night on an 82-yard drive, spearheaded by Connor's 45-yard TD burst. San Rafael mentor Bob Muster commented sadly, "Our biggest problem was that we had their runners on the hook and let them go." On Connor's run, Muster reflected, there were three or four tackles broken, which added up to disaster for the Bulldogs.

In the middle of the next quarter, San Rafael turned the mistake around, by driving 24 yards after blocking quarterback Bob Brown's punt. Dun-

Lutz In Stunner Over Rod Laver

COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — Tenth-seeded Bob Lutz of Tiburon scored his second upset in two days when he knocked Australia's Rod Laver out of the quarterfinals of the 17th round of the World Professional Tennis tour Friday.

Lutz, 24, needed 89 minutes to beat the Australian lefthander, 6-4, 7-6.

In another surprise young Jeff Borowiak of Los Angeles, playing in his first professional tournament, advanced to the semi-finals by beating Andres Gimeno of Spain, 7-6, 7-6.

Borowiak, 22, beat veteran Fred Stolle, 6-4, 6-3 on Thursday.

With the score 6-6 in the second set, and the tie breaker also at 6-6, Laver double faulted after dropping his racket. On Lutz' final serve, Laver lobbed back so weakly Lutz slammed it home easily.

In addition to beating Laver, the second seed, Lutz eliminated another Australian, eighth-seeded Roy Emerson, Thursday, 7-6, 6-2.

Late Touchdown Drops Marin, 16-9

By JIM SMITH

SANTA CLARA — An 18-yard touchdown pass from Craig Chelonis to Charles Chelonis to Charles Prior with five minutes remaining gave host West Valley College of Campbell a 16-9 win over College of Marin last night at Buck Shaw Stadium.

It was Marin's Camino Norte Conference opener.

"The offense moved the ball fairly well," said Marin's head coach Dick Read, "but we made some crucial mistakes. Our passing game was good; Bob Daniele threw real well."

Daniele didn't play safety or kick any extra points, but he did complete 10 passes out of 25 attempts, totaling 90 yards. Daniele provided Marin's only touchdown. With 53 seconds left in the third quarter, the ex-Terra Linda High School flanker took a Dave Knutson punt, sped up the sideline, broke three tackles, and flashed 70 yards for the score, to square the slate at the time at 9-9. However, John Loane's extra point attempt was blocked.

Loane had kicked a 33-yard field goal earlier in the quarter.

Down 16-9, with under a minute and one-half left in the game, the Tars got the ball due to a Leon Howard fumble recovery. Daniele found split end Neal Given for a first down; on the next play, he scrambled out of the pocket, netting another first down. After tossing to Bob Larson for another first down, Daniele found that five Viking pass defenders were one too many as West Valley's safety, Herb Hodgins, stole Daniele's last aerial, and hopes of a Tar victory. Other spark plugs for Marin were Neal Given with five receptions and Larry Walker who treaded through enemy lines for 83 yards rushing.

"I was pleased with our defense, they kept us in the ball game all the way, lauded Read, referring to the charing four times the Tars held off on own 15-yard line. Chris Fenton, who sought and destroyed backs and ends all night, Leon Howard, and Mike Phillips, who each intercepted a pass, shared the defensive limelight.

"My kids came to play football," Read said, "but we beat

Novato Hornet Gridders In 9-6 Win Over Vallejo

"We just suffered a big letdown," Al Scott said today after his Novato High School footballers narrowly defeated an underdog Vallejo team last night, 9-6 on the loser's field.

"That and the fact they played well made it pretty close," Scott added.

The Hornets (4-1) displayed a fine defense. Scott explained that tackle Russ Weklych, middle guard Rick Reis and end Jeff Eisenhauer "all played outstanding. Safety Tom Conklin also performed well."

After a lackluster first half highlighted only by a Bob Cooper 37-yard field goal, the Hornets opened up in the second half to control the ball. However, two fumbles crippled deep penetrations into Apache territory.

The turning point took place in the fourth period when Weklych blocked a Vallejo quick kick attempt; the Hornets picked up the ensuing 35 yards in four plays with quarterback Marty Moroski sneaking over from the one. The big calls in the drive included a Moroski to Terry Johnson pass covering 13 yards and an 11-yard run by Leo Magers, who totaled 142 yards on 16 carries. Magers effort, coming off a quick pitch, placed the ball on the Apache one.

"We have a tougher time with these non-league teams.

'New' Warriors Whip Celts, 97-75

BALTIMORE (UPI) —What difference do newcomers Cazzie Russell and Jim Barnett make for the Golden State Warriors?

It turned out to be about 33 per cent Friday night as the newly named Warriors embarked successfully on their new season with a solid 97-75 victory over the Celtics at the Boston Garden.

It was defense from the opening whistle for the Warriors who controlled both backboards and used the fast break to great advantage in the second half.

Russell, obtained from the New York Knicks for Jerry Lucas in the off season, meshed 15 points and Barnett, acquired from the Portland Trail Blazers, added 18. Those 33 points were about one-third of the Warriors total production.

The Warriors will try to employ the same tactics tonight against the Bullets at Baltimore whose residents could be in a gay or glum mood, depending on the outcome of today's sixth game of the World Series.

Knowing if you stop John Havlicek, you stop the Celtics, the Warriors did just that. Havlicek managed only six points, hitting on three of 15 from the field and missing his only two free throws.

The Warriors led by six points at the half but put the game away by running off 13 straight points to start the third period. The Celtics never caught up.

San Rafael Soccermen Retain Lead

San Rafael High School remained one point up on the Marin County Athletic League soccer parade by scoring a 6-1 triumph over host Tamalpais High School yesterday.

In other games, runnerup Drake kept pace with a 1-0 win over host Terra Linda; San Marin whitewashed visiting Marin Catholic 3-0; while Novato tipped Redwood 1-0 on the winner's field.

Adolpho Flores scored three, while Steve Bianchini, Misak Piringian and Carlos Castro each scored one for San Rafael. Tamalpais' lone score was by Jim Acker. Rolf Bell kicked one through for Drake. Ken Neibur had two San Marin goals, while Wiriya Naitree had the other. Rich Esmerin tallied for Novato.

Bruce Gossett, San Francisco 49ers' place kicker, will be guest of honor at the Monday luncheon meeting of the 49er Goal Rushers, Marin County Chapter, 12:15, San Rafael's Holiday Inn.

9-6 DISASTER

Glover Is Fired And Seals Lose

By DAVID DIETZ

OAKLAND — The California Golden Seals started out yesterday by replacing the coach, then took the Coliseum Arena ice last night and whipped home six goals, normally enough to win a National Hockey League game.

Trouble is, the Vancouver Canucks got nine tallies, crushing the debut of coach Vic Stasiuk and leaving the Seals still winless in the young season.

The damage went beyond that, however. Not only were six goals wasted, but a five-goal lead was dissipated and speedster Bobby Sheehan's three-goal hat trick went down the drain. It was, incidentally, the second hat trick in two games for California, Norm Ferguson scoring three against Philadelphia Wednesday night.

California skaters got only one hat trick all last season.

From the dumping of Fred Glover to the 9-6 debacle, the developments of yesterday and last night could be summed up in only one word: weirdsville.

First, General Manager Garry Young summoned an afternoon press conference to announce the firing of Glover, coach since 1969, and hiring of Stasiuk, 42, who coached the Philadelphia Flyers for two seasons until he himself was dumped after taking his team into the playoffs last year.

Glover, his eyes red-rimmed, was in the stands for last night's flop, exchaning farewell handshakes with fans and reporters. As he talked to well-wishers, his daughter, Nancy, leaned on her father's shoulder and cried.

"It wasn't Charlie," Glover said. That meant Charles O. Finley, owner of the Seals, hadn't wielded the ax, and that was difficult to believe in view of Finley's track record as owner of the baseball Athletics.

Glover's finger, of course, was pointed at Young, a broad-shouldered man who seldom smiles. Since training camp, it is said, Glover and Young have agreed little on the handling of the young, inexperienced team.

After the game, Stasiuk, a large man with a bulbous nose, waxed ebullient with the press as he reviewed the ghastly play of his squad.

"The crowd got on Kurt (Gary Kurt, the rookie goalie), but damn it, the players — especially the forwards — just stopped doing their job. We forgot the game is 60 minutes, not just 15."

With four minutes left in the first period, it was 5-1, Seals. The Canucks then scored six straight goals, the winning tally coming on a deflection by Andre Boudrias 34 seconds into the final period.

The goal total staggered Stasiuk, who played for 13 years with Chicago, Boston and Detroit, gaining a tough-guy reputation along the way. "That's more goals than I got in my whole career," he joked.

Canuck coach Hal Laycoe, asked whether the rag-tag play reminded him of his days as a Western League mentor said: "It sure looked like minor league hockey, didn't it?"

Revson Tops Grand Prix Qualifiers

MONTEREY (UPI) —Peter Revson of the Team McLaren will lead Can-Am drivers at Sunday's $75,000 Monterey Castrol Grand Prix over the Laguna Seca course.

Revson tore around the nine-turn, 1.9 mile course in a flashy 59.1 seconds or 115.932 mph to lead qualifiers Friday. That just missed the record of 58.8 set by Vic Elford of England last year in a unique 2J Chapparral, known as the vacuum cleaner car, which is now banned from racing.

But Elford will be in competition Sunday to challenge Revson and the powerhouse Team McLaren.

Elford was declared out of competition Thursday night after his car was demolished in a spectacular flip. But owner Roy Woods purchased a new machine and Elford was eighth in Friday's qualifying.

Elford planned to try to improve his position today.

So did England's David Hobbs, a surprise second in Friday's qualifying with a 59.45 in his Titanim-22 car.

That split the Team McClaren drivers as Denis Hulme of New Zealand settled for third with 1971 world driving king Jackie Stewart the fourth qualified.

Today sees more practice and qualifying for the three races Sunday, followed by three amateur races.

Sunday morning there will be more practice and qualifying. Then will come a $10,000 Super Vee Formula race at 12 noon, an amateur event at 1p.m. and then at 2 p.m., the big 90-lap, 171 mile race for $90,000 in prize and accessory money with $13,000 or more for the winner.

49ERS FAVORED

Bears' Speed Worries Coaches

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The San Francisco 49ers are 10-point favorites to beat the Chicago Bears Sunday but to listen to head coach Dick Nolan and linebacker coach Mike Giddings you'd think it was the other way around.

"There isn't a club we've played this year that has as much speed as the Bears," said Nolan and then ticked off the names of such hay burners as Dick Gordon, Don Shy, Cecil Turner, Gale Sayers and Cyril Pinder.

"They can all fly, added Nolan, "and no question Chicago's team speed is a major concern for us."

The 49ers take a 2-2 record into the game while the Bears, playing in the tough NFC Central Division, are 3-1. The fact the Bears will be taking a healthy Sayers into the game indicates that perhaps there is an overlay in the odds.

"Chicago's running backs will pose a big problem for us," said Giddings. "They get outside in a hurry and that's always a tough assignment for the linebackers. Sayers, they say, will play and we all know about his speed. I'm also worried about Shy, who took Gale's place while he was injured. He can go as fast as Sayers."

Sayers, coming back from knee surgery, always has played well against San Francisco. He tuned up last week against New Orleans by carrying the ball eight times for 30 yards and said later he felt just fine.

"I'm ready to go, I think," he said.

The 49er defense has played well in the four games thus far. It's the offense which has Nolan worried.

"We've made too many turnovers," said the San Francisco coach. "You just can't give up the ball as many times as we have and not get burned. Fumbles are one thing but penalties have hurt us even more. We certainly don't teach our players to hold but how do you tell a man to ease up on his enthusiasm."

Last week in bowing to the Los Angeles Rams 20-13, the 49ers saw three different drives stalled because of holding penalties.

"Those penalties hurt us more than anything else," said Nolan.

Tight end Ted Kwalick caught five passes for 81 yards and one touchdown against the Rams and may be quarterback John Brodie's favorite target this Sunday. That's because the Bears like to play a zone defense, which means they'll probably have double coverage on wide receiver Gene Washington, who burned Chicago badly last year.

"If they want to put double coverage on our wide receivers," said Nolan, "we'd like to make them pay the price."

Jim Dooley, the Chicago coach, says his team is not in a class with the 49ers but promised a tough, close game. He features what he calls his $100 backfield. That includes quarterback Kent Nix, halfback Shy and fullback Jim Grabowski. Grabowski cost Chicago the $100 waiver price and the other two were picked up when dismissed by other teams.

"They accounted for all four of our touchdowns last week," said Dooley. "We hope they do as well against the 49ers."

Nix passed for two touchdowns and Shy passed for one score and ran for another against New Orleans.

Sunday's tussle is a sellout at 44,000 in Candlestick Park. The kickoff is set for 1 p.m. PDT.

DARYLE IN DOGHOUSE?

Stabler To Start In Raiders' Game

OAKLAND (UPI) — What's with the Oakland Raiders?

Has Daryle Lamonica, the man who led the Raiders to division tctles the last four years, fallen into disfavor?

It's hard to tell for sure, but it's beginning to look that way.

Lamonica, who has a leg pull, insists he will be able to play Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles, but coach John Madden says he more than likely will start young Ken Stabler at quarterback.

"I can play," says Lamonica. "There is no reason for me not to."

"There is no sense in rushing Lamonica," answers Madden and then points to the job Stabler did last Sunday after replacing Daryle in the first quarter against Denver and leading the Raiders to a 27-16 victory.

Maybe Madden also remembers the job Stabler did in a preseason game against the Eagles. He completed 17 of 27 passes for 254 yards and three touchdowns.

The Raiders have a history — like the Dodgers of Branch Rickey's time —of unloading players while they still have high market value. But to do that you have to get someone else ready.

This seems like the perfect time to give Stabler the ball, the way the Raiders view things. The Eagles are close to if not the worst team in the NFL with a 0-4 record and going nowhere in particular under a coach —Ed Khayat—in his second game.

The Raiders, on the otherhand, are 3-1 and solid favorites to win the AFC West.

Second year quarterback Rick Arrington will start for the Eagles Sunday in place of veteran Pete Liske, who threw his 10th and 11th interceptions in a 13-0 loss to Minnesota last Sunday.

Besides Stabler, Raider fans once again will see Marv Hubbard and Pete Banaszak at running back with holdovers Hewritt Dixon and Charlie Smith still on the sidelines with injuries. Hubbard and Banaszak, plus rookies Don Highsmith and Clarence Davis, have helped the Raiders to the AFC rushing lead with 741 yards, an average of 185 yards per game.

"No question, our running with the ball has been impressive," says Madden. "While we were primarily a passing team before our running this year has forced the other teams to do some new things on defense."

The Raiders, if it's possible, are tougher on defense this year than last. In four games thus far the defenders have picked off 10 enemy passes. Last year at this stage they had four.

Raider fans, if they look close, may spot an old friend on the Philadelphia bench. That would be former head coach John Rauch, hired earlier in the week by Khayat to coach the Eagles quarterbacks.

Sunday's game, which will be Oakland's 22nd consecutive Coliseum sellout (54,000), is the first with Philadelphia in regular season play. In 1970 the Raiders scored a 30-19 exhibition victory and this year the Eagles won the warmup game.

Rams Temporarily Without A Coach

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The Los Angeles Rams temporarily were without their coach today as the team enplaned for Atlanta where, on Sunday, it meets the Atlanta Falcons in a National Football League contest.

Coach Tommy Prothro flew to Memphis, Tenn., early Friday after receiving word that his father, Dr. James Thompson "Doc" Prothro, had died after a lengthy illness. Coach Prothro was to remain in Memphis for today's funeral services and then rejoin his team in Atlanta in time for Sunday's game.

The Rams still were not sure whether their star defensive end, David "Deacon" Jones would be available for action against the Falcons because of an arch injury he suffered two weeks ago.

But quarterback Roman Gabriel has recovered from the concussion he suffered at San Francisco and is listed as the Rams starter against the Falcons.

Should Jones not be able to play, Jack Youngblood is available to start in his place as he did against the Forty Niners.

The meeting is the second between the Rams and the Falcons. In their first encounter Sept. 26 at the Coliseum in Los Angeles, the Rams pulled out a 20-20 tie on a last second field goal by David Ray from the 47-yard line.

Sonomans Trying For Upset

An underdog Sonoma State football team faces California State College of Hayward tonight at 8 o'clock on Santa Rosa's Bailey Field.

The East Bay aggregation ranks as one of the top three small college teams in Northern California, thus prompting Sonoma coach Carl Peterson to quip tht the locals are "out of the frying pan and into the fire."

Although the Pioneers are unbeaten in four starts while Sonoma is just 1-3, the Cossacks do have the tools to spring an upset.

Flankers Jack Trujillo and Greg Akula looked sharp in last week's 48-16 loss to the University of California of Davis, and quarterback Mike McBee showed flashes of stardom, completing half of his 22 tosses for 118 yards and two touchdowns.

However, McBee and his alternate Ernie Simon will have to go a long way in matching the skills of Pioneer field general Mike Jacinto. The frosh signal caller has hit on 10 touchdown aerials, while connecting on 40 of 83 attempts for 618 yards. He has also run for another 150 yards.

Jacinto's chief target is the acrobatic flanker Wes Jackson. The Far Western Conference decathlon champion has latched onto 17 throws for 387 yards and a score.

The Jacinto-Jackson combination will give a thorough test to Peterson's revamped secondary, which features newly converted flanker Donivan Hall at safety. Randy Marnell, Bob Sears and Paul Renfrow will also try to patch up a defensive backfield which leaked six Davis touchdown passes last week.

699 Series Tops Week's Keg Scores

Elmer Tynes rolled a 699 three-game series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Ernie Evans a 696 at Greenbrae Lanes to win the high score honors for the week in Marin County league bowling.

Honor roll for the week:

Arago Wins; Marin Second

College of Marin took second yesterday in a tri-team cross country meet at San Pablo.

West Valley of Campbell won with 28, the Tars had 30, while host Contra Costa had 79.

The Tar's Mike Arago finished first over the hilly four-mile course with a 21:37.0 clocking, some 26 seconds ahead of runnerup Jon Ahnberg of West Valley.

AT SAN RAFAEL HIGH

Terra Linda Vs. San Marin

Two former coaching colleagues will match wits when Terra Linda and San Marin high schools vie tonight at 8 o'clock on the San Rafael High School field.

Don Lucas and Bob Martin, both Terra Linda High assistants in 1964 and 1965, will pit their football minds against each other in a contest both teams need to win.

Lucas' Terra Lindans, upset in the final minute by host Novato 16-13 a week earlier, must get back on the victorious track if the squad is to retain its coveted Marin County Athletic League title.

Martin's men have not been on the long end of the scoreboard in five tries, thus both delegations are indeed pointing to this battle.

"There won't be any letdown because of last week," Lucas promised. "If anything," he continued, "my confidence is bolstered; our kids played well enough to win."

He vowed his team would "come out hitting," and so did Martin.

This is no grudge match, if only because of the friendship between the rival mentors, but each realizes the importance of the contest's outcome.

"We've always played well against Terra Linda," Martin began, "and we expect it will be another tough one this time."

Injuries and a lack of depth have forced Martin to juggle his lineup; a loss and a sprained ankle prompted Lucas to alter his starting arrays.

Lucas loses tight end Wes Emerson to an ankle sprain; Martin may forfeit the playing time of tackle Steve Fowler, depending on the condition of a damaged arm.

The lineups:

Terra Linda (Offense): SE Mike Sabel, LT Steve Rowell, LG Mark Sullivan, C Jon Loberg, RG Brian Jordan, RT Larry Madden, RE Larry Chiaroni, QB Kevin Donohoe, TB Sean Casey, FB Doug Long, FLK John Buckley. (Defense) LE Sabel, LT Loberg, MG Trygg Andersen, RT Madden, RE Wil Hamilton, LLB Jordan, RLB Steve Withers, HB Rich Nicholes, CB Jeff Leaird, S Buckley, Monster, Paul Berry.

Managers Agree: Kison's The Man

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Both World Series managers agreed on one thing today. The difference between the Orioles and the Pirates in the first five games was Bruce Kison.

"If there's been one thing that's been the pivotal point of this series," said Manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles, "It's the job Kison did in the fourth game."

That was the fourth game Wednesday night when Kison held the Orioles to one hit in 6 1-3 innings and picked up the victory that evened the series at two games a piece.

"Without that, we'd be up three to two instead of being down three to two," Weaver said. "Someone should have told him who he was pitching against."

Manager Danny Murtaugh of the Pirates, who rarely expresses surprise at anything his players do, admitted the pitching of the 21-year-old Kison had surprised him.

"To say that he didn't surprise me, that would be false," Murtaugh said. "My idea of a good long man is a guy who can come in out of the bullpen and maybe hold a team to one or two runs in the four or five or six innings he works. But that was just great, for him to come in and let them get only one hit and shut them out like he did for six innings."

Kison, who had a 10-1 record with Charleston, W.Va., of the International League before he was recalled last July 3, also picked up a victory in relief when he beat the Giants in the final game of the National League Playoffs.

"Their pitching has been better than our pitching because the kid came out of the bullpen and did a good job," Weaver said. "Before the series started, we figured they had good pitching. Our scouting report said their pitching was better than Cincinnati's was last year.

"But, and this is not to take anything away from the games (Steve) Bloss or (Nelson) Briles pitched, because you expect the starting pitchers to pitch good games, Kison is the one who had us down right now."

Murtaugh said Kison would remain in the bullpen for today's game and, Sunday, too, if a seventh game became necessary.

But Bob Moose, today's starter, will have no one rooting for him any harder than Kison. Kison is to be married Sunday night in Pittsburgh, and Moose is the best man. If the Pirates lost today and the series were prolonged, the wedding would have to be delayed.

Kison Brushed By Passing Car

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Bruce Kison, the Pittsburgh Pirates' young relief hero of the first night game in World Series history, escaped injury Friday when he was brushed by a car a few blocks from the club's hotel here.

Kison said the auto pulled out of an alley and brushed his pants, but the impact was so slight he said he did not even lift his pants to see if he was bruised. The car continued on its way, he said.

The 21-year-old righthander stopped the Orioles on one hit in 6 1-3 innings to pick up the 43 victory in Wednesday night's fourth Series game.

Silvestri To Vie In Night Drag Race

San Rafael's Ken Silvestri will race his Double AA Gas Super charged Corvette against Bill Bradford of Hayward tonight at 7 o'clock on the Vacaville Drag Strip.

Following the Bradford go, Silvestri will test Jerry and Ron Mallicoat's Plymouth Barracuda and then face a 1951 Anglia, to complete his three-race schedule inquest of the $500 first prize.

A Pass Catcher In McKay Home

BERKELEY (UPI) —USC football coach John McKay won't have to travel far to land a top pass-catching prospect for his Trojans next year. He's got one at home.

McKay's son, John Jr., snagged 10 passes for 164 yards and two first-half touchdowns Friday in sparking the USC freshmen to a 45-17 drubbing of the California frosh. Allan Carter picked up 186 yards rushing for the young Trojans, scored on a 75-yard run and fired a touchdown pass to Don Smith.

Cal quarterback Steve Bartkowski overcame a sloppy first half in which he lost four of six fumbles to lead the Cubs to 17 straight points in the third and fourth quarters.

Picture Contest In Bike Race

can passed 20 yards to Duke Bessee on an option play for the touchdown, and went ahead 7-6 after the point was kicked by Rick Klarkowski.

Opening the third period, Brown marched the Giants 80 yards in a brilliantly planned sequence, alternating backs Edralin, Connor, and Mark Asiano for 10 plays, capped on a four-yard scoring dive by Edralin. Roark, although not pleased about Brown's dull passing statistics, lauded his signal caller for moving the team. "Bob does an outstanding job calling the plays, and the team does a great job in running them."

After the kickoff, the Bulldogs gave up one of their two lost fumbles, a mistake which was promptly turned into the winning touchdown by Redwood. After moving to the six yard line on a 31-yard sweep by Connor, the junior three-sport standout blasted for another pair of yards to make it 21-7.

Enter San Rafael's fairy godmother. Duncan and compatriot Jim Grigg led the Bulldogs on a debauchery through the Giant defensive backfield, and when the smoke cleared, Mark Farrar had leaped for a three-yard score, making it 21-13. Gansloser, circling left end on a two-point conversion attempt, was halted inches short of the goal line, giving Redwood an eight point edge.

It would have seemed to have been enough, but the usually reliable Connor lost the handle on the ball on Redwood's first scrimmage play after the kickoff, and it looked like the Bulldogs had their glass slipper wedged firmly in the door.

But the steady gains netted by the big San Rafael backs on a 38-yard drive chewed up the time, and with less than a minute to go, Gansloser was forced to go to the pass, with the resulting game-clinching interception by Fulton near the goal.

Roark's players, now 2-0 in Marin County Athletic League play, "feel like they are going all the way," in their mentor's words. Roark was pleased his team escaped without injury.

'Skins, Cardinals In NFL Rematch

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The St. Louis Cardinals may be the long and the short of the Washington Redskins' winning string this season.

Washington started a four-game victory streak by beating the Cardinals in its National Football League opener and tries to make it five in a row Sunday against the same St. Louis club.

The 'Skins are four-point favorites and own a reputation of making the opposition yank its starting quarterback in all four games this season. St. Louis probably will start Jim Hart and have Pete Beathard in the bullpen.

Bill Kilmer has done remarkably well for Washington. He failed to build much of a reputation with San Francisco, fared better with New Orleans and seems to have reached his peak with the Redskins. Kilmer has been intercepted only once this season. He has thrown four touchdown strikes and ranks as the NFL's third leading passer this season.

The Cardinals defense had a field day against Atlanta last weekend as St. Louis intercepted four passes and recovered two fumbles.

In other Sunday games, Baltimore is a 10-point pick over the New York Giants, Detroit is rated 10 better than Houston, Minnesota is favored by seven over Green Bay, Cleveland is seven over Cincinnati, Oakland by 17 over Philadelphia, San Francisco 10 over Chicago, San Diego 3 over Denver, Los Angeles 3 over Atlanta, Miami 14 over New England, Dallas 14 over New Orleans and the New York Jets 4 over Buffalo.

Baltimore, boasting the league's stingiest goal line defense with a total of 17 points given up, is out for a 4-1 record as Eastern Division leader in the American Football Conference. The Colts haven't much of a passing game, but Norm Bulaich is the AFC's No. 2 rusher with 312 yards.

Cleveland, the AFC Central Division leader, may run into difficulty against former coach Paul Brown and his Cincinnati Bengals. There's not much to choose in the clubs' offensive game, but Browns having rung up 1,328 yards to 1,293 for the Bengals. It'll be Leroy Kelly and Bo Scott leading the Browns on the ground and Bill Nelsen in the air. Cincinnati again will start rookie quarterback Ken Anderson.

Los Angeles, the NFL's top rushing team, is out to protect its Western Division lead in the National Football Conference against a higher scoring Atlanta team. The Rams pulled out a 20-20 tie with the Falcons three weeks ago on David Ray's 47-yard field goal in the final seconds.

Chicago, Detroit and Minnesota are tied for the Central Division lead with 3-1 records.

Wyoming Black Seeks Big Protest

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LARAMIE, Wyo. — The head of the University of Wyoming black student alliance says a planned demonstration against Brigham Young University during today's football game between the two schools is not "radical" enough.

"Non-violent protest is fine," Mel Hamilton said Friday. "But the extent of just sitting in the stands with black arm bands on and picketing the (Mormon) Church every Sunday of the year isn't going to have impact on the citizens."

Hamilton said he planned to turn in his resignation Monday to the black student group.

The black student alliance is demonstrating against BYU for alleged prejudice within the church of the Latter Day Saints toward Negroes.

Hamilton suggested "more radical" plans but they were rejected by BSA members. He said the protests should make "people stand up and take notice." He said he would not rule out violent protests either.

Hockey

CHICAGO — The Chicago Black Hawks acquired center Andre Lacroix from the Philadelphia Flyers Friday for defenseman Rick Foley.

Tennis

EDINBURGH, Scotland — Francoise Durr of France defeated Virginia Wade of England, 6-2, 7-5, Friday to set up a finals match with Wimbledon Champ Evonne Goolagong of Australia in the Dewar Cup Tennis Championships.

NOVATO

We take these league games more seriously; and that means Drake next Saturday (at 11 a.m. on the Hornets' field.) We're not counting on anyone else's help. The rest of the league can do what it wants. We just want to do the job ourselves. We have the caliber of players to do the job ourselves and not depend on some other team to help us," Scott concluded.

Dry Land Ski School Starts On Monday

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department and the Huski Ski Club will co-sponsor a Dry Land Ski School starting Monday from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

The sessions will include basic dry land ski instruction, ski movies, equipment demonstrations, physical conditioning exercises, slope safety and Ski Patrol.

Ski program experts Suzi and Ernest Gray will lead the program, which costs $8 for eight sessions. Fees may be paid with the S.R. Parks and Recreation Department, 1400-Fifth Avenue.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON GREB

Guess who was born today, Oct. 16, and became:

1. a U.S. Supreme Court Justice? A Yale law professor who came to Washington in 1934, he is the last remaining justice on the high court appointed by President Roosevelt: (A) William O. Douglas; (B) Frank Murphy; (C) Tom Clark.

2. a founder and Prime Minister of Israel? He first went to Palestine in 1906, helped organize the Jewish Legion under General Allenby, and became head of government when Israel achieved independence in 1948: (A) Moshe Dayan; (B) David Ben Gurion; (C) Theodor Herzl.

3. a Hollywood motion picture actress? A successful screen test at age 15 led this beauty to a film contract and starring roles opposite Tyrone Power in pictures like "The Mark of Zorro" and "Blood and Sand": (A) Rita Hayworth; (B) Linda Darnell; (C) Jennifer Jones.

4. a famous American educator and lexicographer? In 1783 this New York school teacher published a spelling book (which eventually sold more than 62 million copies) and its success led him to compile a dictionary which today still bears his name: (A) John McGraw; (B) Edwin C. Hill; (C) Noah Webster.

ANSWERS

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Mixed Pair Events Usually Produce Some Silly Bidding

You may say whatever you like about South's foolish bidding in today's hand. Any sensible player would raise diamonds enthusiastically, perhaps even to the slam level. Silly bidding of this kind often takes place in a mixed pair tournament because the male half of the partnership often tries to steal the play of the hand from the female half. I'm in no position to blow the whistle on the declarer in today's hand, but I certainly can't defend his bidding.

OPENS CLUBS

West opened the king of clubs and continued the suit, forcing South to ruff. Now, if South had been playing the hand at rubber bridge, he would have drawn just two rounds of trumps with the king and ace, after which he would run the diamonds and let the opponents take their two trumps whenever they liked. South would lose only one club and two trumps, and his game contract would be safe.

At any rate, South claimed that he would have played the hand that way at rubber bridge. It would certainly be the correct line of play, and how can we doubt the word of a gentleman who just got trapped into playing in a mixed pair event?

NEEDS ALL TRICKS

Anyway, this was trounament bridge, and South needed all the tricks he could get. So he took the king of hearts and then tried a finesse with the jack of hearts. Have a little pity for the poor fellow, because you'll need all the pity you can get when you make the same kind of play yourself.

West won with the queen of hearts and led another club, forcing South to ruff for the second time. Now South had only one trump left, and West had two. South led his last trump, hoping the two missing trumps would fall on the same trick.

A DIAMOND RUN

Then South tried to run the diamonds, but West ruffed the second diamond and led his last club. East took two club tricks, and South was down two.

"Down two at four hearts," North remarked bitterly. "I'd have had to bid eight diamonds to go down two. Maybe next time I will."

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠-Q 10 8 5
♦-10 9
♣-A 9 5 4 2.

What do you say?
ANSWER: Bid one spade.

The hand is not strong enough for a response of two clubs, but is strong enough for a response at the level of one.

Benefit Film Set At College

A film, "The World of Buckminster Fuller" will be shown at the College of Marin Oct. 21 and 22 to benefit the Switchboard of Marin.

The showings each day will be at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Olney Hall on College Avenue at the Kentfield campus, according to June Radtke, publicity chairman.

Fuller, inventor of the geodisic dome and other innovations, is interviewed in the film and his many creations are depicted.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Uncertainty Still Prevails On Market

NEW YORK (UPI)—Labor threw its support behind Phase II of President Nixon's economic program, but it didn't relieve much of the uncertainty on Wall Street. Stocks closed lower for the week, with volume moderate.

There was some suspicion the administration may have granted organized labor too many concessions to get its backing, and that this may doom Phase II to failure even before it gets off the ground.

Lucien Hooper of W. E. Hutton & Co., a Wall Street veteran of 50 years, said "Phase II rules out the possibility of a big, bull market because somebody is going to get hurt, whether it be labor or some of the nation's business."

"The public is cautious and skeptical because of the many loopholes in Phase II," said Bradbury K. Thurlow, vice president-research for Hoppin, Watson & Co.

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson indicated during a broadcast interview that most wage increases already agreed upon in signed labor union contracts would be allowed to go into effect when the wageprice freeze ends on Nov. 13.

The Hoppin, Watson executive observed "if you give a wage increase to a man in August, it's hard to tell another fellow in January that he isn't entitled to the same shake."

Economist Paul A. Samuelson said he doubts the phase II economic plan will be able to hold the line on wages and prices.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

The Editor's Notebook

Our Prestige College Needs Our Support

ONE DAY SOON each of us in Marin will be asked to dig into his wallet and pungle up a contribution for Dominican College.

To many this will come as a bewildering surprise.

Dominican has always been here, apparently self-supporting, perhaps even a "fat cat," we have assumed.

If we gave it a thought at all, we figured it had a faculty of nuns who are paid next to nothing, it is located on tax-free land in tax-free buildings, it is attended by the daughters of the rich who can well afford to pay high tuition and living costs, it must be generously supported by wealthy alumnae, and it must be heavily subsidized by the wealthy Catholic Church.

Unfortunately, nearly all of these assumptions are far from true.

Nuns comprise a minority of the faculty. Dominican has always provided scholarships to less fortunate young ladies (especially those from distant lands). More recently the college has begun to provide scholarships for girls of minority background. The families of a high proportion of students are far from affluent. Alumnae support doesn't come close to making up deficits, and the Catholic Church makes no direct contribution of funds to Dominican nor has it ever done so.

Dominican's projected deficit for the current academic year is $200,000.

The college has an endowment of only about $250,000. Obviously, it cannot long continue on its present course.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP of its present board of trustees and its president, Sister M. Samuel Conlon, it is changing course. New efforts are being made in new directions. The most dramatic recent change has been toward coeducation. Men as well as women students now attend Dominican.

Also, Sister Samuel has embarked on a campaign to correct false assumptions about Dominican among those of us who live closest to the college.

For seveal generations, Dominican has had a national reputation as a very fine liberal arts college for women. Like the prophet who is without honor in his native land, Dominican's outstanding reputation was largely unknown to most of us in Marin.

A year or two ago, Sister Samuel invited some leading Marinites to form a citizen advisory committee so as to begin bridging the gap between the college and the Marin community.

That committe, headed by Shane H. Brady, is now preparing to conduct the first local general appeal for assistance to Dominican.

HOW DID DOMINICAN get itself into its present predicament?

The same way Stanford University and nearly all other private institutions of higher learning in the country came to face the financial crises they presently are attempting to solve.

Stanford president Richard W. Lyman addressed the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco on this very subject only last month.

"The selective, high-quality, full-scale private university in the United States," said Lyman, "is facing a fight for survival.

"I know of no private university that can look at its financial projections for the next decade without serious forebodings as to the institution's capacity to maintain its present level and quality of educational program. . ."

"Our financial problem is born of inflation, and the fact that we are a labor-intensive industry in that savings by technological change are very difficult for us to achieve . . . Personal attention to students is (increasingly) expensive."

While Dominican has an endowment of but a quarter of a million dollars, Stanford has an endowment of a quarter billion. And still Stanford faces an even more critical crisis than does Dominican.

SHOULD WE JUST forget about high-cost private universities and colleges and leave all the educational process entirely in the hands of our tax-supported institutions?

President Lyman answered this way:

"No one today can plausibly argue that the private sector has any monopoly on excellence. Without making any claim to be ipso facto 'better,' the private sector can at least say we're different and that the difference counts for something.

"A private university can limit its size and the number of tasks it takes on more easily than a state university. It can pick and choose among the fields in which it will offer any program at all. The pressure to try to do everything is less intense and more readily resisted than that which comes from a state legislature."

In his book "Iberia," James Michener tells of his question to a Spaniard concerning his nation's system of having all education provided by the church instead of public schools.

"But, senor, " said the Spaniard, "we think the education of our youth is much too important to be left in the hands of the politicians."

The Spaniards have something there. America would be the poorer if our private colleges and universities were all to close. Marin would be much poorer if Dominican College suffers because of lack of community support.

Bouquets

BOUQUET (a big one) to manager Marcelle McCoy for a very attractive Marin County Fair at the Civic Center fairgrounds, which had to be assembled in a great hurry at the new site but pleased just about all the record crowd of fairgoers.

BOUQUET to Peter Palches, new principal of San Rafael High School, for taking positive steps to curb petty gangsterism at the school as a start toward restoring student morale. He deserves support of school board and administration, faculty, students, and the public.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Agrees With Younger On Angela Davis Trial

I have just finished reading the story in Monday's (Oct. 11) issue regarding Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger's comments on the Angela Davis trial.

How thoroughly I agree with him, that many people are being led to believe she (Angela) is indeed, a political prisoner, forgetting the terrible crime that was committed, and her alleged part in it.

She is in jail like any other murder suspect who is caught — and certainly there is enough evidence to legally keep her there.

She has been shown consideration beyond what she deserves, and more, I feel, then the widow of Judge Haley — her wishes are certainly not granted.

Magee is another one . . . What possible difference could it make who fired the shot that killed the judge? He'd have been killed for sure anyway.

I think it's time those of us who have something to say about this ridiculous trial, and the lengths they go to, to give criminals their every right, at our expense, to voice their opinions.

I am sick of it. Desperately sick of it. It's so disgusting, the injustice to the widow, and the every justice to the criminal.

Virginia Franklin's Teaching Defended

While attending San Rafael High School a few years back, I was fortunate enough to have been a government student under Virginia Franklin.

In her class, Mrs. Franklin covered all types of government and explained their functions to her students.

Only by being exposed to different teachings and works of government, many that differ from our own, can a young person emerge with a true and healthy knowledge of what is around him. We that studied under Mrs. Franklin did not step out of San Rafael High with violently radical minds, rather, with minds that were broadened and clear with the understanding of different people, different thoughts, and different ways of life.

It saddens me that there are people who can mistake an interested woman who cares and who is doing a good job of teaching her class, for some mad radical whose main objective is polluting our young people's minds.

I can only see ignorance on the part of these people, and worse than that, the product of their ignorance, which is fear.

Parents; have faith and trust in your children, let them prepare themselves for what awaits them.

Lucas Valley Periled By Renaissance Plan

It seems that Jack Craemer and I have a favorite national park - Lassen Volcanic National Park. I have enjoyed the column in which he described the tranquility and beauty which he found there . . .

Luckily, I can come back to my home in Upper Lucas Valley and get at least a partial relief from noise, pollution, overcrowding and commercialism. However, now I feel threatened because there is a possibility that unless sanity prevails, Lucas Valley's pastoral and residential character will be despoiled by the introduction of a crassly commercial enterprise, the Renaissance Center and Renaissance Pleasure Faire. This enterprise pretends to be educational, cultural, and recreational but it will have to expand its present commercial activities beyond the six weeks of the Pleasure Faire, into other commercial types of festivals, shops, etc.

The enterprise is headed by Mr. and Mrs. Patterson who are salaried directors of a non-profit foundation which would take 1,000 acres of taxable land off the Marin County tax rolls, and which will find it hard to survive without very strong commercial support over and above any grants and donations which it may be able to secure.

I, and other members of the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association feel that our valley is being threatened with an undesirable change which we will oppose in person and in writing in any meeting or a hearing in which the necessary zoning change or use permit applications will be argued and decided on . . .

Phase Two: Produce More, Spend Less, Boost Profits

WASHINGTON — I was putting a Phase 2 sticker in my living-room window to prove I supported the President's economic game plan, when my wife came by.

"What are you doing?" she demanded to know.

"Read it. It says, 'WE FIGHT INFLATION — WE SUPPORT THE U.S. ECONOMIC PROGRAM.'

"It means that as loyal Americans we have joined a volunteer army of wage earners, executives, bankers and consumers to fight the godless hordes of inflation."

"We have?" she asked.

"YES. DON'T YOU remember the other night the President said that we should look at his program, not as Democrats or Republicans, workers or businessmen, farmers or consumers, but as Americans? Fighting inflation is everybody's business, he told us. Well, showing this sticker is the first step."

"But I don't understand how showing a sticker will fight inflation."

"It is a warning to everyone from the milkman to the Avon lady that we're willing to lay down our lives for the President's game plan. When they come to the door we will say, 'No, thank you, we shall not contribute one dime to the spiraling forces of inflation that have been unleashed all over this land."

"I thought the President wanted us to spend money so there will be jobs and a strong economy."

"HE DOES," I said. "But at the same time he is asking us all to show restraint. He says, buy things but don't expect higher wages, because if you get a raise that means prices will have to rise, and the whole thing will be self-defeating."

"How can we spend more money if we can't get more money to spend?" My wife demanded.

"Now you're thinking like a Democrat," I said disgustedly. "We can get more money by going to the banks and borrowing it. Then we can buy things, which will perk up the economy and make it possible for factories to tool up, people to be employed and stockholders to get dividends."

"You mean stockholders are going to get dividends?"

"Of course. You don't expect stockholders to make sacrifices during a wage-price freeze, do you?"

"WHY SHOULD PEOPLE who work be frozen, but people who clip coupons be allowed to make all the profits they want to?" she asked.

"Because, my dear, the only incentive business has is profits. If you take profits away from people, they won't go out and buy stocks. Then the stock market will suffer, and that could be very bad for the country."

"Well, what am I supposed to do?"

"Increase your productivity. Instead of doing two washloads a day, do three. Instead of vacuuming one room, vacuum two. Drive the kids to nursery school four times a week instead of three."

"IS THAT GOING to lick inflation?" she wanted to know.

"Maybe yes, maybe no, but it is sure going to scare the hell out of the Japanese."

"You mean if every American woman did twice the number of chores she does now, the Japanese will be worried?"

"Right on! If they see our women are willing to make sacrifices to increase their productivity, it will have a fantastic psychological effect on the Japanese yen."

"And what are you going to do?"

"I'm going out and fight inflation in the streets, so I'll never have to fight it in my home."

Proposal To Put Sen. Byrd On Court Deeply Disturbing

WASHINGTON — The scenario of the Supreme Court of the United States as a political football is ugly and demeaning.

The report that President Nixon intends to nominate Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia to one of the vacancies on the court is profoundly disturbing to all who prize the institution as a bulwark of justice and freedom.

Byrd has none of the qualifications for a place on the highest tribunal in the land. He has had no judicial experience whatsoever. So far as the record shows he has never practiced law nor is there any indication of his admission to the bar, either in the District of Columbia or in his native West Virginia. He got his law degree through six years of part-time study at American University while serving in Congress.

The report is that the President has sent Byrd's name with five or six others to the American Bar Association for rating. The ABA has three broad categories: (1) qualified, (2) not opposed, and (3) not qualified. While one may question the propriety of asking the trade union to pass on the fitness of one of the legal profession, the system has the merit of judgment by those with expert knowledge.

BYRD'S MEMBERSHIP in the Ku Klux Klan and his service as an organizer is being equated with the late Justice Hugo L. Black's connection with the Klan. Black, as an ambitious young politician in Alabama in the 1920s, had a brief membership which he later repudiated. In the 1940s Byrd had an active role in the Klan in West Virginia with a target of Roman Catholicism at least as important as the animus toward the blacks.

The Democrats have a heavy responsibility in this matter. A majority of Senate Democrats elected Byrd as deputy leader in a contest with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts. They did this knowing his record of opposition to civil rights measures, with southern votes tipping the scale.

Now his friends in the Senate seem only too anxious to have him move to the court. On the left, Sen. George McGovern hastened to give Byrd his endorsement. Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina came in with his hurrah, adding the cynical observation that Byrd would surely be confirmed since so many senators would like his job.

THE SCENARIO has another sharper political twist Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia, a Republican, would name one of his own party to fill Byrd's seat until the election in 1972, should Byrd go to the court. This would change the Democratic majority from 55-45 to 55-46. Moore, with ambitions to run for the Senate himself next year, would have little chance to defeat Byrd, who has won the highest vote totals in the history of the state.

The knowledge of Justice Black's membership in the Ku Klux Klan came out after his nomination and confirmation by the Senate. It caused a loud outcry. He had been a senator and, while there was grumbling on the right over his lack of judicial experience and his strong liberal bent, his confirmation was never in doubt if only because of the Senate's club-like spirit. Whether membership in the Klan would have been an impediment if it had been known, no one can say.

Black went on to become one of the most distinguished justices in the history of the court, quickly overriding early doubts of his capacity. This could be true of Byrd, who has proved tireless and able as Senate whip.

BUT THE IMMEDIATE and urgent need of the court is for a nominee who can command respect. That is to say, a nominee who would not raise the dust of angry controversy as Byrd surely would, no matter what the final count in votes on his nomination. There are such men with judicial experience and broad background in the law.

The present seven-man supreme court is a sufficient reason for quickly filling the two vacancies with justices who can pull their weight in the boat and help to restore confidence in an institution battered by the political tides. Decisions of a seven-man court divided four to three could call for reargument before a full court, with a reversal in a five-to-four decision. The law's delay is grim enough without such a handicap.

The 'Impossible Job' Again Looking For Taker

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Wanted: Top-quality, noncontroversial diplomat to take over "impossible" job. Knowledge of languages helpful. Salary $65,000 annually plus living allowance. Applicants contact United Nations.

After 10 years, Burmese diplomat U Thant is stepping down from the job which Trygve Lie, the first man to hold it, described as "the most impossible job on earth."

Thant doesn't call it impossible. He just calls it "one of the most difficult."

IN WHAT COULD have been billed as a farewell speech to newsmen assigned to coverage of the U.N. in mid-September, Thant outlined some of the reasons for difficulties attached to the job and the qualities he believed were needed in the man named to succeed him.

Neither the job nor sometimes the resolutions the secretary general is called upon to carry out are clearly defined.

Governments frequently dump problems upon the United Nations because they don't know what else to do with them.

The secretary general therefore becomes a natural scapegoat.

BECAUSE THE secretary general's most effective role frequently is the carrying out of "good offices," he should possess the following qualities:

"...My successor should be a man who will look to the future and to a global concept of the problems we all face. He should be impartial and objective without necessarily being neutral. He should be responsible to the movements and preoccupations of world public opinion, especially of young people...He must have political judgement, tact and integrity. He must have also an unassailable conviction of the importance of individual human dignity and value...He must have a sense of proportion and of humor to protect him against the bitterness of frustration and the discomfort of perennial, and sometimes unjustified, criticism..."

Thant did not say so in this speech, but the secretary general also must play a role as fund raiser.

IN A REPORT to the general assembly's budget committee early in October Thant described the U.N. "as of now, in a state of near and hopeless insolvency." It has exhausted its working capital and more than once has had trouble meeting its payroll.

It has overdue assessments of more than $65 million of which "at least $33.5 million must be regarded as uncollectable."

The assessments cover such items as peace-keeping forces in the Congo and Mideast which the Soviet Union and France, among others, refused to pay.

Next year's budget calls for expenditures of $215 million as compared to this year's $195 million and is in special doubt because of the "two China" issue now before the U.N. and the possibility Nationalist China may be expelled. Some U.S. senators have threatened a drive to ut the big U.S. contribution to the U.N. if the Nationalists lose their seat.

NOT ONLY is the U.N. close to financial bankruptcy, it is under constant attack for being bankrupt spiritually as well, unable to live up to or to enforce its own ideals.

Yet it lives on because man retains world peace as his goal and rejects any thought that he must continue to march off to war and his own destruction.

Nixon's Planned Peking Visit — A New Asian Key

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon's plan to visit China has generated powerful new geopolitical currents in Asia whose ultimate effects cannot be foreseen.

The trip, now scheduled for early next year, is unlikely to result in any immediate breakthrough on major issues dividing Washington and Peking.

Both the President and Communist Premier Chou Enlai envisage the pilgrimage as an exploratory operation on "normalization of relations" as well as "questions of concern to the two sides."

CHOU, IN a recent interview, said that "by contacting each other, we may be able to find out from where we should start in solving these questions."

The mere announcement of the visit has had major repercussions, however. In Asia it has forced several nations to take a hard new look at their policies.

The most spectacular impact has been in Japan. Nixon's move has virtually destroyed the political position of Premier Eisaku Sato and has greatly increased the influence of the pro-Peking wing of his Liberal Democrat Party.

Elsewhere, repercussions have been quieter but perhaps equally significant. Thailand, site of a number of large air bases used by the United States, has suggested "confidentially" to Japan that Asian nations must consider new multilateral relationships in view of the new Chinese American dialogue.

IN MALAYSIA, Premiere Tun Abdul Razak must be congratulating himself for snuggling up to Peking six months in advance of Nixon's move. His immediate reward was a deal to sell Malaysia's entire rubber and tin production for the year to China. He presumably anticipates further benefits.

Jakarta, Singapore, Vientiane, Phnom Penh, Saigon, Hanoi, Seoul and Manila are still seeking to assess the significance of the development, particularly how far Chinese-American rapprochement may go.

Nobody really knows. The sudden announcement of a Sino-American summit naturally led to intense speculation and considerable euphoria, despite official warnings by both Peking and Washington against expecting too much too soon.

Ralph N. Clough of the Brookings Institution, a veteran of 25 years diplomatic service in China, put it this way in a recent magazine article: "That Washington and Peking could agree on so improbable a visit, almost seems to justify bold and improbable predictions of what the visit may accomplish."

ALMOST BUT not quite.

The White House has clamped a tight lid on the specifics of what Nixon hopes may come out of his meeting with Chou, Chairman Mao Tse-tung and other Chinese leaders.

Those few knowledgeable officials who will talk say Nixon envisages the Peking talks as the beginning of a long process which he hopes will reduce tension and provide a stability that Asia has not enjoyed for many years.

They say most emphatically that the President does not expect the Peking consultations to solve the Vietnam conflict. The best they foresee in this respect is creation of an "atmosphere" in which the North Vietnamese might be more willing to negotiate secretly and sincerely to end the conflict.

Chou has made it abundantly clear, in his talks with American newsmen and others, that he will continue to support the stiff terms outlined in Hanoi's various "peace plans."

IN ANY EVENT, U.S. officials believe the most Chou could do would be to persuade Hanoi and the Viet Cong to word their demands in terms less humiliating to the United States. No one here seriously thinks Peking could dictate an end to the war.

The U. S. appraisal is that while Hanoi is getting 30 per cent of its war supplies from Peking, it is not going to take any orders from Chou, even if he were inclined to give them.

The forthcoming visit to Hanoi by Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny also is not expected to have any influence on the peace talks. Russia found several years ago that although it supplied about 65 per cent of Hanoi's war materiel, it could not influence policy of the North Vietnam government vis-a-vis the United States.

According to Soviet sources here, the Podgorny trip is principally to show the Kremlin's support for North Vietnam.

MOSCOW OBVIOUSLY wants to make a major show of solidarity with Hanoi at a time when that capital is worried over Peking's willingness to talk with the American "imperialists."

The Podgorny trip also is seen here as one more move in the struggle between Russia and China for dominance in the international Communist movement.

In attempting to assess the long-term effects of any rapprochement between Peking and Washington, U.S. officials see no possibility that the President's trip will result in early establishment of full diplomatic relations.

At best they anticipate some form of de facto relations at the consular level. This would facilitate business between the two without committing either to the more formal step of diplomatic recognition until the future is clearer.

IN ASSESSING developments to date, the consensus here, both in and out of government, is that the Chinese have gained more than the United States so far.

The White House believes China decided to end 20 years of bitter estrangement from the United States because of two considerations:

—Mounting fear that Russia, with whom Peking has a bitter ideological and territorial dispute, might decide on a preemptive strike by conventional bombers against China's growing nuclear weapons system. Also involved is Chinese concern over the one million sgldiers and more than 1,000 planes Russia has massed along its 5,500-mile border with China.

—Peking's concern that Japan's growing industrial power, now second only to the United States in the non-Communist world, may lead to large-scale remilitarization, including nuclear weapons. Chou's oft-expressed theory, also held by Director Herman Kahn of the Hudson Institute, is that economic supremacy naturally leads to military resurgence to protect trade interests.

Chou already has made some gains in Japan by agreeing to meet Nixon. Premier Sato, who had greatly increased trade with Nationalist Taiwan, had for years resisted pressure to increase trade with mainland China and begin negotiations on diplomatic relations.

NIXON HAD pledged full consultations with Japan before making any major shift in U.S. China policy and his Peking announcement caught Sato out on a limb. As a result Japan's liberal Democrats undoubtedly now will elect a new, pro-Peking leader.

The announcement also greased the way for United Nations approval of Peking's membership this fall. That was already in the cards, but it became sure when Nixon decided to actively promote Peking's membership while drastically toning down efforts to prevent expulsion of the Nationalists.

While Nixon's gains so far appear less substantial than Peking's, he is playing for long as well as short-term gains.

Over the short haul, Nixon has strengthened himself at home politically for the moment at least. But he is very much aware that his decision could boomerang in next year's elections if he comes home without any concrete gains.

THE PRESIDENT also gained international leverage in the sense that Washington's firm anti-Peking stand made it difficult to work closely with nations that considered the former U.S. position unrealistic and outdated.

Looking five to 10 years down the road, it is possible to envisage relative stability in Asia if the major powers with interests in the area decide it is unwise to seek individual advantage which could lead to conflict.

Doak Barnett, a well-known China scholar who always gets a respectful hearing in Washington, says in a just-published book that he believes a quadrilateral balance of power involving the United States, China, Russia and Japan already has evolved.

He thinks it may prove to be basically rather stable because "there will probably be severe limits on the extent to which any of the four powers will be able to manipulate the balance to its own advantage." Barnett thinks each of the four will seek to avoid collusion with any of the others.

IT IS ANYBODY'S guess whether such a quadrilateral balance, operating somewhat like the "stalemate of nuclear terror" which has prevented war between Russia and the West for 20 years, will prove effective.

Barnett omits from his equation two major Asian powers, possibly for good reasons. His failure to include India, with its vast manpower and nuclear know-how, may reflect the belief that India's domestic problems are so great it cannot become a real power within the foreseeable future.

He also omits Indonesia, the wealthiest country in the area in natural resources. But it cannot be considered a major factor in big power politics until it somehow manages to organize itself industrially, something which the likeable and easy-going Indonesians find difficult to do.

Aside from theories of "quadrilateral balance" and regardless of just how far the Peking-Washington thaw goes, veteran diplomats foresee certain obvious developments over the next few years.

IN THE FIRST place, most observers assume that all of Vietnam, including the south, will be united under Hanoi within a couple of years, if not earlier. This was the intent of the 1954 Geneva agreement.

President Nixon is serious about complete withdrawal from Vietnam next year, insisting only on the release of U.S. prisoners. And while continued U.S. economic aid to Saigon is considered necessary to fill U.S. commitments, there is little real confidence it will enable Saigon to survive.

If Chinese-American amity increases even slightly, Thailand is expected to order the American Air Force off her territory and return to her traditional policy of playing major powers off against each other —a policy which kept her free from either French or British colonialism.

The assumption here is that Laos, which is a collection of 14 various tribes, and Cambodia will probably be "neutralized" under whatever form of government they want.

A UNITED VIETNAM might be tempted to move on Cambodia and Laos but probably could be easily dissuaded by a relatively gentle combination of American and Chinese pressure.

Indonesia, which drove the Communists underground after the abortive 1965 coup which spelled disaster for President Sukarno, is not going to rush to improve its present rather cool relations with Peking. But if there is Chinese-American accord of a general nature, Jakarta probably will want to get on as good terms with China as she is with the United States and Russia.

Other regimes in non-Communist Asia will be under pressure to move closer to Peking to minimize the threat of violence from their indigenous Communist parties, some of which have major nuisance value but little power.

All in all, a Peking Washington rapprochement — even though limited — would set in motion forces and accommodations which could alter the Asian scene considerably.

However, the consensus in top quarters here is that it will be an Asia in which Americans can trade, travel and work without the cost of maintaining major military forces in the area.

HANDSHAKE AND A SMILE — Henry A. Kissinger, special adviser to President Nixon, and Red China's Premier Chou En-lai exchange handshakes in their historic July meeting. Kissinger embarked today to Peking to work out details on Nixon's planned visit to Red China early next year. The Nixon visit will probably mark a new phase in the geopolitical makeup of Asia.

PRINCE JUAN CARLOS

Groomed To Be The Next King Of Spain

PRINCE JUAN CARLOS
Groomed to leadership

GENERAL FRANCO
To relinquich power

MADRID (UPI) — General Francisco Franco's steady voice trembled with emotion, and those sitting near him said they saw tears in his eyes. It was one of the rare moments of public emotion in the life of Europe's longest ruling head of state.

"Conscious of my responsibilities before God and history," the aging ruler of 33 millin Spaniards — He will be 79 in December — told his parliament, "I have decided to propose him as my successor."

"Him" is Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon y Borbon, a tall, athletic and often melancholy looking young man who was a few months past 31 on the day in 1969 when Franco announced that he had picked him as heir to the vacant Spanish throne and as his eventual successor as chief of state.

IN MADRID'S Cortes (Parliament) building, the decision surprised no one. For 20 years, Juan Carlos had been carefully groomed for the job under the tutelage of General Franco. If Spain needed a king, Juan Carlos was the tailor-made candidate.

On Oct. 1 at a Madrid rally celebrating Franco's 35th anniversary in power, Franco scotched recent rumors that he might be considering stepping aside at any early date in favor of Juan Carlos.

"I want to once again assure you that as long as God gives me life and clarity of judgment, I will continue to hold the helm of state," he told a cheering crowd from the palace balcony.

Franco's choice of Juan Carlos is seen in Madrid as the logical one. Of the various royal families claiming the Spanish throne, Juan Carlos' Borbons have the most solid credentials.

HIS GRANDFATHER, Alfonso XIII, was the last king of Spain. He abdicated in 1931 under the revolutionary pressures buffeting the country, made a vain bid to join Franco during the Spanish civil war and died in exile in Rome during World War II.

Juan Carlos' father, Count Juan of Barcelona, was the Borbon's official pretender to the throne, but Franco ruled him out as too outspoken, too liberal and too uncompromising in his insistence that Spain be democratized quickly.

This left Juan Carlos, who was young enough to be malleable.

In his long years of being groomed for what may be the most sensitive job in the monarchy business, Juan Carlos has been converted into a top civil servant who is rooted in the traditions of the present regime, but at the same time realizes the need for far-reaching political changes.

"I am Franco's heir, but I am Spain's heir as well," he has told foreign visitors. And he has repeatedly said that he sees his future role as the head of a "representative" monarchy, with the speed of democratization depending entirely on "how fast the Spanish people themselves wish to move." He is a member of the National Movement, the official and sole party allowed in Spain, but he has come out in favor of creating various political "associations" as the first step toward a multi-party system.

SUCH STATEMENTS have not remained unnoticed among opposition circles where, at first, Juan Carlos faced indifference or outright hostility as "Franco's blue-eyed boy" and where he was sometimes referred to as "Juan Carlos the Brief," reflecting the opposition's caustic estimate of the length of his reign.

World's Longest Ruling Monarch

MBABANE, Swaziland (UPI) — "Your shadow is cast on the hills. It falls across the huts. And over the waterfalls . . ."

So goes the siSwati song of praise to "The Lion of the Mighty Claw," His Majesty King Sobhuza II, who this year has ruled Swaziland for 50 years.

He is one of the few monarchs to survive the last decade of turbulent nationalism in Africa, Sobhuza rules his minination — about the size of New Jersey — of half a million people with a balanced mixture of tradition and constitutional law.

"In our kingdom, the King both leads and is led by his people," Sobhuza once said. "I am my people's mouthpiece..."

Now 72, Sobhuza is one of the most married men of the century. No one knows how many wives he has but it is recorded the King married his 50th bride in 1933. Nobody has kept count since. On the rare state occasions when the wives appear en masse the count has topped 100 but nobody can say for sure if this constitutes the complete royal household.

CUSTOM HAS overcome any squabble over the position of First Lady. Usually, the Queen Mother rules beside her son but Sobhuza's own mother is dead. Thus, the position is filled by an aunt, known as Ndlovikazi — The Great She-Elephant — who is, in effect, the traditional Chief Justice.

King Sobhuza has left Swaziland only twice. In 1922, less than a year after his coronation, he led a delegation to London to fight for the repeal of British land concessions which had taken much of the Swazis' land rights out of their hands. He fialed. But he continued fighting and despite further losses in Swaziland courts and before the Privy Council, the King has managed to reduce white ownership of land to 42 per cent.

Sobhuza still champions Swazi aspirations to win back more of their land through legal purchase. But he is on record as having no wish to alienate the 9,000 odd whites who live in his kingdom.

"IT IS CLEAR to me that both the African and the European seek protection of their rights" he said in 1960. "It is therefore necessary, not only to assure the European that he will not be ousted from Africa, but also to assure the African that he is not to be kept forever as a subject person."

Sobhuza last went overseas in 1953 to attend the coronation of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II. It is unlikely he will again leave Swaziland. He refuses to travel by air and has declined invitations from a number of states to visit them.

The world's longest still-reigning monarch keeps himself well informed on world affairs, however. He reads local and foreign newspapers avidly, sometimes staying up until 3 o'clock in the morning marking items for the attention of his officials.

The King studies all government documents and can send back for reconsideration those with which he disagrees. But under the Swazi constitution, he must eventually accept the advice of his ministers.

But the shrewdness and good humor of Sobhuza disarms his critics. In Western dress, he talks confidently at state occasions with resident diplomats and distinguished visitors. Bare chested in tribal dress and bearing a Swazi battle-axe, he stands an impressive figure before his subjects as they roar the greeting "Bayethel" (hail).

The big headache for the royal advisory body —the Swazi National Council — still remains. When Sobhuza dies, it must decide which of his sons, again nobody knows how many he has, will become king.

Until that day, the praisesinoers raise their voices to their monarch: "Sobhuza, born of the Royal Shields, Master of the Spears. You have brought your people joy and pride. ALL HAIL!.."

This Week In The World

By United Press International

President Nixon announced he will make a trip to Moscow in May to confer with Soviet leaders on "all major issues" soon after he visits Peking. The journey to the Soviet Union, the President said, would be independent of the one to China and neither "is being taken for the purpose of exploiting what differences may exist between the two countries.

"The trips are being taken for the purpose of better relations between the United States and the Soviet Union and better relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China," Nixon said.

IN ANNOUNCING his trip, the President said he repeatedly had stated from the beginning of his tenure that he felt no Summit meeting should be held until it would yield useful results. Some agreements between the two nations at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, on the use of seabeds and biological weapons and indications of progress in Berlin have led both sides to believe "there were matters on which major progress could be made," Nixon said.

Meanwhile, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger was leaving for Peking Saturday to firm up arrangements for the Nixon visit.

LEADERS OF organized labor, who at first had indicated displeasure at Phase II of President Nixon's inflation fighting plan, agreed to support the measures after the President sent a note promising that the Cost of Living Council wouldnot have veto power over the decisions of the Pay Board.

The Supreme Court, in its first working session of the new term, displayed a continuing shift away from the "activist" tendencies of the Warren Court. It refused for a second time to rule on the constitutionality of the Vietnam War, upheld laws forbidding public employees to strike and refused to temporarily stop prison officials from questioning inmates of Attica about the September riot.

President Nixon sent to the American Bar Association a list of six potential nominees for the two vacancies on the Supreme Court. The list included two women and Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a former member of the Ku Klux Klan. All four men on the list are from the South.

IN CONGRESS, the House overwhelmingly passed a bill to bar sex discrimination. Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., who blocked Senate action on a similar measure last year, said he would try to block their one too.

The 1971 Nobel Prize for Physiology and Medicine was awarded to Dr. Earl W. Sutherland Jr., a professor at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn. Sutherland, the 43rd American to win the award, was cited for "his discoveries concerning the mechanisms of the action of hormones." It was believed Sutherland's work could help research into cancer and diabetes.

Dean Acheson, a chief architect of America's foreign policy in the Cold War era and Secretary of State to President Truman, died at his home in Sandy Springs, Md. Another prominent figure who died during the week was Lt. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, the most decorated Marine in the history of the Corps.

IN THE MIDDLE East, two Egyptian MIG23s, believed piloted by Soviet aviators, came to within 90 seconds of Tel Aviv, but quickly moved off without violating Israeli air space when Israeli jets came up to meet them. Diplomatic action centered in Moscow and New York. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat met with Kremlin leaders in Moscow and got a promise of more military aid, while in New York, Secretary of State Rogers tried — apparently unsuccessfully — to bring Israel and Egypt closer together on an interim peace settlement.

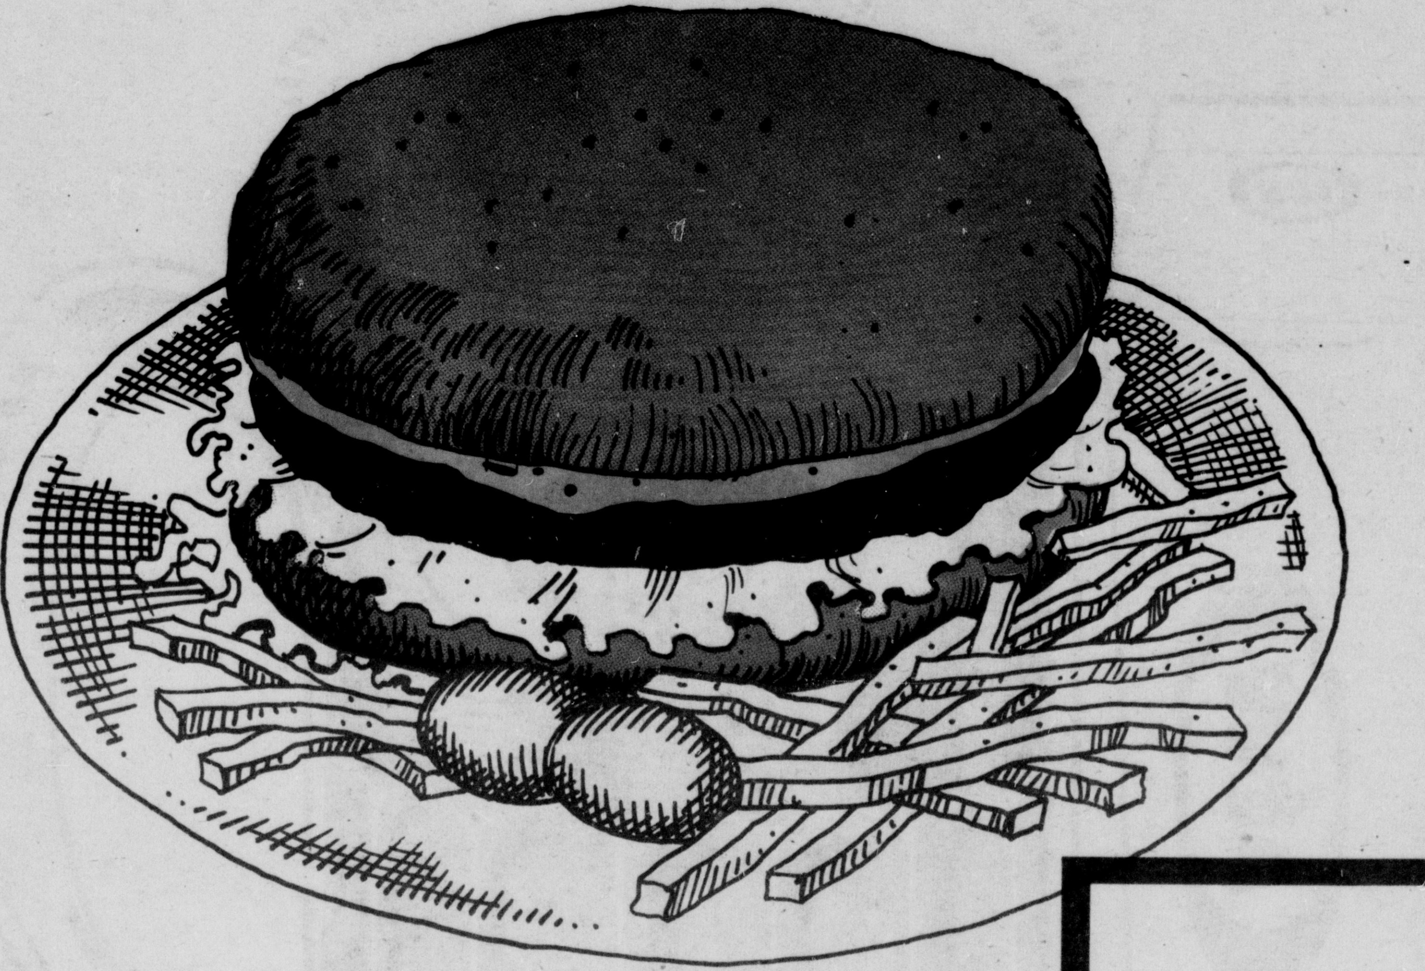
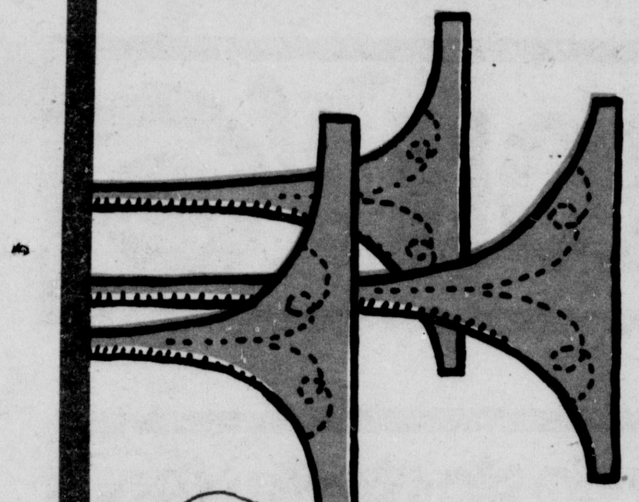
THE HISTORY OF THE HAMBURGER



When you bite into one of our luscious and juicy A & W hamburgers, you may not actually hear the far off sounds of a Bavarian Band . . . but the fact is . . . our hamburgers had their beginnings in Hamburg, Germany in the far off ages as finely minced beef, shaped into a pattie. It was first served in America to German sailors when they put into port in Seattle. Because many of the sailors were from Hamburg the pattie became known as Hamburg steak. Later it was served in a bun and known as a hamburger. A & W has added the quality and skill that is ours alone and that is why everyone likes A & W hamburgers.

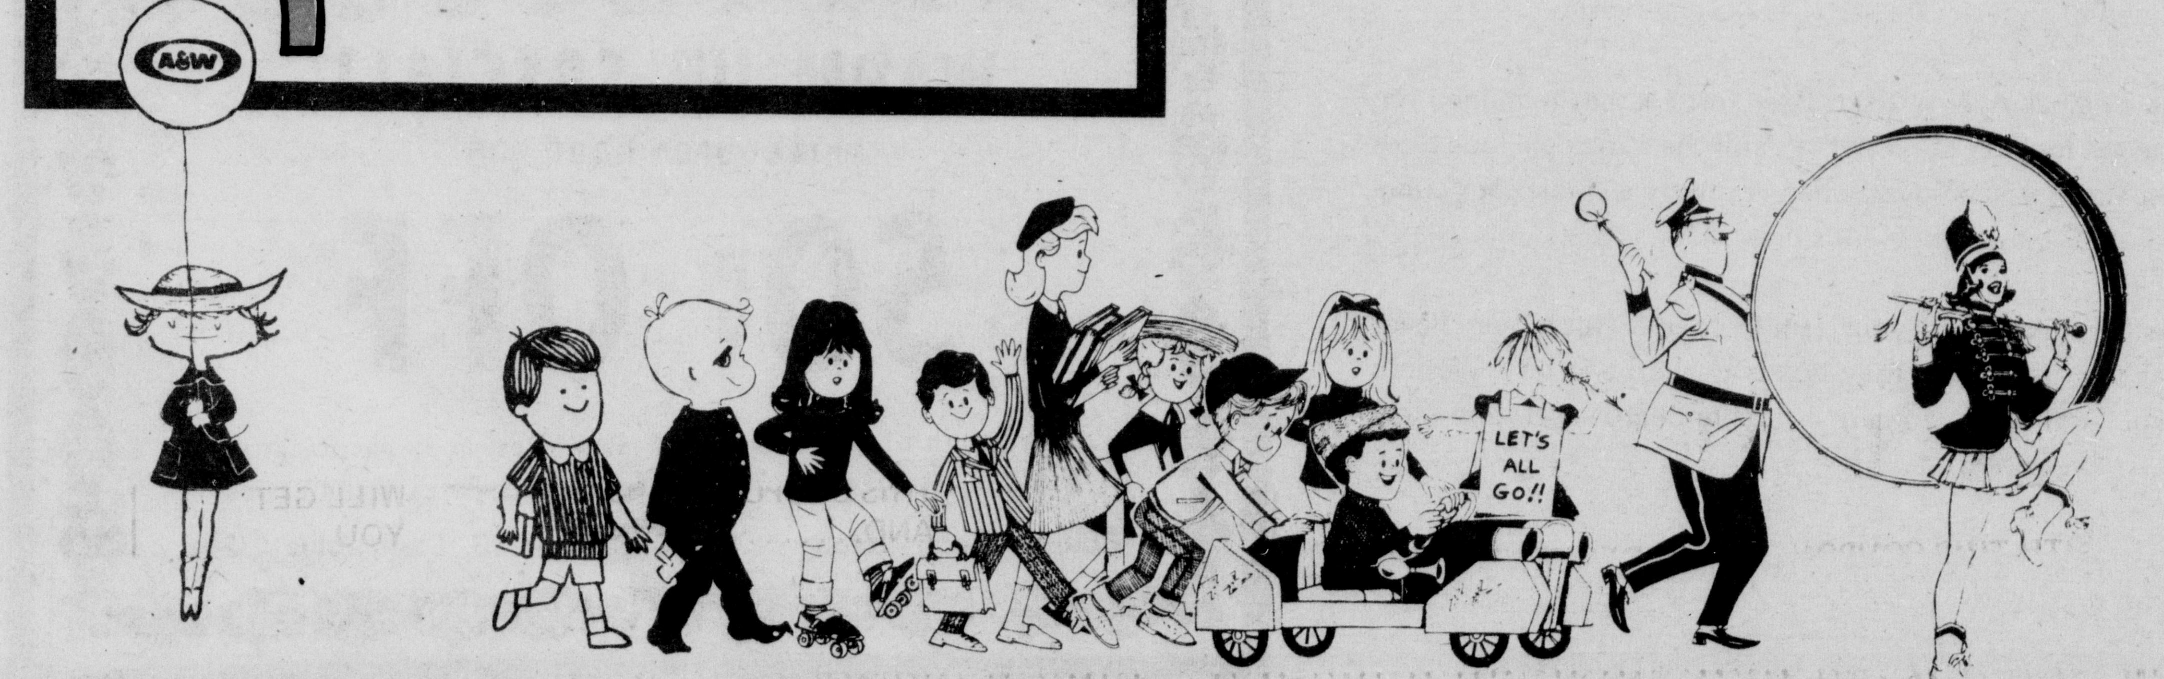
Next time you are hungry sail into our A & W for the greatest hamburger you ever ate. You'll say "Das ist Prima". We'll say "Dankechen", you'll say "Bittechen" und ve vill all be very happy ever after.



COME BLOW YOUR HORN

When you're on the go, you'll like our fast, friendly drive-in service. The food is great and the price is right. Tonight is a good time to give Mom the night off. Order it "Here" or "To Go".

So, Come Blow Your Horn, we'll understand, but it's even easier if you use our regular ordering system. If you like, you can "Ring Our Bell" too. We'll have your order waiting when you arrive.



THE LEGEND BEHIND THE HOTDOG

Barons of old Germany savored a special treat called Frankfort or Frankfurt sausage . . . A careful blending of spiced beef and pork. Years later, wrapping the sausage in a flavorful bun was an innovation of the early puritans, creating a truly American delicacy. So American in fact, that the frankfurter was first commercially served at the Polo Grounds, home of the New York Giants. It was named "Hot Dog" by T.A. Dorgan a New York Sports Cartoonist. The late President Franklin Roosevelt even served hot dogs on the White House lawn to the King and Queen of England. We just wish we could have been there to let the royal couple know how really good hot dogs can be when they are served with cold, foamy A & W Root Beer. Pity the poor puritans, No baseball, No A & W Root Beer, No Car Hops, in fact, No cars! . . . And the closest thing they had to Modern Music was Plymouth Rock. (Ugh!)

FINE FOOD - FAST SERVICE SINCE 1919

June 20, 1971, marked the 51st anniversary of A & W Root Beer. It was first sold commercially at a little stand in Lodi, California owned by the company's founder Roy W. Allen.

The internationally known trade name came about when Allen joined in partnership with an employee named Fred Wright. Thus the name A & W.

The A & W Root Beer outlet in Sacramento, which was opened in 1923, is considered to be the first "drive-in" in the United States. The Root Beer dispenser was mounted on a trailer and the ice cold beverage was served to customers in their cars.

TV NOTES

ByJACK GAVER

CBS has animated one-hour specials of three classic tales on tap. "Robin Hood" gets exposure on Nov. 14, "Treasure Island" is slated for Nov. 28 and "A Christmas Carol" will be aired Dec. 12, the latter a repeat of a Dec. 13, 1970, telecast.

Christmas anyone? NBC has Perry Como hosting a musical-variety salute to that season on Dec. 9, with Mitzi Gaynor, Art Carney and The Establishment appearing. Bing Crosby, who must have made the holiday scene at the same time as Santa Claus, will be doing his 36th Christmas show for the network on Dec. 14, starting back in the pre-video radio days.

For the 1972-73 season, ABC promises a series of hour-long programs for children that will be televised weekdays after school hours on a monthly basis. Education, not entertainment, will be stressed.

Bill Cosby's first special for CBS, to be broadcast Oct. 31, will be a half-hour combination live action and animation musical, "Aesop's Fables," with the comedian serving as storyteller Aesop.

Billy Kidd, first to win both amateur and professional world skiing titles in the same year, 1970, will be special commentator for NBC's coverage of the XI Olympic Winter Games in Sapporo, Japan, beginning Feb. 2, 1972.

CBS will telecast finals of the Miss Teenage America contest from Fort Worth, Texas on Dec. 3.

Ray Bolger will be seen in a guest star role this season in "Nanny and the Professor."

Milton Berle and Phyllis Diller will co-star in an episode of television's "Love, American Style."

Barbara Eden, star of the defunct "I Dream of Jeanie" series, will star in the title role of "Shirley," an ABC-TV Movie of the Weekend.

SIDNEY POITIER portrays a horse wrangler in "Duel at Diablo," a Western movie to be colorcast tonight at 9 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. It is a repeat.

Jack Lord Finds Pacific Paradise

By VERNON SCOTT

HONOLULU (UPI) — Jack Lord has followed his star from the New York theater to Hollywood movies and finally what he considers paradise: a television series in Hawaii.

It is here Jack and his wife, Marie, live and work. Here they plan to spend the rest of their lives.

Lord's life style is different from any other actor in television.

HE LIVES IN twin condominium apartments a scant 60 feet from where the blue-green breakers roll up to the beach.

Each morning Jack is up and jogging before sunrise to the beat of the combers breaking out just beyond the reef.

"God picked us up and transplanted us down here," Lord says. "We're caressed by the trade winds and surrounded by exotic birds and beautiful flowers. I'll live here as long as I'm on this earth."

Lord's enthusiasm isn't blunted by the appalling demands of his work in "Hawaii Five-O" in which he plays a police detective.

DURING THE WEEK he arises at 4 a.m. to study his script and jog. Marie is up a half-hour earlier to fix his breakfast which often includes cornbread. Jack eats a longshoreman's breakfast for the long, arduous day ahead.

A limousine picks him up at 6:30 and he is driven to the first location site of the day's filming.

Because the entire show is photographed on the islands at various locations, the troupe must work from the first good sunlight until sunset.

Inasmuch as Hawaii is considered a permanent location, cast and crew work six days a week compared with the five-day week in Hollywood. Jack is home for dinner and falls into bed at 9 p.m.

CHILDLESS, THE Lords have converted one of the bedroom suites into an office where Jack (as part owner of the series) works on scripts, correspondence and other business matters relating to the show.

On Sunday, his only day off, Jack enjoys surfing to the snow white beach in front of his house.

Fortunately, the CBS series shoots only eight and a half months a year. The balance of the time Jack devotes to his avocation, photography.

He has written and illustrated a book which he describes as a love letter about Hawaii, describing it as a trip through the last Eden. He plans to have the book published later this year.

WHAT LITTLE social life the Lords enjoy is generally saved for the hiatus when they go to a few parties and entertain at home.

Marie is a gourmet cook, trained at a Cordon Bleu school in New York City which was home to the Lords for many years. Since moving to the islands, Marie has added Hawaiian specialities to her dinners.

After four years in the islands both Jack and Marie have adopted the casual, colorful clothes of the natives.

Later this year the Lords will come to Los Angeles to close their apartment, "so we won't have any reason to leave the islands in the future."

LORD PREFERS to spend his time painting landscapes, photographing flowers and birds and surfing.

"This is the life," he says. "The only life for me."

BILL CULLEN is one of the veterans of television quiz and contest programs. He currently presides over the "Three on a Match" series, seen daytimes, Mondays through Fridays on NBC television channels. Three contestants match wits against each other daily in vying for cash and valuable merchandise prizes. And Cullen presides with quips and encouragement.

On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Please count Dick Jurgens and Woody Herman among those leaders of the big bands of yesteryear who refuse to say uncle to Father Time.

Jurgens' band produced a vibrant dance rhythm which sometimes sent less enduring couples to the sidelines. It had a lot of bounce and kept everybody happy.

Herman also painted a pretty dance scene, but Woody seemed to be able to foresee the future in musical trends and his band was, in those days, a little far out.

BOTH JURGENS and Herman have recorded new albums that are centainly worth listening to, even though the generation that is being weaned on current rock styles may find the music father tame.

"Here's That Band Again Today" by Dick Jurgens and His Orchestra (Amsterdam AM-12011) is updated in some respects, especially on such compositions of recent vintage as "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" and "Love Story." But when Jurgens goes into a lilting medley consisting of "Marie," "Them There Eyes," "Do You Ever Think of Me" and "Goody Goody." he is bound to recall fond memories from the old timers.

"Brand New" by Woody Herman (Fantasy 8414) is more in tune with the present times than the Dick Jurgens disc. Herman, a truly great clarinetist, keeps himself in the background generally and lets Mike Bloomfield enact the role of star. Herman also plays alto and soprano sax.

One of the better numbers, Ivory Joe Hunter's "I Almost Lost My Mind," allows Herman to step forth as a vocalist with some support from Tony Klatka on trumpet.

HERB ALPERT, who would have been a sensation among the big bands of the World War II years, has never turned out a bad album. Alpert's music is almost hypnotic, so it's generally not associated with dance tempos. But on "Summertime" by Herb Alpert & The Tijuana Brass (A&M SP 4314), Herb offers a lively arrangement of "Strike Up the Band" that would be ideal for dancers who once were known as jitterbugs. However, the arrangement for the title tune, "Summertime," bears absolutely no resemblance to George Gershwin's great blues number no matter how far you stretch your imagination.

Like Herb Alpert, Danny Davis has kept the spirit of the big band alive. Most of the time Danny's music is country-flavored, which is great for those who enjoy to dance in slow tempo. On "Super Country" by Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass (RCA LSP-4571) there are several good tunes.

And there is a notable version of a march evergreen, "Under the Double Eagle."

AUTUMN IS UPON US

Fly on, fly on, you south-bound birds,
Fly from the marshes, the woods, the bushes,
Limitless out of the dusk, out of the cedars and pines.
Fly on through the smoke-blue evening sky,
Wise birds, fly south.

Autumn is upon us,
Yesterday it was summer, but the ducks know.
Wise birds, fly south,
Autumn is upon us.

What man knows of tides' ebb
Where sea-rocks show darkest skirts?
Of sunsets' flight and stilled cypress
Bent in salute. These shore weathered trees
Reached out to greet moistures for green tops.
Of grey fogs horizon cover pierced by
Farallones' sharp light
Though never bright as Master Suns'
Crimson path over water to His feet.
Shore-bound to stand when His golden path
Is gone and He can not walk the sun's way
When all light is turned on grey.

Sea Captain Turned Pilot

Archibald Simenstad Now Has Ships By Thousands

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Capt. Archibald M. Simenstad of San Rafael first went to sea from his native Seattle when he dropped out of high school at the age of 15.

Now 60, he is the president of the San Francisco Bar Pilots, an historical elite of 25 former sea captains with 900 years of experience.

In his long career, Simenstad went from a green deckhand on a freighter to Yokohama to captain of a half dozen ships, ranging from a Navy attack transport in World War II to luxury passenger cruise ships in later years.

NOW, AS ONE of the pilots handling more than 8,700 ships a year through the treacherous bar outside the Golden Gate, he skippers about 340 ships a year. Only now he lives at home, no longer undertaking those long voyages at sea that were required of him when he was captain of a ship.

Returning from his first voyage, Simenstad finished high school, then shipped out again on his lifelong career.

Ambition to be the captain of a ship struck early:

"I saw the captain always had the best food. He had his own servant who, when it was foggy, brought him toast and coffee up on the bridge. I'd see him down associating with all the good-looking lady passengers and eating in the dining salon in what I considered great splendor.

HE'D GO ASHORE in every port in a limousine and all dressed up fit to kill. And sometimes he'd carry his golf clubs ashore and his boy carried the clubs out to the car.

"And, gee, I thought that was a great life."

"But," he conceded, "by the time I became captain, a lot of that was gone."

Attending natuical school in port at Seattle, and studying at sea, he got his third mate's license and became a junior officer on the President Hoover when he was 21.

SIMENSTAD entered the Navy in 1941 as a lieutenant junior grade, coming out six years later as a commander. He saw combat as captain of an attack transport at Saipan, Leyte, Lingayen Gulf and Okinawa.

He returned to American President Lines as a captain in 1947, then served as the company's port captain in San Francisco, Manila and Singapore, living abroad with his family for nearly six years.

Returning from Asia in 1954, he moved to San Rafael, settling down for the past 17 years at 67 Forbes Avenue.

SIMENSTAD and his wife, Dorothy (Teddy), were married three months before Pearl Harbor separated them temporarily for the duration of the war. They have twins, Michael, also of San Rafael, and Geraldine, of Oregon, and four grandchildren.

With evident pride, the captain said his son is second in command on a container ship running between the West Coast and Vietnam. Michael graduated from the California Maritime Academy at Vallejo, his father noted, adding it was "one of the finest schools on the West Coast."

As for proposals by state officials to close the academy, Simenstad said this would "be doing the gravest disservice to the United States and the people of California that they ever could do. It's absolutely ridiculous to close that academy."

TO ILLUSTRATE his argument, he pointed to the worldwide shortage of skippers and ship officers, a shortage reflected in rapidly rising salaries. Simenstad said he was making $16,000 a year as a captain when he became a pilot 11 years ago, and last year made about $18,500 as a pilot.

But the man who took over his ship made over $30,000 last year, "and before 1972 is finished he'll be up to $38,000."

The pilots got a 22 per cent rate hike approved last year by the state, a hike he said would have pushed his annual income to $30,000 "if it wasn't for the strike" that hit West Coast shipping in July. An additional 5 per cent rate hike has been recommended to the governor by the State Pilotage Rate Committee.

SIMENSTAD stressed that the best qualified captains no longer will be interested in being pilots unless pay keeps pace with the rest of the maritime industry.

It's not only risky and responsible work, but the hours are long. Each pilot works almost 10 hours a day three months steady, then takes a month's vacation. That works out to 90 days off a year, well below the average workingman's 102 weekend days plus vacations and holidays.

Three-quarters of the pilots' working hours are after 6 p.m. and before 8 a.m., and fog engulfs the gate an average of 1,721 hours a year — twice the average on the East Coast.

SIMENSTAD also pointed to the dangers pilots face as they leap between their small boats and the ships they pilot. The dangers are becoming "extremely difficult" as ships grow larger, he added.

"It's not like the older ships, when they had a few rungs on the ladder. Now they have tall, long ladders." Because of their size, the new giants often are unable to hold a position broadside to the wind so the pilot can use the calm side to board or debark.

"You get off an automobile ship, 10 decks high, 10 stories high, and you get on an automated ladder that's run by a crewman and he doesn't know which way he's lowering it, and you go down there and you're way down here 60-70 feet down here on the water, and if anything happened . . ."

SIMENSTAD recalled "two very hairy incidents last winter. I was getting off a high-sided Japanese automobile ship, and I walked down an accommodation ladder to about 30 feet above the water where they had a pilot's ladder hanging down the ship's side.

"The ship was rolling and the accommodation ladder would swing way out about 15 feet and come back against the side of the ship with a terrific crash. I waited until I could make a flying leap to the pilot ladder and dropped about five feet so I wouldn't be hit by the accommodation ladder, and I was able to get into the yawl to the pilot boat."

The other time he had to squeeze himself aboard a container ship through a side port "a midget would have difficulty getting through." At six feet, four inches and 215 pounds, Simenstad is not a midget.

ON THE RARE occasions when the sea is too heavy to get aboard incoming ships, "we just tell them the bar is closed, and usually they heave to outside until the weather moderates." This happened for only about 12 hours last year.

But pilots also get stuck aboard outgoing ships when the weather is too rough to transfer to the yawl. Most of the time he lands in another West Coast port.

"One pilot was on his way to Tokyo, but as the weather moderated enough off Humboldt Bay they sent a tugboat out to take him off," Simenstad said.

BUT THE MAJOR problems confronted by the pilots are inadequate navigation aids and regulations. Surprisingly, ships still are not required to have radar, even passenger ships.

Most modern ships do, but none is required. Its cost installed is only about $20,000.

Also there is no requirement that ships monitor common radio channels so they can communicate with one another.

And no one has the power to regulate ship traffic, even in crowded quarters like San Francisco Bay. It's like running an airport on a foggy night without a control tower.

THE RESULT can be a collision, such as the one between two oil tankers under the Golden Gate Bridge last January. If pilots had been aboard, he declared, "it wouldn't have happened."

Oil companies don't like the extra cost for pilots, he noted.

Simenstad brands the unregulated system as outdated. Every ship should have a working radar, monitor common radio channels and carry a pilot going through the gate, he said. And instead of merely advisory radar information through the Coast Guard, traffic should be regulated — but by pilots working with the Coast Guard, he insisted.

THE COAST Guard's Harbor Advisory Radar system now is manned by enlisted men. "I've got nothing against enlisted men," he said, "but they're not experienced."

Simenstad has other complaints and proposals for improvements. He especially scored the Coast Guard for replacing old, reliable diaphones at the gate with "far inferior" foghorns that "lack the power for directional guidance.

"You don't hear them early enough, and when you do hear them, you can't pinpoint them."

THE DISPUTED horns on the gate were installed about five years ago without consultation with the pilots, Simenstad noted. "We objected and the Coast Guard said they were temporary, but all of a sudden we find that the 'temporary' horns became the permanent horns.

"As a result, we have foghorns that actually, with the new type of ships, would make it very difficult to bring a ship into the port now without radar."

He insisted, however, that "our association with the Coast Guard is excellent. They don't always go by our recommendations, but at least now they have public hearings."

HE ALSO FAULTED the diaphone on the south tower of the Golden Gate Bridge. It should be turned more to the south so it could be heard in time to prevent navigation into the middle of the channel.

Mariners, with the notable exception of Navy captains, steer to the right of midchannel to avoid collision. Navy theory, however, assumes the middle of the channel is reserved for warships. Any miscalculation means Navy ships end up running against the traffic on the wrong side of the channel, he said.

"This is not a port to learn to pilot in," Simenstad said of the Navy practice.

HE DISCOUNTED the proposal by some that automatic alarms be installed on ships to warn of impending collision. "In most cases, if you keep a good watch on the radar, there should be no difficulty."

But one improvement, he said, that is coming is the redesign of ship bridges so that the captain will have simultaneous surveillance, control and communication, as in an airplane cockpit. Bridges traditionally still are vast elongated rooms, with the captain on a constant prowl almost certain to flatten his feet.

"I remember when I was captain, I sure walked plenty," Simenstad said. "Many times on the China coast, and going through the Straits of Malacca, when you were having rain squalls, I was up for hours. And the Sumatra Coast, and going through the Java Sea and the Mediterranean."

CAPTAINS usually have flat feet, however, by the time they get to command a ship, he said. "Usually their metatarsal arch is pretty well gone by the time theyare captain from the hours when they were the chief mate and walking those hot steel decks."

Updating archaic laws and practices, he said, has been stymied by the steamship and oil companies. "They have us boxed up. They go to our state Legislature and say, 'Let the federal government take care of it.' Yet in Washington they tell them, 'Let the state take care of it.' "

As a result, danger at sea is "increasing every day," he said. The January oil spill, he warned, was "just a taste. It could happen much more. It was just a blessing this was a minor spill."

THE OIL companies, he said, even plan to cut port costs by building offshore oil facilities in Drake's Bay. "I know they're considering it," he said, predicting the public would oppose an oil terminal off Point Reyes National Seashore.

"I think they have it all planned, but whether they can get away with it is problematical," he said.

HE ALSO suggested a buoy west of the south tower or a radar reflector on the tower "so you can figure out where the south tower is." He made the same proposal before bridge and Coast Guard officials shortly after the January collision, but nothing has been done.

Locating the north tower presents no problem on radar because it is on the Marin shoreline. The south tower, however, is well off the San Francisco shoreline.

Not surprisingly, the improvement stressed most by Simenstad was to require pilots on all ships navigating the gate. About 80 per cent use pilots, he said, the exceptions being largely oil tankers and smaller Navy ships.

PILOTAGE IS compulsory for all foreign vessels and vessels from or to a foreign port.

Most domestic traffic to and from other U.S. ports is exempt from the requirement to have a pilot.

But only the bar pilots can keep abreast of changes of the harbor floor and its peculiarities in all types of weather, swells, tides and currents, Simenstad said.

Ships are charged a minimum of $185 for a pilot, and the average fee is $250. The fee is based on the depth of a ship, a disputed system now that ships have triples in length without corresponding increases in depth. (The minimum would go to $200 under the hike submitted to the governor.

SIMENSTAD said the pilots again have been frustrated by opposition from steamship companies in their campaign to base their fees on the length and width as well as depth of the ships. This would eliminate the inequity for smaller vessels, which may carry only one-twelfth the cargo tonnage the newer "longitudinal skyscrapers" carry, the pilots argue.

Contrary to some lore about the pilots, a captain never relinquishes command of his ship to a pilot, except in the Panama Canal. The captain remains legally responsible for safe operation of his ship, even if he turns its operation over to the pilot.

The bar pilots also are pressing the state to allow them four additional pilots to cut down on the workload. "But they haven't seen fit for their own reasons to approve it," Simenstad said.

THE PILOTS, incidentally, turn about $35,000 a year into the state's general fund. In a unique arrangement, each is a partner in the business, and pilot boats, crews and other expenses are paid from the pilots' fees.

But the pilots are in the same inflationary squeeze as landlubbers. It cost $35 to put a pilot aborad a ship 17 years ago, but $127 today.

Do pilots ever run into language problems on the bridge of a foreign ship? "No, most have someone who speaks English. But if they don't, you use your hands and just watch them a little closer."

Pilot boats have been stationed 12 miles outside the Golden Gate ever since the organization was formed in 1850 by the first California Legislature. The organization long has been so exclusive that a decade may pass before death or retirement create a vacancy.

SIMENSTAD still is 11 years away from mandatory retirement, and plans to work "as long as I feel well. I just like the job, regardless of the fact it isn't as good as it used to be. I'm going to stay here and just try and improve the conditions as much as I possibly can."

Now he has the best of both worlds in many ways, he says — the sea and a home ashore he can return to at the end of the work day.

A Church Has Cause For A Celebration

Redwoods Presbyterians Can Trace A 75-Year History Of Congregation

By MIRIAM AUSTIN

As Redwoods Presbyterian Church prepares to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding, thoughts turn back to a very young Marin County.

On Rancho Corte Madera del Presidio, a mill having been erected in 1849, wood was being cut to supply the army garrison in San Francisco.

In 1886 the townsite of Larkspur was laid out with lots large enough to pasture horses and raise chickens, at prices ranging from $125 to $300.

IN 1890 THE Northwestern Pacific railway was built and the rail and ferry transportation spurred the building of summer homes by San Francisco residents.

With increasing population, the need for a church was felt in what was to become Marin's "Twin Cities" of Larkspur and Corte Madera. On Oct. 4, 1896, 36 local residents plus two San Francisco Theological Seminary students met in the Corte Madera Grammar School, which had been built in 1872, to form the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera. Alexander Bouick of San Anselmo was the first elder.

Mrs. Mary Eastman, the last living charter member, was active in the church until her death in 1957 at 97 years of age.

Mrs. Lula Horne, still a member of the church, joined as a teen-ager soon after its formation.

Mrs. Horne recalls that the new congregation met in the school for four years, then briefly in a cottage owned by Mrs. Eastman, before returning to the school until its own church building was erected.

On Nov. 30, 1902, the new church, built on a lot on Corte Madera Road donated by Will Pixley, was ready for occupancy. Rev. Charles G. Patterson preached to an audience of 26.

In 1904, because of the problem of distance in horse and buggy and "shanks' mare" times, it was decided to build a second church in Larkspur on the slope above Madrone Avenue not far from the town hall. Dr. James S. MacDonald served both places with services at different times.

Because of small attendance, this building was sold in 1912, becoming a private home, while its members rejoined with the Corte Madera congregation.

For years Belle Brown had rented ground space in Baltimore Canyon for tent campers from San Francisco each summer. When the 1906 earthquake

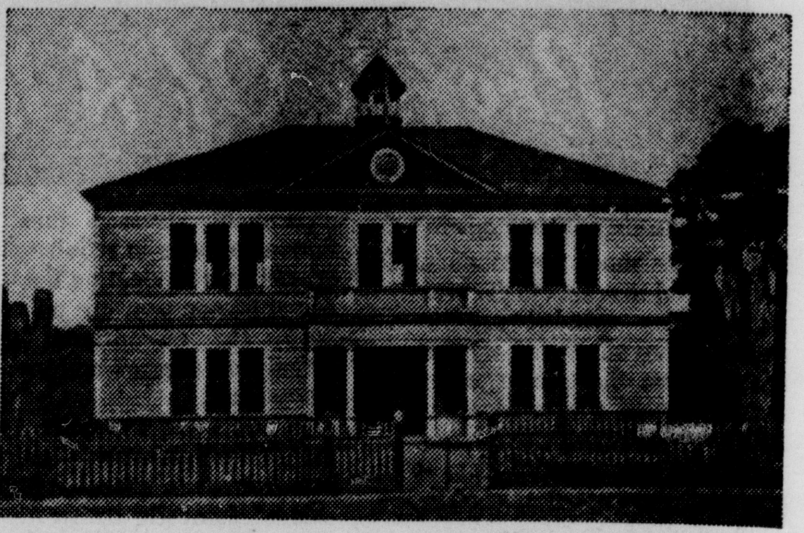
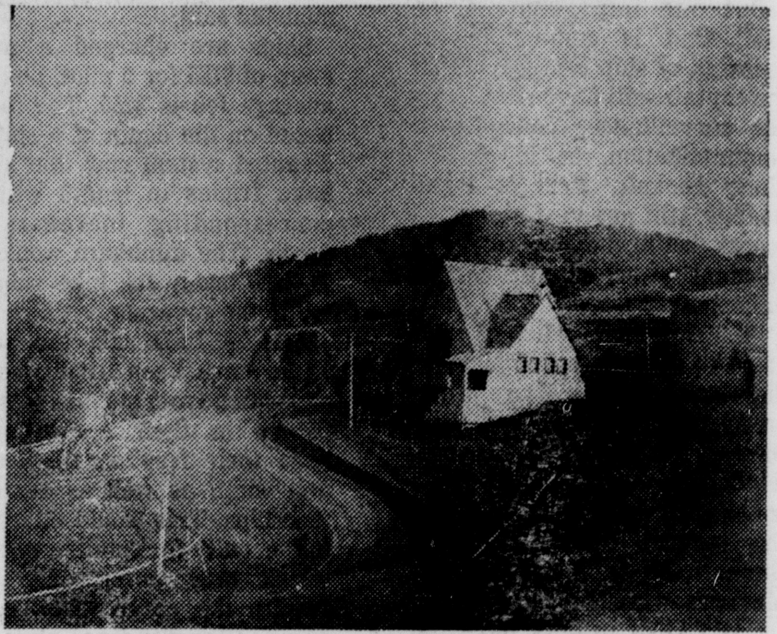
PIONEER PASTOR of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera, now the Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur, from 1904 to 1910 was Dr. James S. MacDonald. He conducted services at both the main church on Corte Madera Road in Corte Madera and the branch church above Madrone Avenue in Larkspur.

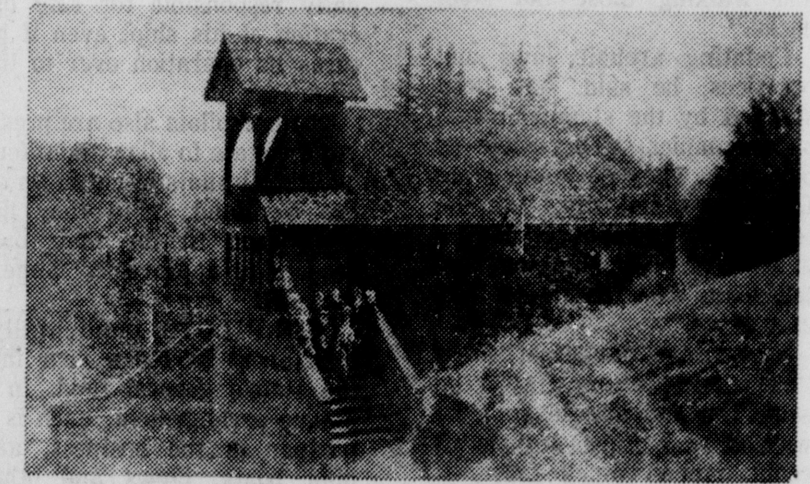
FOR MANY YEARS the women belonging to the service and social organization, the Thimble Club, were a primary source of financial support for the struggling Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera, now the Redwoods Church. Badly-needed monies were raised by a variety of activities. And when the Thimble Club built a clubhouse in 1930, it became the new home for the Presbyterian Sunday school and worship services. Later the Thimble Club building was renamed Eastman Hall and continued to serve the community well for many years.



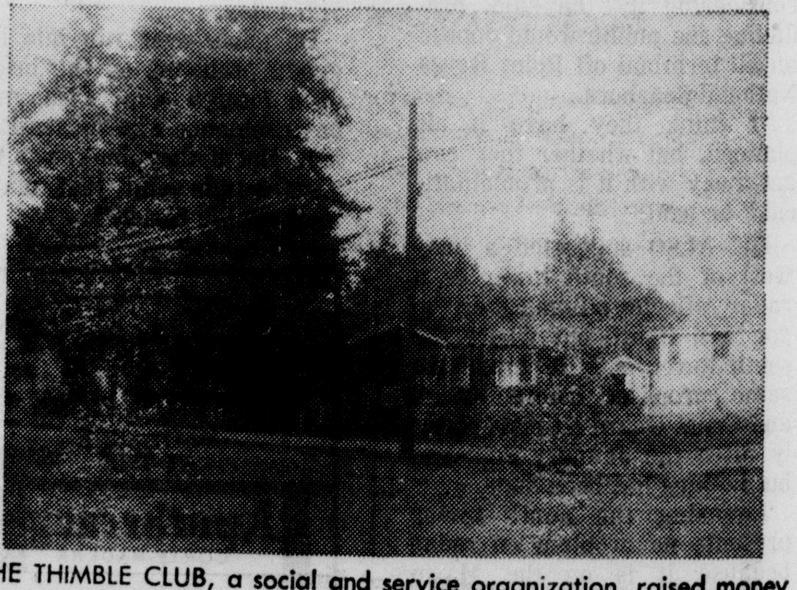
THE CHURCH that was to become the Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur was organized Oct. 4, 1896, in the Corte Madera Grammar School shown here, when 36 residents and two seminary students met for that purpose. The earliest religious services for the new congregation were also held in the school building, built in 1872.



THIS FADED old photograph shows the church building erected in 1902 by the Corte Madera and Larkspur Presbyterians on a Corte Madera Road lot donated by Will Pixley. It was the congregations' first edifice of its own and continued in use until into the 1930s when it was sold for use as a private home.



BECAUSE OF THE difficult transportation situation of the turn-of-the-century, the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera constructed this branch church in Larkspur above Madrone Avenue in 1904. It was sold in 1912, to become a private home, and the Larkspur continent rejoined the Corte Madera worshipers.



THE THIMBLE CLUB, a social and service organization, raised money through the years for the struggling Presbyterian church. And in the 1930s built the clubhouse shown here which was used for a time by the church for its services and Sunday school. Later the clubhouse was renamed Eastman Hall, and eventually it was presented to the City of Larkspur which used it as a youth center.

hit, many burned out families fled to Marin. Almost overnight Baltimore Canyon changed from a campground to a community of residences and Larkspur incorporated as a town in 1908. Nevertheless, in 1910 it was still a village with unpaved streets and white frame structures facing on dirt sidewalks or board walks.

In 1915 Larkspur was described as a "charming town of summer homes, a couple of farms, well patronized taverns, and a few San Francisco commuters." In 1916 Corte Madera incorporated with a population of 500.

Looking to the future, the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera bought land on the corner of Magnolia and Alexander Avenue in 1917 and 1922.

Organized in 1907, the Thimble Club, a social and service club, many of whose members were also members of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera, made the church its chief beneficiary. The women held bazaars, food sales, made rag rugs, gave luncheons, etc., contributing over $6,500 during some 42 years to the struggling church.

However, the women were unhappy at having no place for social functions except the church. There were no pews but the stiff, straight chairs were a problem to shift around.

In 1930, in cooperation with the trustees of the church, the women erected a clubhouse on the Magnolia Avenue church property, permitting the use of the building for Sunday school and church services.

With a social hall available, more comfortable chairs were installed in the church. These were fastened to the floor, each member buying his own for $2.

During many of the early years Mrs. Eastman and her gardener raised flowers to decorate the church.

Mrs. Lula Horne recalls how she and Mrs. Eastman regularly carried bouquets to the church on Saturday evenings to decorate for the two Sunday services.

On the completion of the Golden Gate Bridge in 1937, all of Marin County changed to a rapidly growing commuter community.

In that year, after much discussion, the church building on Corte Madera Road was sold for $750, and converted into a private residence. The trustees then took over the Thimble Club building, making it available for club meetings.

The bank loan of $2,800 on the $3,600 building had been largely repaid from rental receipts. As a tax-free church building it could no longer be rented, but the Board of National Missions and two members assumed the remaining $600 bank loan.

For the next two years the church met in the Thimble Club building but was again faced with inadequate space for Sunday School and social functions. Trying to solve some of its problems, the congregation joined forces with the Corte Madera Episcopal Church as the United Protestant Church.

After two years of joint worship, the Presbyterian group returned to the Thimble Club building until its new church was built.

Intermittently, through the years, Board of National Missions funds had been provided to supplement local funds. During the depression the small congregation found it very difficult to pay its pastor's salary of $50 a month.

In 1940, Rev. Vernon Brown became full time pastor and hopes were high that a church building would soon be a reality. However, World War II intervened and many members as well as the pastor were soon involved in shipyard and other war work and service. Reverend Brown conducted worship services and Mrs. Brown managed the Sunday School and did calling.

Through the years many seminary students served in pastoral capacities. Alan Philp did so from 1944-46; then, on his ordination, served as pastor in 1946 and 1947. During his pastorate,

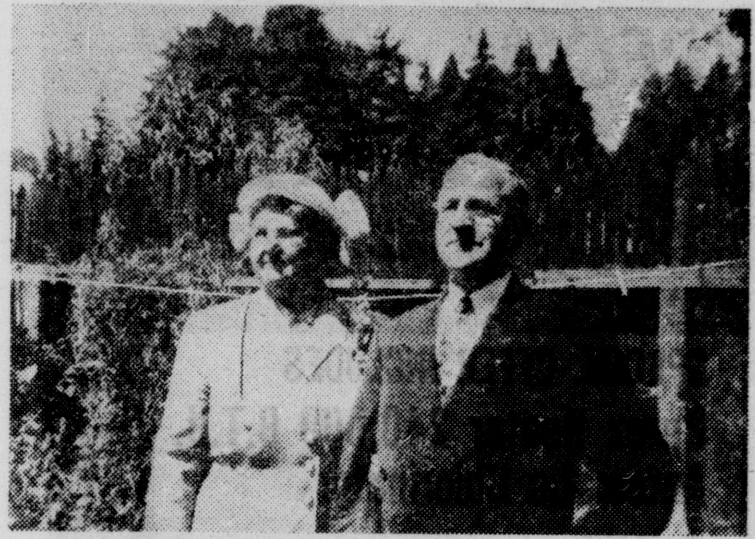
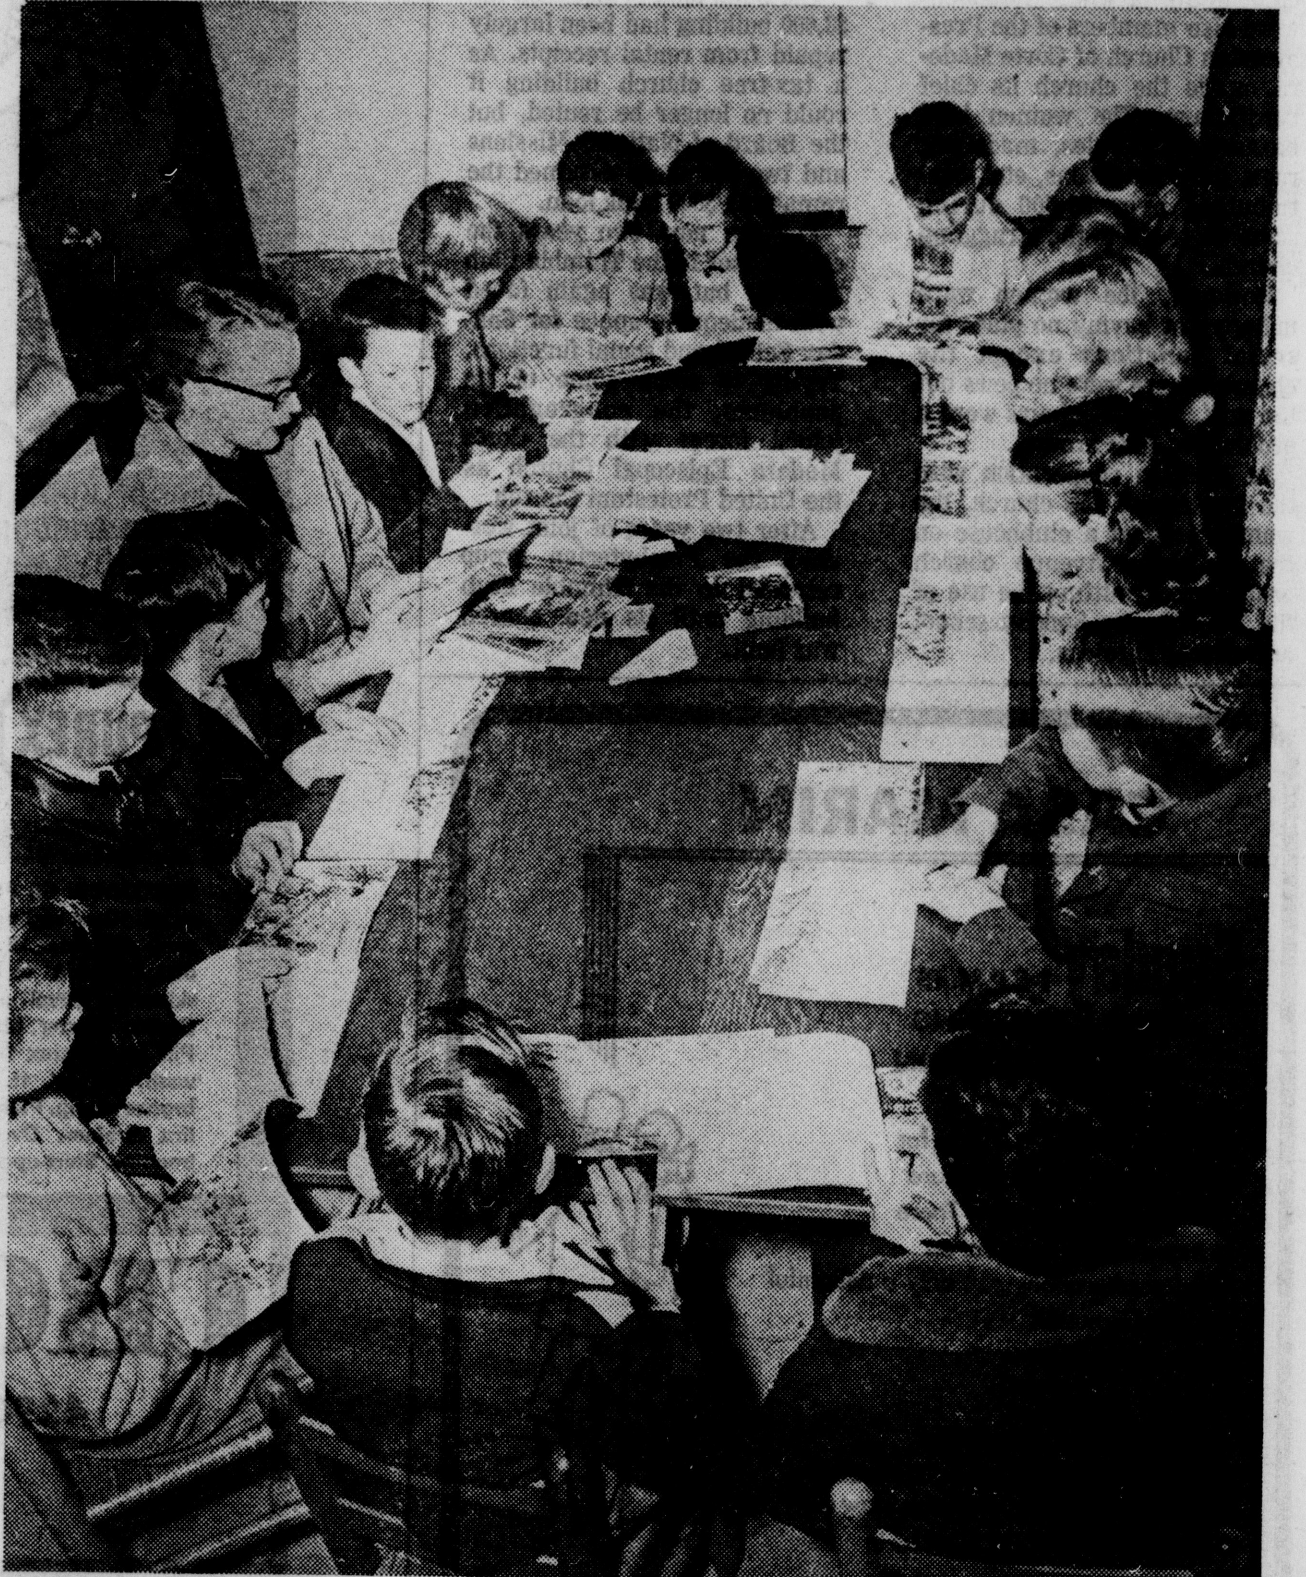
IN HIS PULPIT at the Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Rev. Frank Hamilton was pictured in 1970 delivering his final sermon to that congregation. He had served the church from February of 1962 and was succeeded by Rev. William Thompson, the current pastor.



REV. VERNON BROWN, pictured with Mrs. Brown, was Redwoods Presbyterian's first full-time pastor, serving from 1940 into 1944.

REV. ALLAN PHILP, then the pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera which was later to become the Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur, posed in 1946 with three of the senior members of his congregation. The women are, left to right, Miss Sally Daingerfield, the late Mrs. Mary Eastman and Mrs. Lula E. Horne. Mrs. Eastman died in 1957 at the age of 97, the last surviving member of the church organized in 1896. Mrs. Horne, who joined soon after the formation, is now the church's senior member and has been a source for much of its history.



THE REDWOODS Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur has always prided itself in its very active program of Christian education for its youngsters. This photograph was taken in 1956 and shows a Sunday school class of second grade boys and girls following a lesson. They are now young adults and a number of them are still active with the church. Rev. Wayne Hansen was then the pastor and the Sunday school membership stood at around the 300 figure and was growing.

History Of A Church

Redwoods Marks An Anniversary

active plans were started for the first unit of a church building although membership was only 82.

Dr. Earl W. Haney's pastorate, 1947-51, saw the membership increase to 150 with a Sunday School enrollment of 200. In 1950 the church was reincorporated in perpetuity under the name Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur in recognition of the grove of redwoods beautifying its Magnolia Avenue site. The new building was dedicated in February, 1951.

At that time the Thimble Club building was officially renamed Eastman Hall.

Both communities were growing rapidly as was the church. Rev. Wayne Hansen served as pastro from 1952 to 1961 as the membership grew to 260 and the Sunday School to 350, and the church became entirely self supporting.

The second unit of the new church, an attractive sanctuary, was dedicated on June 14, 1959, with the first unit becoming known henceforth as Fellowship Hall.

To make way for the new building, the old Thimble Club was given to the City of Larkspur. It was moved across the railroad tracks on William Street and served as a youth center for several years. Finally termites and other problems got the best of it and the Larkspur Fire Department burned it in a practice session.

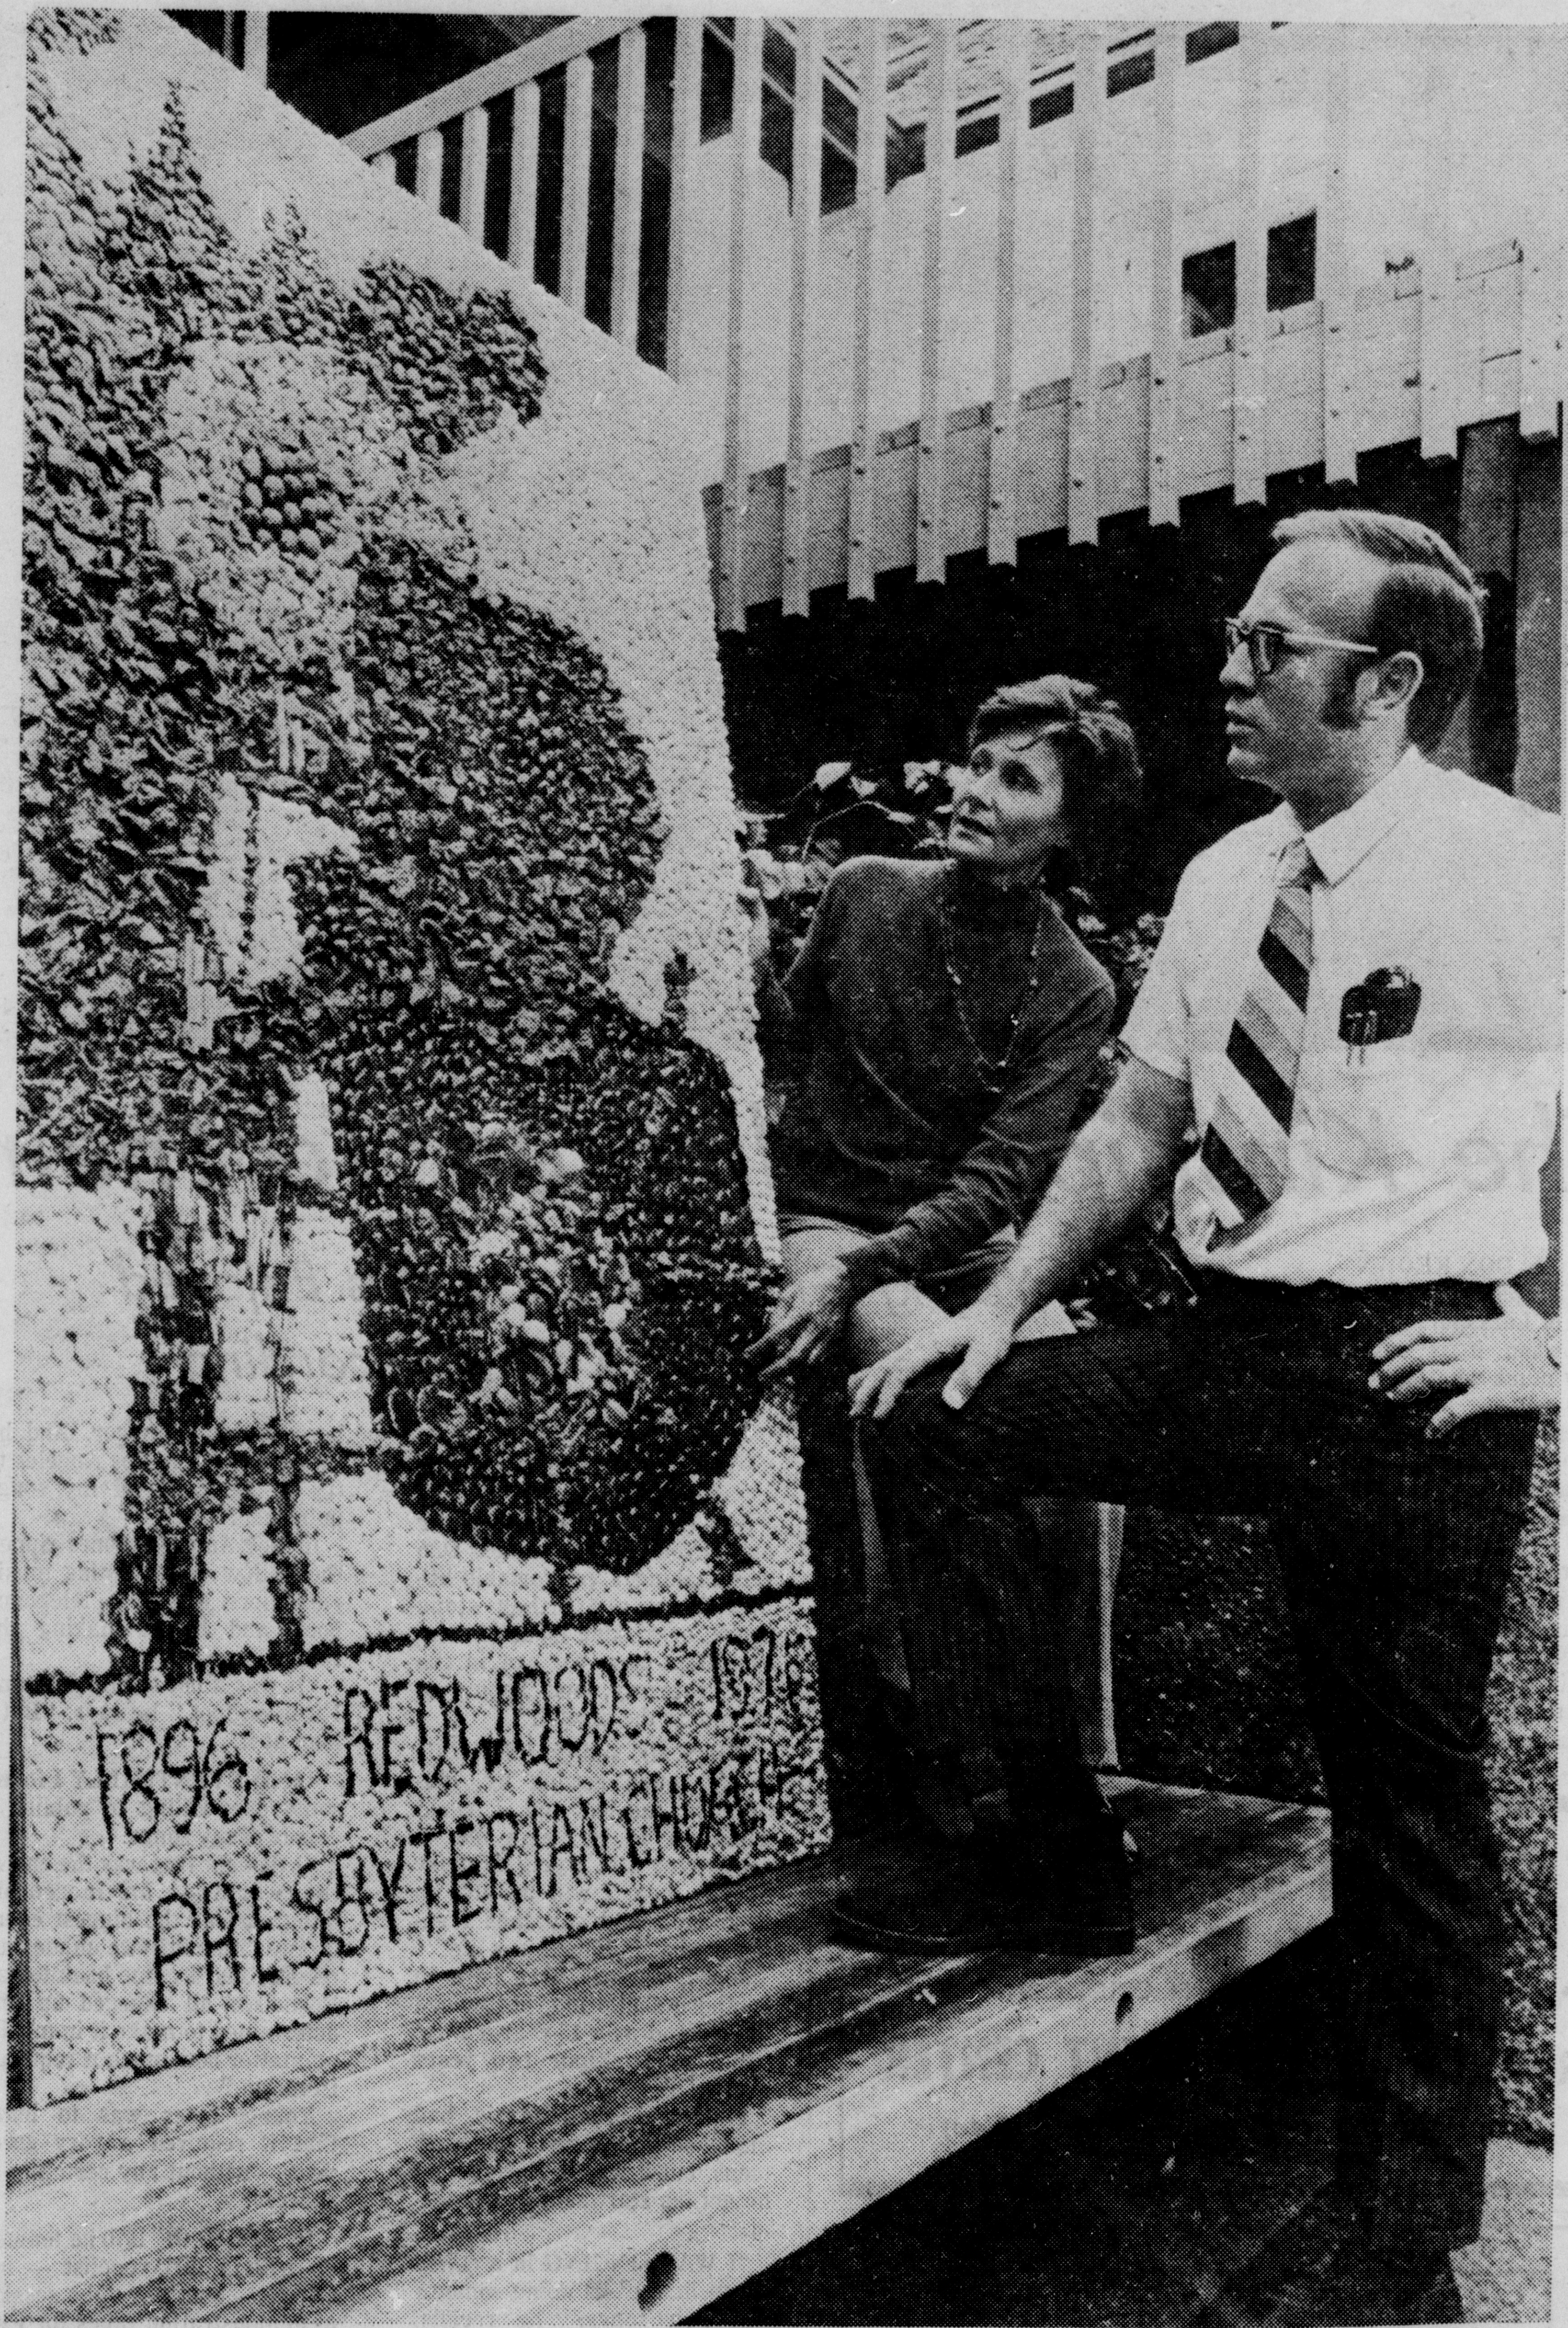
Rev. Frank Hamilton, installed on Feb. 4, 1962, served as pastor until June, 1970. Under his leadership church membership grew to 468 and the third, connecting unit, patio, and deck were added to the church in 1965.

Rev. William N. Johnson, the present pastor, was installed December 13, 1970.

Through the years a broad and varied program of worship, fellowship and service has been developed at Redwood Presbyterian for all ages from toddlers to the elderly. There are Sunday and week-day classes, discussion groups and special acitivities with a strong emphasis on youth.

The informal 9 a.m. "celebrative" service has special appeal to young people while the 11 o'clock "contemplative" service is more traditional. The coffee hour between the two services fosters friendships.

Plans for the ongoing life of the church involve a balanced program of worship, education, mission and community services. The church facilities are in almost constant use and its members participate in widely varied activities from youth groups to street ministry to hospital visiting.



THE PASTOR OF the Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Rev. William N. Thompson, admires the large mosaic created by the church school students and shown to him here by Mrs. Albert Clark, the church's director of Christian education. As designed by Guy Joy, the mosaic depicts in stone donated by congregation members the 75-year history of one of Marin's oldest churches.

In preparation for the church's 75th anniversary, the children and young people, under the direction of Mrs. Irene Clark, director of Christian education, have created a large and unique mosaic symbolizing the history of Redwoods Presbyterian Church. Members of the church have contributed small rocks from all over the world.

The mosaic was presented and unveiled Oct. 3.

On Oct. 7 the Women's Association luncheon meeting featured an historical fashion show tied in with a review of the events of the church's 75 years of history.

On Oct. 22 an Anniversary Dinner will be held at the San Francisco Theological Seminary. Several former pastors plan to be present.

An official representative of the San Francisco Theological seminary will attend, for ties between the Church and Seminary have been very close all through the years. There are always one or more seminary students in practical training for the ministry assisting at the church.

The chancel choir will present a musical sketch of the church's history. Brief speeches and an eight minute slide presentation of the "Church at Work Around the World" will complete the evening's program.

It will be a time for the membership of the little church that in its earliest years survived some hard going as it met in the schoolhouse or the Thimble Clubhouse to recollect its past, to assess its present, and to contemplate the future, hopeful that the next 75 years will be as filled with progress, service and devout dedication as has the last three-quarters of a century.

THE KINSHIP, one of the Bay Area's newest and most promising electric folk-rock groups, was at full strength when this photograph was taken. The members are, left to right, guitarist David O'Connor of Santa Cruz, guitarist David Sultzer of Santa Cruz, lead singer and co-writer Carole Musengo of San Francisco, and principal writer-singer-instrumentalist Bob Jones of Larkspur. The two guitarists join Jones and Miss Musengo only for their concert and recording appearances. The photograph is the one being used by Capitol Records to promote the Kinship's first recording, a single, featuring two of the Jones-written songs, "Love and Nothing More" and "Weep." A Kinship album is to be released next March.

The Kinship: Dedicated To Their Music

Young Group Already Has Enjoyed The Thrill Of A First Recording

By DON KEOWN

"It is nice," says young Bob Jones of Larkspur, "to live in a time when it is easy to do pretty much what one wants to do."

He acknowledges that it is a freedom that the generations of his parents and his grandparents did not enjoy.

And what Bob Jones wants to do is to immerse himself totally in his music.

He is doing that as one-half of a electric folk team called The Kinship which has just begin to taste the first fruits of success with a record out on the prestigious Capitol lable and with an increasing demand for their appearances in clubs.

Jones' partner is Carole Musengo of San Francisco, lead singer and co-writer.

SOMETIMES Jones and Miss Musengo are joined by two instrumentalists, guitarists David Sultzer and David O'Connor, both of Santa Cruz, to complete the group.

"We haven't made a whole lot of money out of our music as yet," Jones admits.

And he adds: "I have never met anyone in the business who was making a comfortable living. They are either stone broke, or making loads of money. Right now we are in the first category, and hoping to move into the second."

THEN HE smiles. "Sure, it's pretty tough getting by, full-time in music. And I could wake up at 90 years old, a songwriter still trying to make it. But then, I will be able to look back and say that I enjoyed what I did with my life."

Jones, now 23, was born in Southern California, but moved to Oakland as a 15-year-old. He came to Larkspur two years ago.

Folk and rock music had intrigued Jones since his early teens, but it was in Eureka that he got his start as a professional.

"I WAS SINGING in a coffee house in Eureka doing some of my own songs," he recalls, "when Gary Hart heard me. He liked what he heard, and he became my manager. And he sent me down to Los Angeles to try to get some of my songs published."

In Los Angeles, Jones ripped the yellow pages listing music publishers out of a telephone book and began making the rounds.

"It was a hot spring day, and I was on foot," he says. "But I kept at it.

"AND EVENTUALLY I found some one willing to publish a couple of my songs.

"I thought that was the end of the world — an incredible thing. It was the biggest event in my life until we made our record. And I came back to San Francisco all charged up and determined to make it in music, no matter how much it required from me."

Young Jones was to learn that it required a very great deal — without any certainty of success.

IN APRIL OF 1970 he teamed up with a girl vocalist — not Carole — and they did a session of demonstration tapes for Fillmore Records in San Francisco.

"And we were extremely terrible," says Jones frankly. "They liked the music, but they didn't like the vocalizing."

So Jones and his first partner separated. "It was a congenial parting," he says. "She wanted to sing blues instead of folk rock anyway."

HOWEVER, their efforts had attracted the attention of Billy Delbert of Lettermen Inc., the production company of the singing Lettermen. And it was through the Lettermen affiliation with Capitol Records that the way was to be paved for a Kinship record almost a year later.

Heartened by Delbert's interest, Jones began looking for another partner and found her in Carole Musengo 25, through an advertisement in the Berkeley Musicians' Switchboard.

"We went up to her apartment and auditioned her in a couple of songs," Jones says. "And we were just stunned at what we heard.

"HER VOICE is soft, and yet with a kind of easy bite to it. It sort of sneaks up on you."

Carole's distinctive voice determined the course of the new partnership — away from hard rock music in the direction of folk rock.

Jones' new partner was from Chicago where in the mid-1960s, before the "hard electric" craze, she had been very much a part of the folk singing scene.

"BOTH OF us brought to our new arrangement a great deal more experience and professionalism than would have been possible if we had been raw beginners," Jones comments. That professionalism has shown itself in a devotion to their music and a willingness to work long hours in a reach for long

BOB JONES, left, and Carole Musengo, the principal members of The Kinship electric folk group, rehearse their music in Jones' apartment in Larkspur. The two are preparing for college and coffee house concert dates in the Eureka area next month, after which they will return to Southern California to complete an album for Capitol for which some of the music has already been recorded. The two feature songs they have written themselves.

LISTENING intently to a playback of their first single record, "Love and Nothing More," by The Kinship is Bob Jones, member and spokesman for the musical group. He seems to like what he is hearing. And he hopes the first record is only the forerunner of many yet to come for the group.

Bob Jones Has Made His Career Choice

range, perhaps very distant goals.

Carole and Bob formed their new duo in May of 1970, and in July the name — the Kinship — was selected.

"We wanted something that had the connotation of a family and its close ties," Joney says. "And yet we didn't want to use the word 'family' itself because we felt it had been overused by other groups.

"CAROLE picked up a sociology book from the floor, and there at the top of a page was the chapter heading — 'Kinship.' We all liked it. So we kept it."

In September of 1970 the Lettermen were appearing at San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel, and so Delbert arranged for a Kinship audition one afternoon before Tony Butala of the Lettermen.

"How many groups at our stage can they have played and sung in the Venetian Room?" Jones asks with a smile. "But that is where we auditioned, a little awed by all those murals."

BUTALA liked what was played and sung, and he agreed that Lettermen Inc. would act as the Kinship's production company.

Shortly thereafter Bob, Carole and guitarists Sultzer and O'Connor began recording at the Mercury studios on Mission in San Francisco, but that proved a brief arrangement. Attorneys were negotiating contracts, and when hang-ups developed, the recording was suspended until these could be ironed out.

"It seemed to be taking forever," says Jones, "and all we wanted to do was to get on with the recording, on almost any terms."

FINALLY, last November, the Kiship signed formally with the Lettermen. In January of this year they did a demonstration session recording some of their songs for distribution to other artists, hopeful that these musicians would be tempted into using them.

Then in April, in Los Angeles, the Kinship with guitarists present made their own first record with the backing of studio musicians.

"We put up at Howard's Weekly Apartments while we were down there," relates Jones, "and we did four sides."

ONLY TWO of those sides have been issued to date on a single record. Both are Jones' written — "Love and Nothing More," dedicated to the Larkspur Police Department, and "Weep."

There is no sarcasm or ridicule implied in the dedication of "Love and Nothing More" to the Larkspur police, Jones stresses.

The song begins with the narrator uptight because he is driving and he sights in his rear mirror a police car — "black and white intimidator" — coming up from behind him "and it's pushin' me to insane."

BUT JONES resists the "race-on, run away" impulse. And the driver in the police car smiles, tips his hat and pulls on past "against the evening rain."

"I got the idea for the song and the dedication from the feelings I actually experienced when I sighted a Larkspur police car in my rear view mirror," Jones explains.

He laughs as he tells of a more recent incident in which a Larkspur police officer called at his aprtment to serve an old traffic warrant. "He wanted to know if he might not be the one mentioned in my song," says Jones. "He was very understanding, so that I have a very good impression of the Larkspur police. I paid the traffic fine, and all is well."

BOB JONES says his songs are about everything and everyone. Often, he adds, the are topical, "because you can't help but be effected and write about the things that are going on. Love can be as topical as protest or revolt."

And a Jones' song is always rich imagery.

His "Her Lighthouse/Their Fire" (Kinship Music, ASCAP) begins:

WILD BIRDS like sailors, ride the tossing weather vanes,/ Kidnapped by the changes and the rain./Who knows how long the sky continues south against the sun,/When the frozen storms will finally come.

"I don't know why when the darkness falls,/It hits so heavy and so fast./And I don't know why when the morning falls,/ Every dream seems like the last."

The Kinship has played the Troubador in San Francisco, the Lion's Share in San Anselmo "and some free Marin County high school and benefits gigs." Next month they will travel north to Eureka for some college and club dates.

"BUT MOST of this year is being spent on getting our material together and on arranging for our album," Jones says.

The album, to consist entirely of their own songs, is to be finished in December and to be released in March of 1972.

After that will probably come a road tour in the spring to promote the album.

"But Carole and I are very much interested in playing the smaller clubs," Jones says. "We like the intimate atmosphere that is crucial to our music."

BOTH PLAY the guitar, but they leave the instruments largely to others when they are performing. "Carole especially likes to concentrate upon her singing."

He describes her as "a small girl, brown-haired, blue-eyed, the quiet and mellow type, with the most soulful voice imaginable."

Her mother, Jones reports, lives in Chicago and is thrilled by her daughter's new career. "She is the Bohemian, artistic type herself, " he says, "and she is hard at work pushing our record in the Chicago area."

JONES' parents live at Grass Valley. "They were not too pleased when I quit San Francisco City College where I was studying psychology to go into music full-time," Bob admits. "But they have always encouraged me to do what I want to do. And now they are quite excited about our plans."

Jones was wearing his dark hair long before he took the plunge into professional music "because I consider it becoming."

It doesn't seem either to help or hinder him as a musician, he says. "I think television has done a lot to break down the antagonism of even the older people toward long hair. People are able now to make distinctions between the long-hair types."

JONES SAYS he has involved himself in some social movements — "the Mexican-American farm workers had my total sympathy and support" — , but adds: "I try to pick and choose my causes. I don't just jump in blindly. I don't like to be used."

Jones adds that he has no regrets over his decision to drop out of college and abandon his psychology studies.

"I'm doing exactly what I want to do, " he says. "And we are full of hope."

And he has only laughter for those who regard the long-haired rock musician as an idler.

"BELIEVE ME," he says, "it is hard work. It is no hobby with us. It is a profession. And we are going after it with everything we've got.

"If we don't make it, it won't be because we didn't try."

But the signs are that Marin County, whose sunshine and country atmosphere have already spawned some of the country's biggest names in the pop music field, will soon be laying claim to yet another successful group — a group that goes by the friendly name of The Kinship.

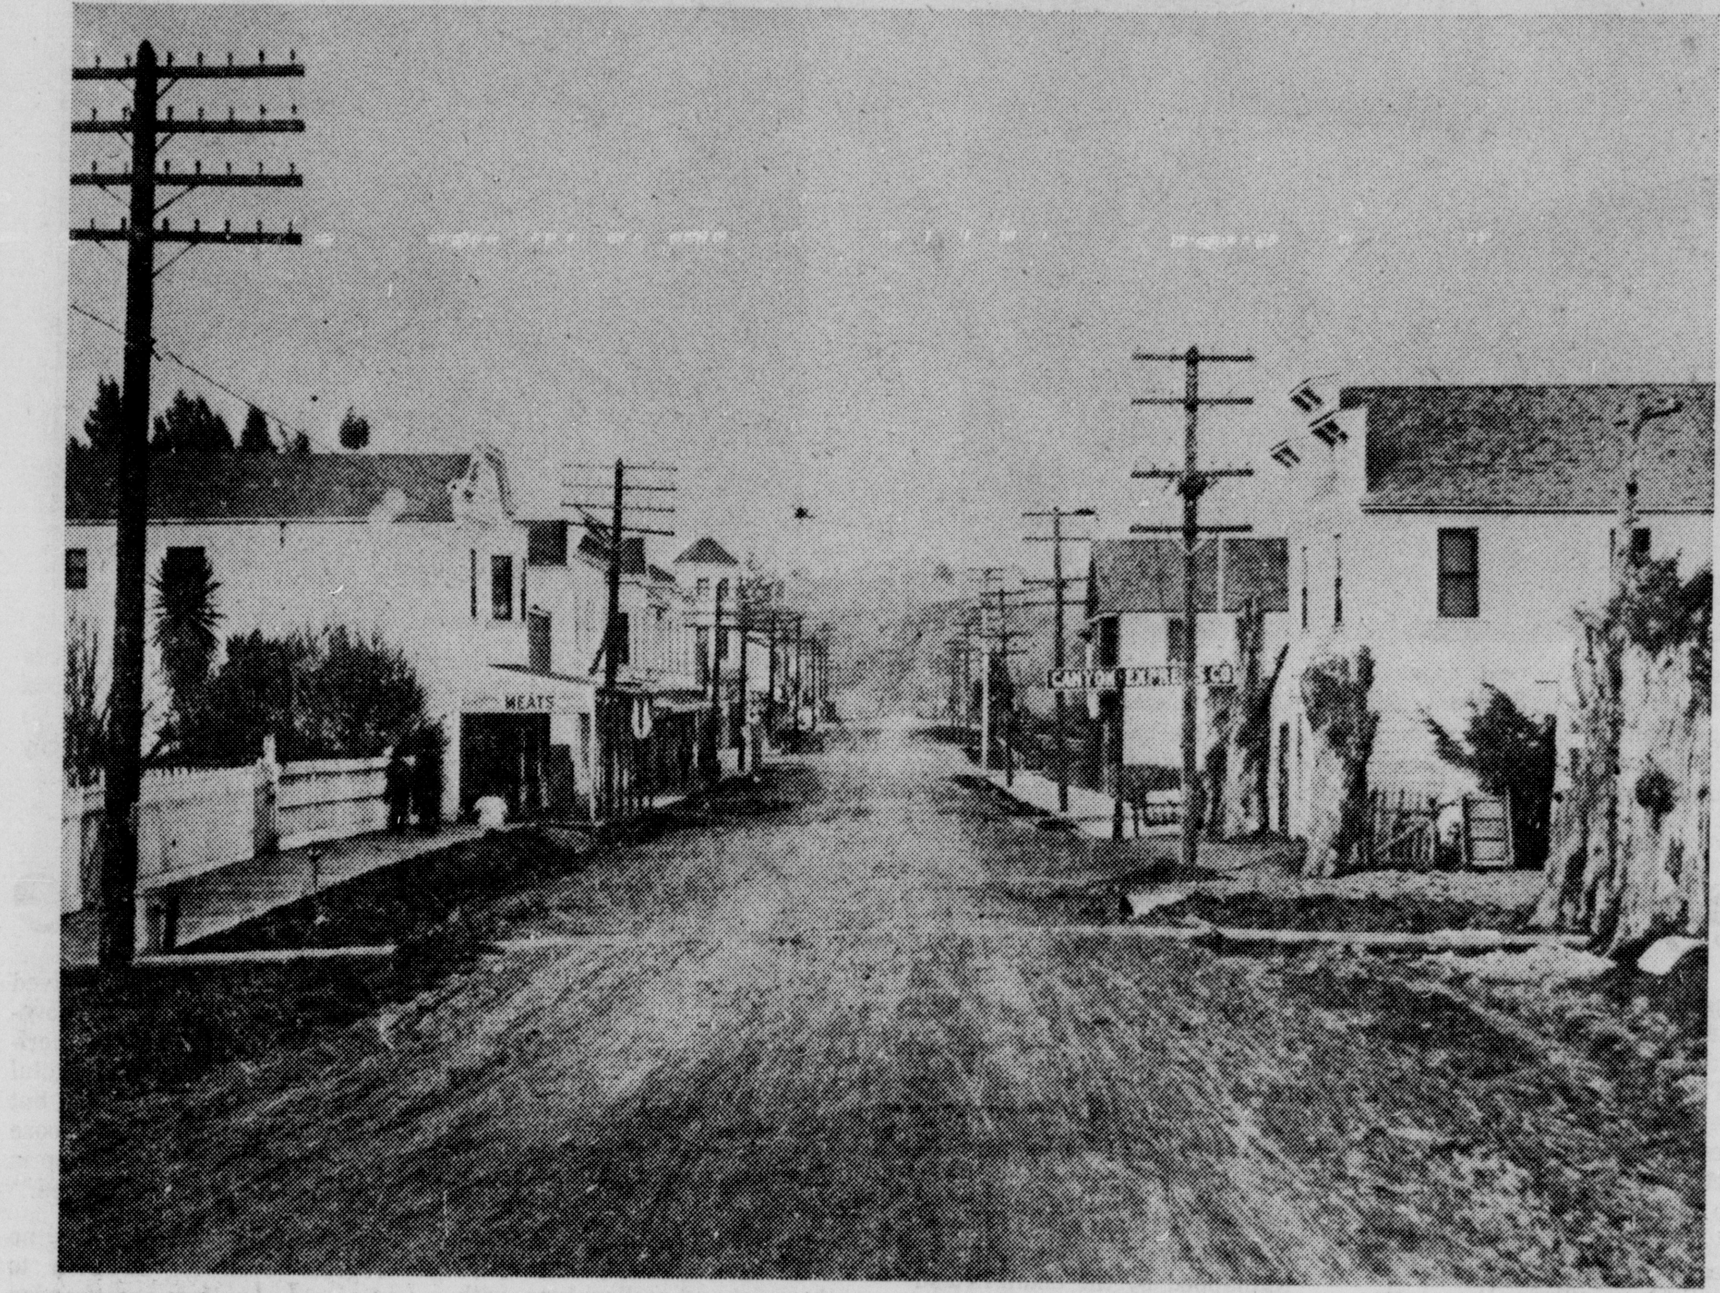
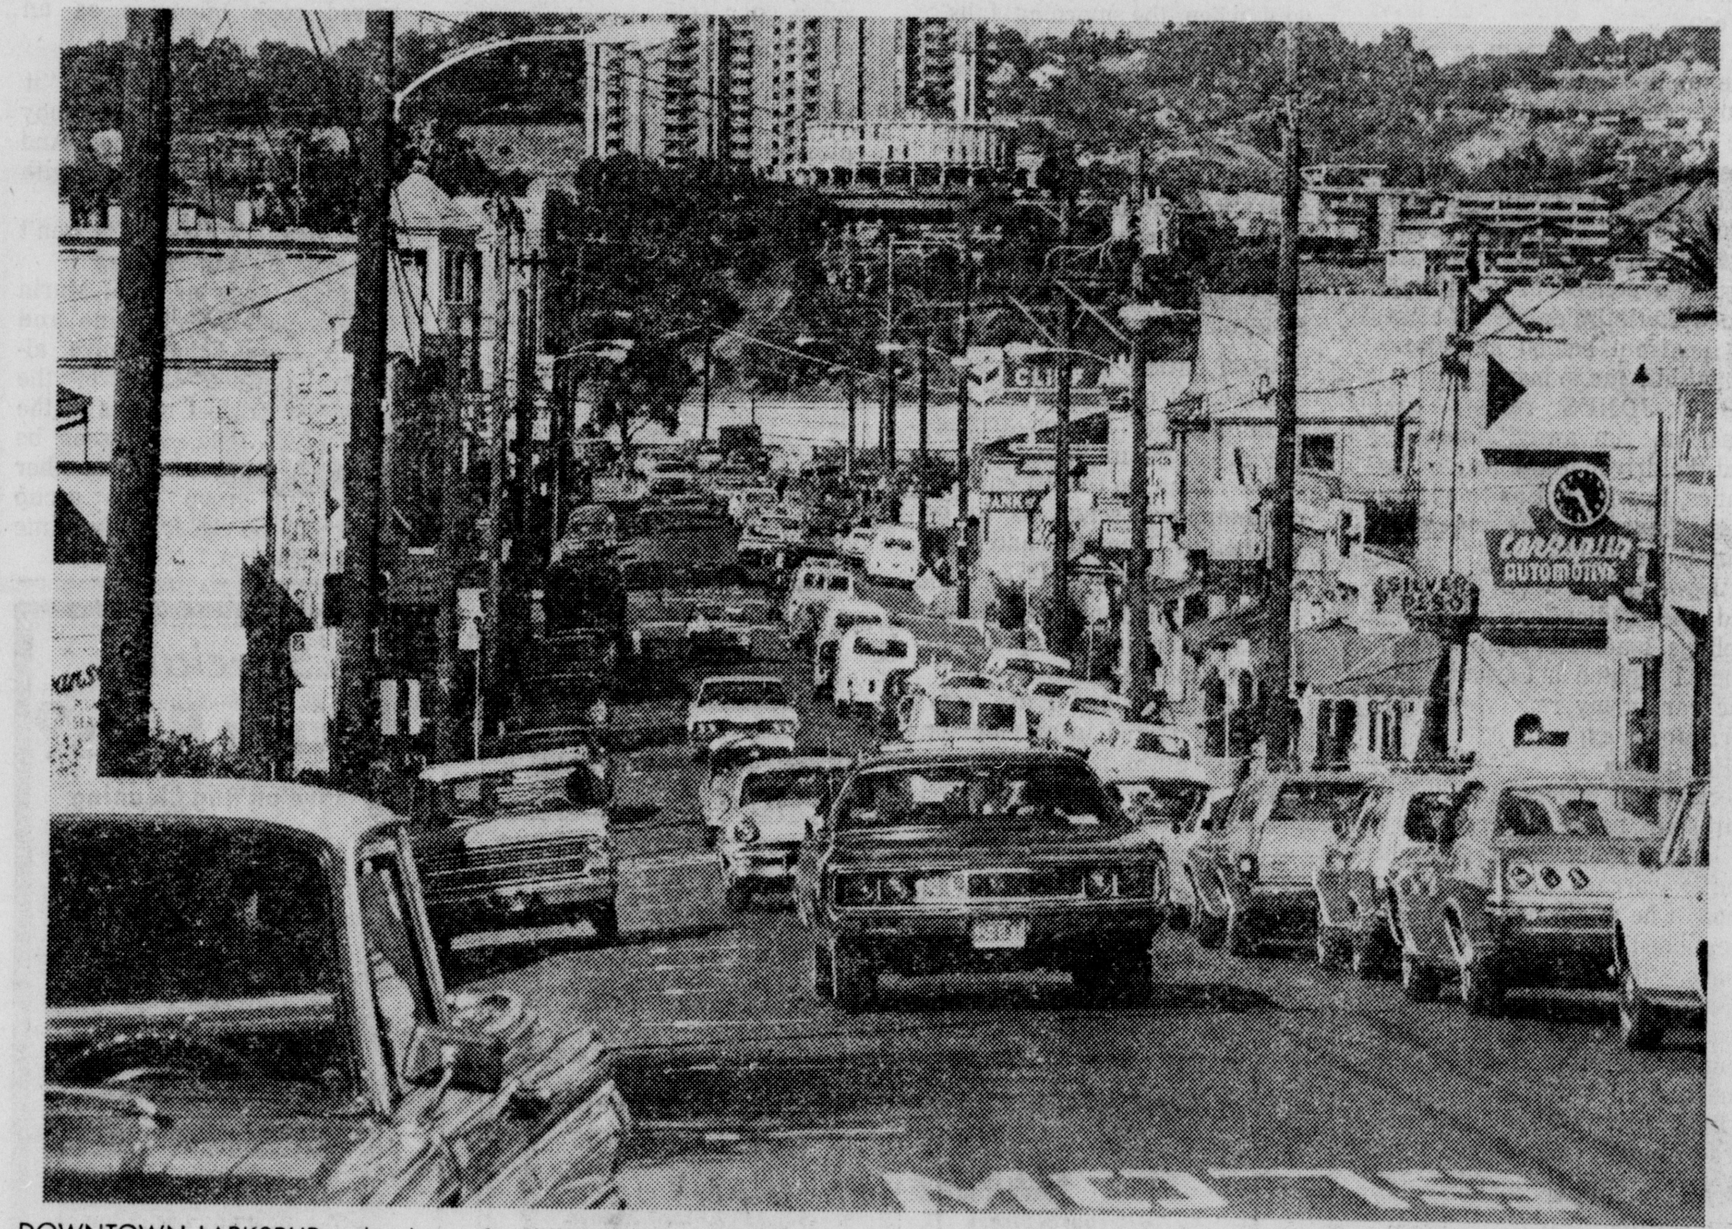
The Mayor's 'State Of The City' Report On Larkspur



LARKSPUR WAS STILL a sleepy little village of about 1,000 population in 1910 when this photograph was taken of its main business street, Magnolia Avenue. The roadway was dirt and the street bare of traffic, except for one horsedrawn buggy "parked" at the distant corner. Sidewalks were wooden. And shoppers were protected by overhead wood marquees.



DOWNTOWN LARKSPUR today has a far different look from what it had six decades ago. Independent-Journal photographer Bob Hax took this photograph of busy traffic moving over a paved roadway. In the background on the hilltop can be seen the Tamalpais Retirement Residence, regarded as one of the finest homes for senior citizens in the country.

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report is on Larkspur, and was submitted by its mayor, Earl J. O'Grady.)

By EARL J. O'GRADY

This year the City of Larkspur will observe its 63rd year of incorporation as a city in Marin County.

From a small summer resort that attracted the residents of San Francisco to the present time, Larkspur has experienced steady growth and has established itself as a city with desirable living conditions through the establishment of excellent municipal services and facilities.

The Blue Rock Inn, a stagecoach stop, and Escalle Winery, the site of the original Dinah's Shack, are among Larkspur's many contributions to the history of Marin County. In prior years Larkspur was linked to the rest of Marin and San Francisco by electric trains that covered the entire area.

TODAY LARKSPUR sits at the hub of the intersection of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Highway 101. East of Highway 101 on the banks of Corte Madera Creek is the site of the Golden Gate Bridge Highway and Transportation District's Larkspur ferry terminal, which in 1973 will initiate ferry service to San Francisco.

Larkspur has grown from a village of approximately 800 people in 1908 to the present population of 10,850. It is anticipated that growth within the next 10 to 20 years will decelerate and that the ultimate population within the corporate limits of Larkspur might reach 16,000 to 18,000 people.

The city is undergoing a change in its master planning to accomplish proper usage of land with abundant open space with the necessary public facilities to insure orderly growth, maintaining the country atmosphere so dear to all of us. Over the past five years some $300,000 has been spent to improve sewer facilities within the city and an additional $500,000 has been spent in reconstruction of Magnolia Avenue.

THE CITY IS now looking forward to working with its neighboring towns of Corte Madera and Mill Valley towards establishing open space on the area known as North Ridge, which, when completed, will provide 1,200 acres of open space. Residents of the entire Ross Valley and the neighboring valleys to the south will have the advantages of hills and open area that will remain in perpetuity and enhance the desirability of living in this section of Marin County.

During the past five years the City of Larkspur, participating in the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control project, has enhanced water recreation facilities by providing a deep water channel up to Bon Air Bridge. This channel will ultimately be extended easterly to deep water in San Francisco Bay as the dredging is completed for the Larkspur ferry terminal.

EARL J. O'GRADY
The mayor reports

Larkspur is proud of its schools. Redwood High School and Henry C. Hall, Larkspur-Corte Madera, and St. Patrick's grammar schools are among the finest in the county. They contribute significantly to the quality of life in our community.

A MAJOR contribution to Larkspur has been made by the Tamalpais Retirement Residence. This facility provides senior citizens with an unparalleled living experience. The Tamalpais is among the finest of its type in the country.

Many Marin County and Bay Area residents will long remember the Rose Bowl, a famous open air dance hall located in the redwoods adjacent to the old downtown area in Larkspur. The revenues derived from this operation allowed the Larkspur Volunteer Fire Department to provide excellent fire protection for the residents of the city. In later years, the City of Larkspur took over the volunteer department and has continued to provide excellent fire protection.

Two fire facilities for the city are provided by headquarters station at 420 Magnolia Avenue and a substation located at 15 South Eliseo Drive. The services are headed by Chief Craig Shurtz, who has been with the department for 11 years, and under his direction the city has maintained a favorable fire insurance rating below that of many cities in Marin County.

POLICE CHIEF Howard Clark heads a 15-man police department that provides the protection services for the City. Chief Clark has been a member of the Larkspur Police Department for 30 years, and under his direction the city has maintained an enviable position in controlling crime and the protection of public property and citizens.

Both police and fire departments undergo constant training and schooling so as to be abreast of current techniques in the protection of the citizens of this city.

The City Council of the City of Larkspur is the policy making body for the city and is composed of five members elected in staggered terms. The present Council members are Neil R. Brixon, Vice-Mayor William G. Fleckles, Alfred J. Malvino, Benton A. Sifford, Jr., and Mayor Earl J. O'Grady. In addition, three other boards and commissions operate under the directorship of the City Council. They are the Planning Commission, the Park and Recreation Commission and the Board of Library Trustees.

THE PLANNING Commission hears and considers all matters of zoning, use permits, and architectural review of new construction. The commission is actively supported by an appointed architectural review committee, which evaluates the aesthetic design and architectural characteristics of new construction and makes appropriate recommendations to the Planning Commission.

The Park and Recreation Commission is concerned with the open space and recreation facilities and programs for the youth and adults of the community.

Presently, the Park and Recreation Commission is working with a consultant in designing a master plan for open space, parks and recreation facilities for the future of Larkspur. This plan will be incorporated into the Larkspur General Plan and become a part of the future of the city.

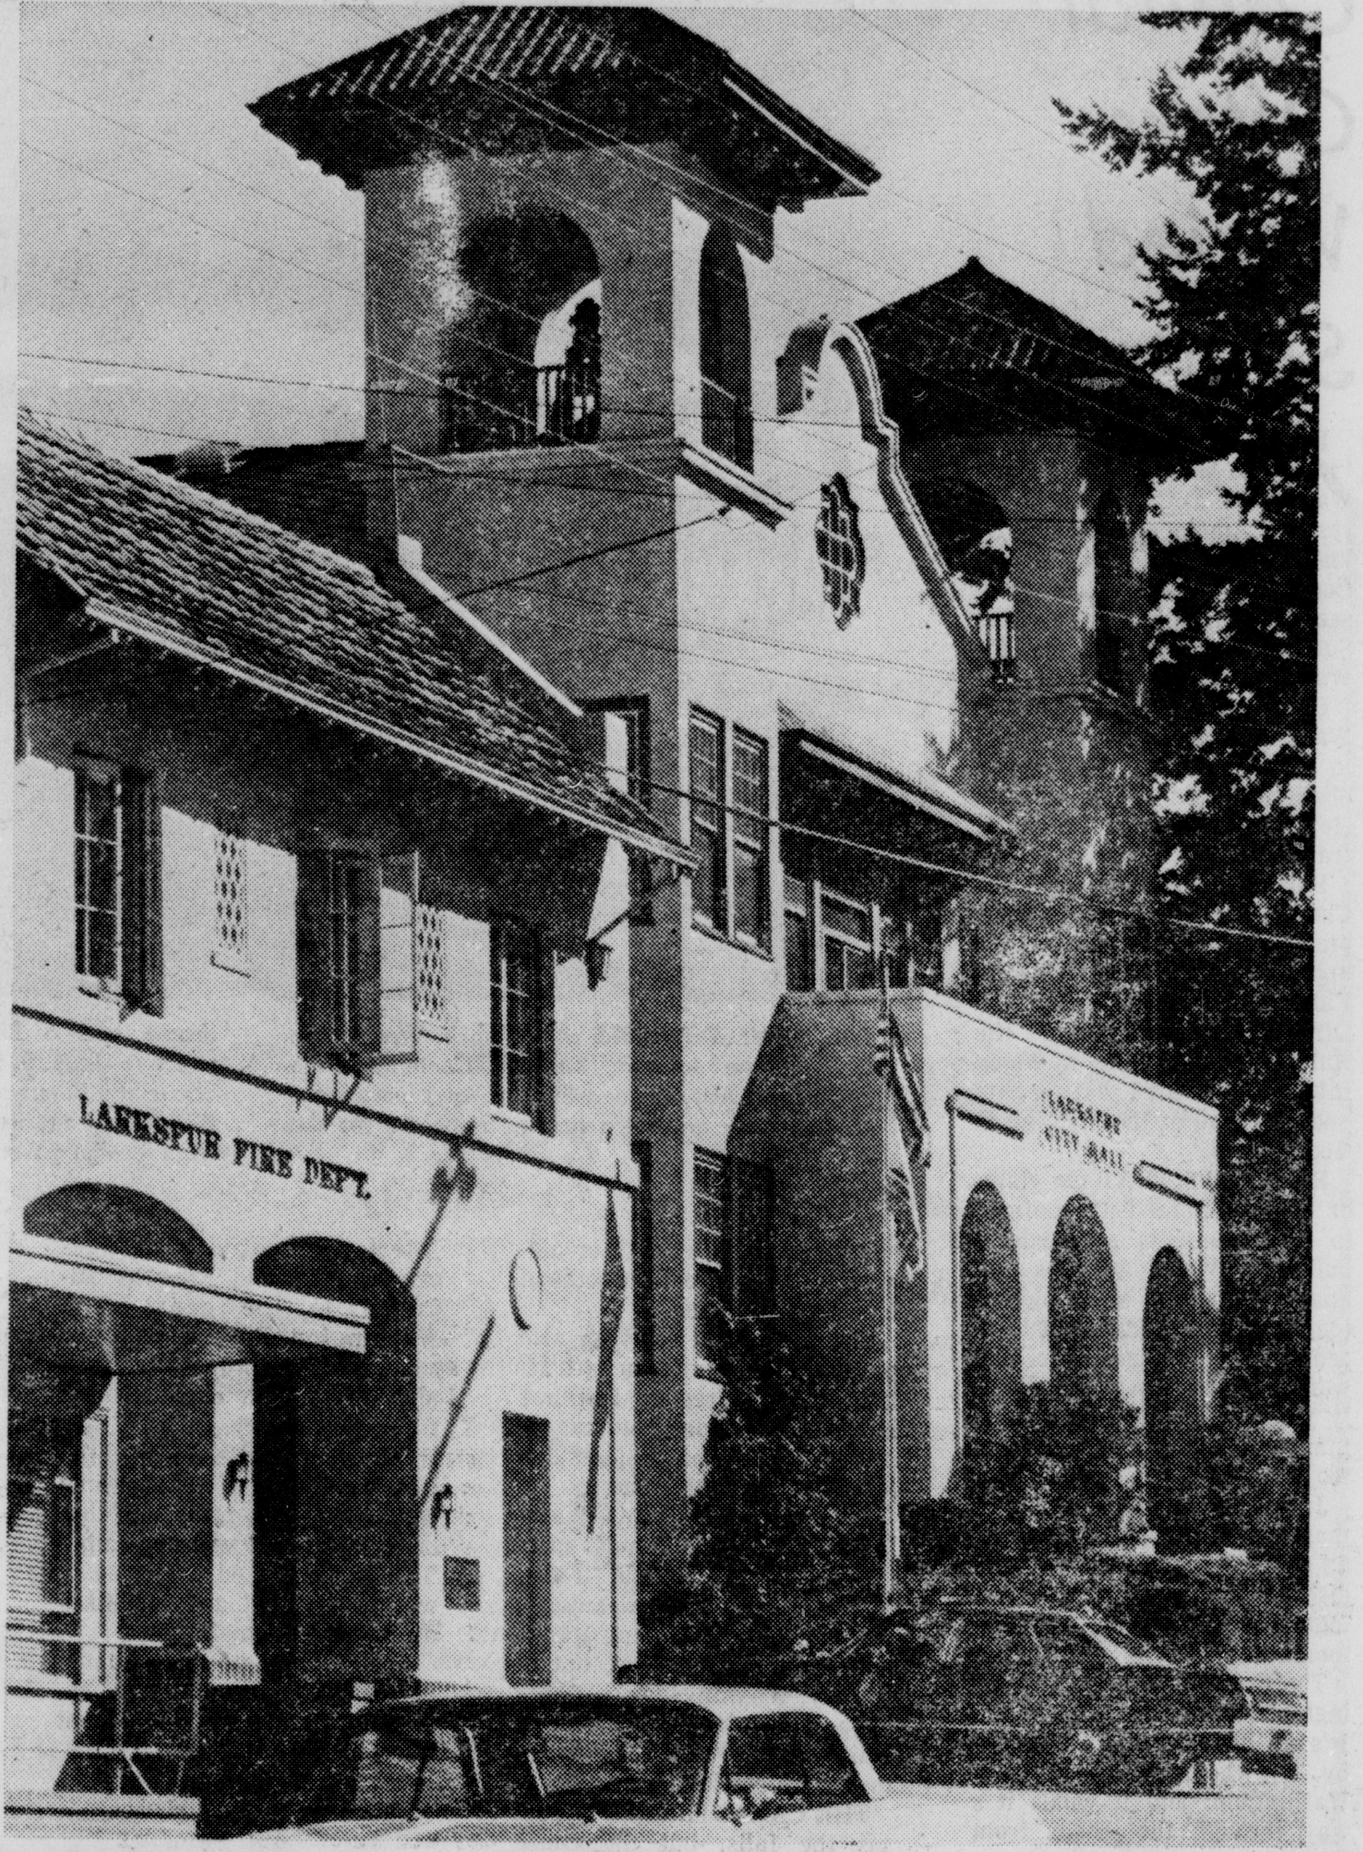
THE LARKSPUR Library, operated under the direction of the Board of Trustees, has been in existence since 1914, and is under the administration of Richard Kilbourne as head librarian. Circulation continually increases the use of the 29,438 volumes of books contained in the library. The Larkspur Library provides a well rounded and diversified range of books for all Larkspur citizens. Although the library facilities are in small quarters, the services provided have met with enthusiastic reception by the many readers who use it on a daily basis.

Thus, in 63 years the City of Larkspur has grown from a village to being the fifth largest city in Marin County.

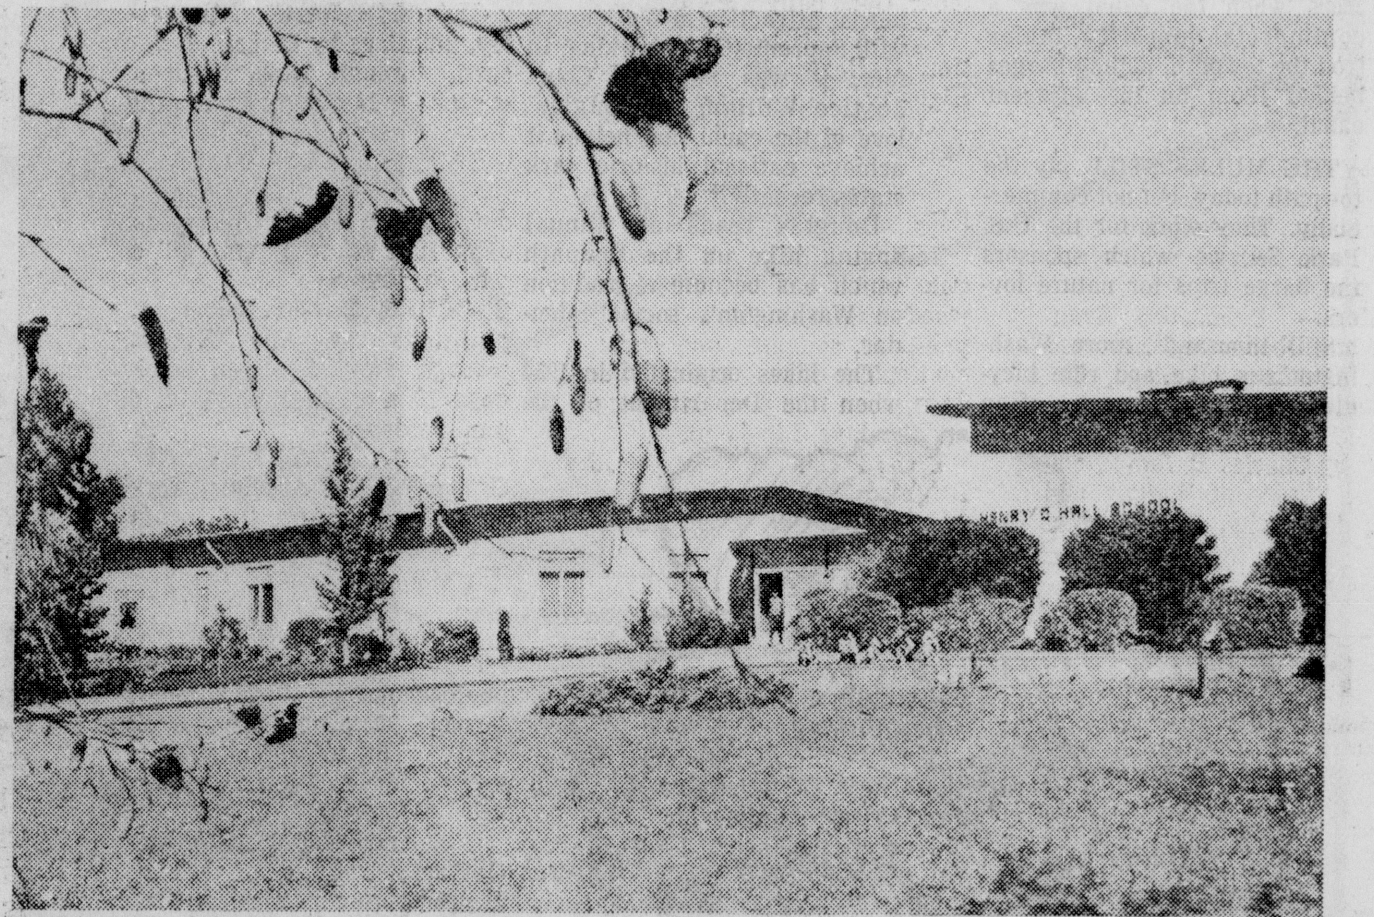
LARKSPUR IS debt-free. The City Council has constantly striven to embark upon programs that are economically sound and still provide the high level of services that our citizens deserve. Leadership has been displayed in the field of flood control, sanitary facilities and street and highway improvement.

Many of the local citizens have taken a prominent part in the cultural improvement of Marin County, and the historical background of the community itself has given foundation to the development of all Marin County.

(Editor's Note: Additional "state of the city" reports on other Marin municipalities will appear in subsequent issues of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine.)



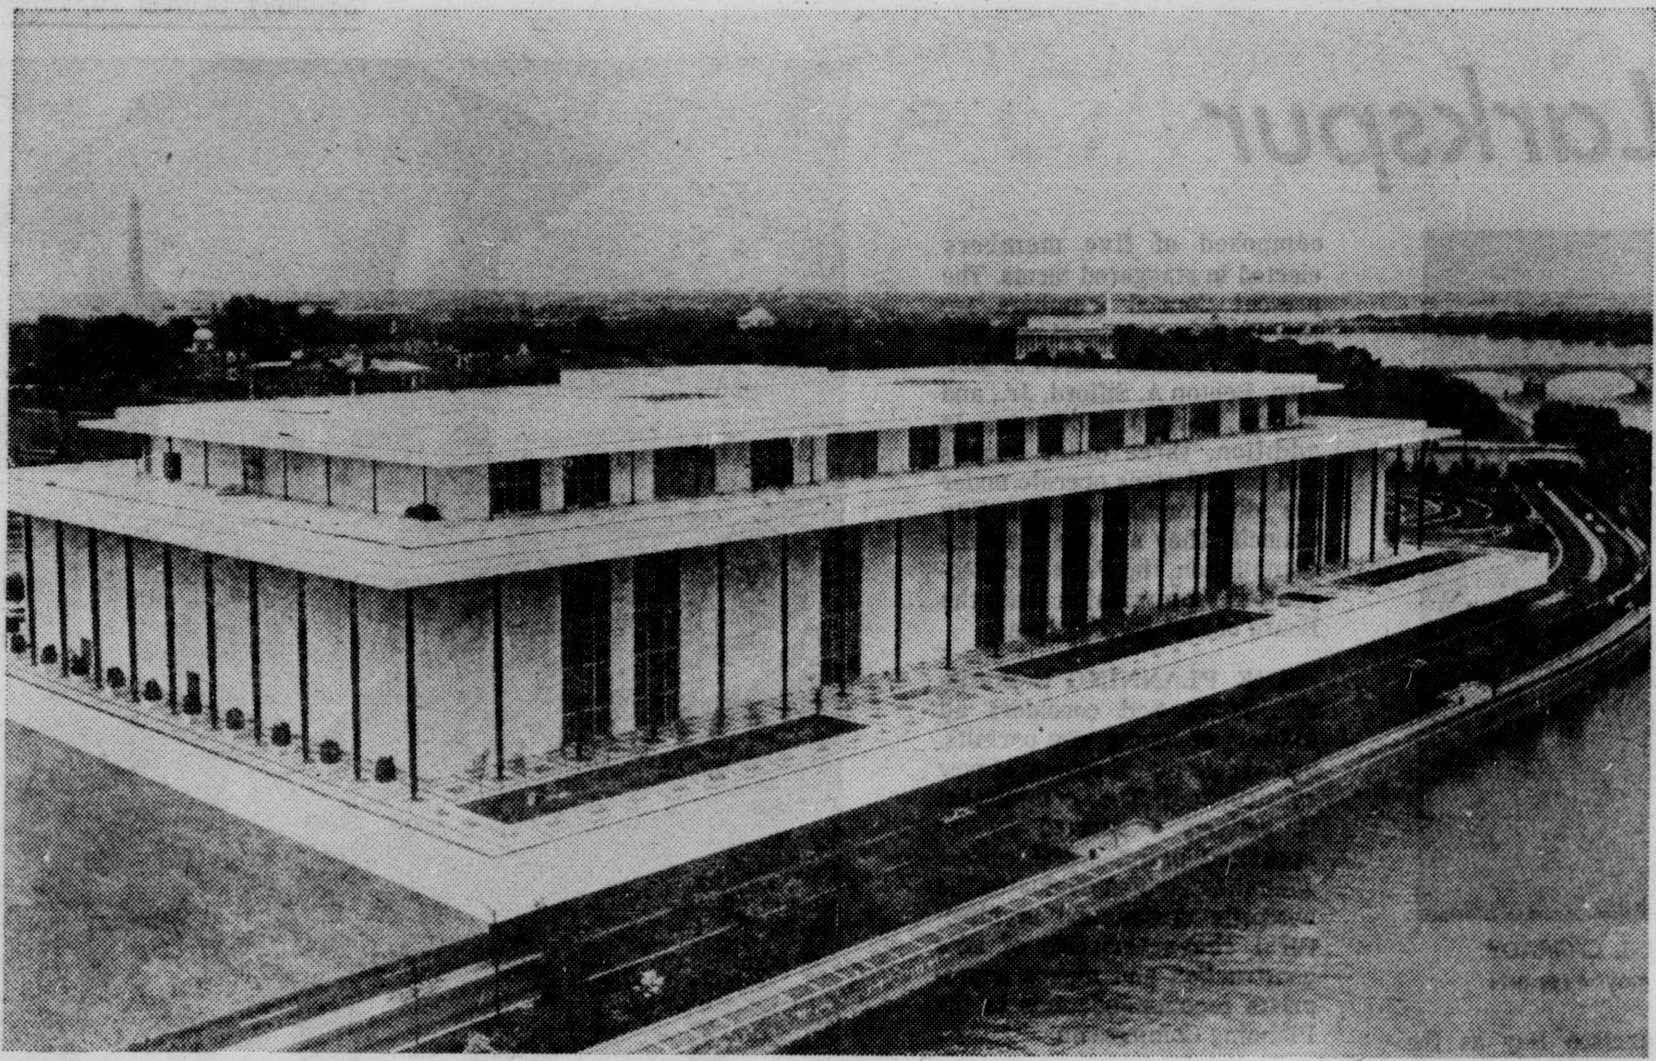
THE CITY GOVERNMENT of Larkspur functions from this attractive City Hall, with a five-member city council setting municipal policies. Next door is the Larkspur Fire Station from whence Chief Craig Shurtz and his men operate. The city also maintains a South Eliseo Drive substation.



ITS SCHOOLS ARE quite rightly a point of pride for Larkspur and its citizens. Pictured here is the Henry C. Hall School. Also rated among the finest schools in the county are Redwood High School, part of the Tamalpais Union High School District, and the Larkspur-Corte Madera and St. Patrick's elementary schools.

The Travel Pages

Capital Offers Varied Sights



THE NEWEST TOURIST attraction in Washington D.C. is the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, opened Sept. 8, and featuring a concert hall, an opera house, a theater for the drama and a film theater. The white marble structure is 600 feet long and soars 135 feet above the Potomac River. It was built at a cost of 68 million dollars, not including extensive gifts from foreign governments.

In the political hinterlands, a "man who knows his way about Washington D.C." is worthy of respect. Among other things, he knows a dozen off-beat "recreational" attractions, those sightseeing delights which serve as Sunday afternoon haunts for Washingtonians.

Chances are, the native Washington has never ventured to the top of the Washington obelisk, or toured the Capitol. He's used to ducking the tourist traffic.

But he's probably hiked the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, picnicked at Fort Washington and driven his kids to Great Falls. He's seen plays at the Olney Playhouse and the Hartke Theater, dined in Washington's gourmet restaurants and partaken of the nightlife in Georgetown.

HE KNOWS THAT the glamor of the Capital isn't confined to is monuments and federal buildings. Washingtonians live apart from that seen by the tourist, and judging from local sentiment, it's a good life, and worthy of scrutiny by the slightly jaded tourist who's seen too many monuments and stood in too many lines.

Just a little information, a map and a tiny nudge, that's all an experienced tourist needs to discover the delights of Washington as seen by the Washingtonian.

The C & O is probably Washington's number 1 playground. It's an historic canal surveyed by — who else? — George Washington, and it winds it s way through the woods from Georgetown to Cumberland, Md., 185 miles as the crow flies.

A towpath parallels the canal the entire distance. Back in the 1800s when the canal was a commercial operation, mules trod the towpath, pulling barges behind them on the adjacent canal.

THE MULES STILL ply the towpath today, but not commercially. They work for the U.S. Park Service which sponsors the barge trips for nature lovers.

Still thousands more Washingtonians hike and ride bicycles on the towpath, often carrying picnic lunches or dinners to their favorite woodland hideaways.

The canal and towpath also parallel another area attraction, the picturesque Potomac River. The wide Potomac is seldom more than a silver dollar's throw from the canal.

Seventeen miles above Washington is the canal's most spectacular setting, Great Falls. Tourists usually are amazed that such an outstanding attraction is so little known, but in reality, Washington residents have known about the river's white-water cascades since they were children.

THE CANAL naturally bypasses the falls, but the canoe enthusiasts who dot the canal every weekend often try shooting the rapids near the falls.

The C & O is probably the one tourist attraction in Washington with Supreme Court backing. In fact, it was Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas' love of the canal that helped it achieve national historic park status recently.

Douglas leads an annual spring hike on the towpath which has become a tradition on Washington's social calendar.

The hikes originated in 1954 when the Department of the Interior proposed a Georgetown-Cumberland Freeway adjacent to the canal. The Washington Post newspaper supported the proposal editorially, drawing a counterattack from Douglas.

THE JUSTICE challenged the Post's editorial writer to a hike up the towpath, promising that he'd fall in love with the canal. The Post accepted, the freeway was never built and the hikes are now traditional.

Fort Washington is situated on the Potomac south of Washington and across from Mount Vernon. It's a medieval-like relic of the 18th Century, complete with a drawbridge and moat.

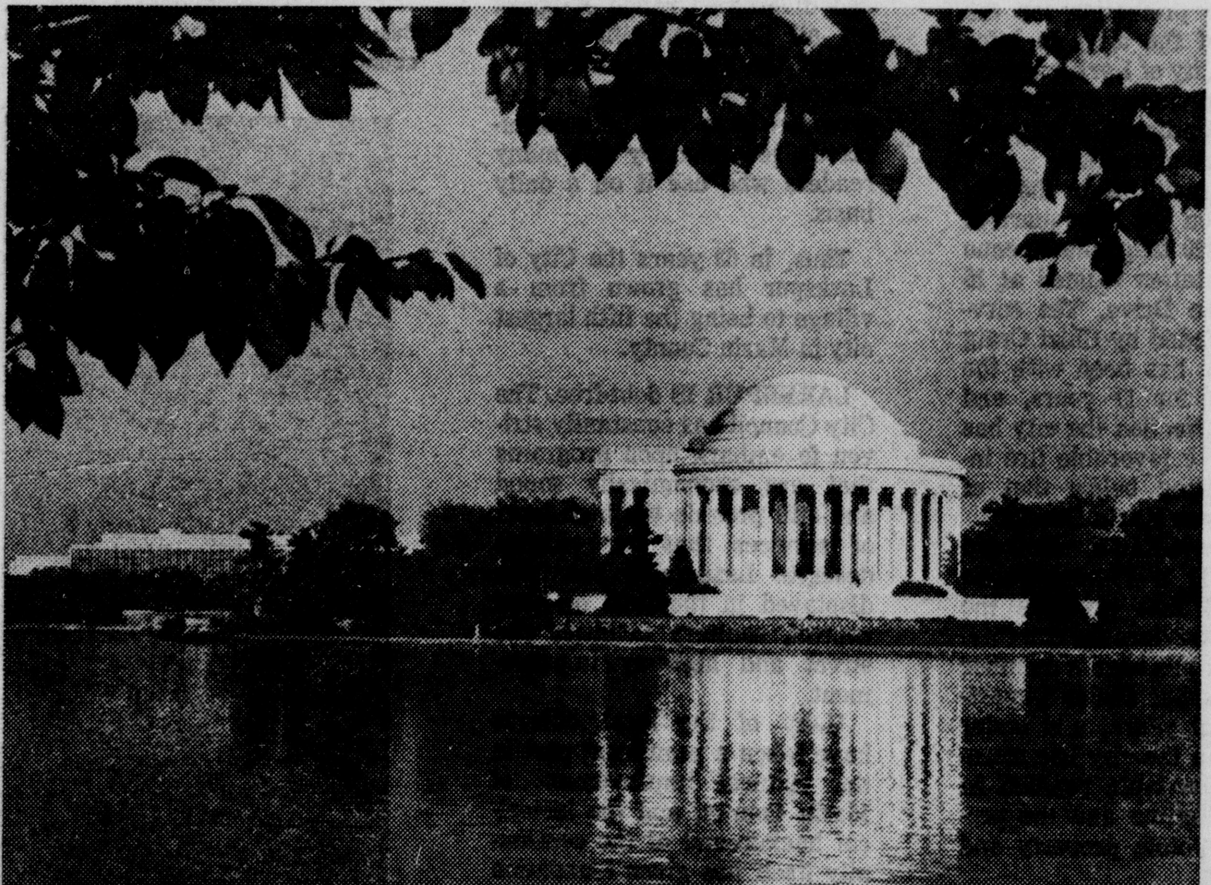
It was the Capital's primary defense in 1814 when the British sailed up the Potomac intent on capturing Washington. Although the fort sits on a bluff affording a commanding position of the wide river, the commander ordered the fortress abandoned to the British without firing a shot.

The invaders subsequently burned the Capitol Building and White House.

WHEN THE invasion jitters gripped Washington at the outset of the Civil War, the old fort was reactivated and for a time once again served as Washington's primary defense. It, however, was never beseiged.

A failure in its purpose, the old fort has lived on to become a 20th Century recreation area, perhaps Washington's most popular picnic and softball spot.

The fort itself remains in reasonably good condition and is especially popular with children. And the panoramic view is enjoyed by adults and children alike.



THE JEFFERSON MEMORIAL is considered by many to be the most beautiful building in Washington D.C. Dedicated in 1943 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the edifice incorporates many of the personal design ideas of President Thomas Jefferson who was an architect. It sits on Washington's famed tidal basin and is the focal point for the annual Cherry Blossom Festival.

Is New Breed Camper A Threat To Ecology?

By GARY KALE

There is a good deal of concern among the ecology-minded segment of "Save America" that the new breed of camper will turn this country into a huge litter basket.

At least two states, Colorado and Pennsylvania, have declared some areas off limits because of sloppy tenancy in state parks by the desultory weekend camper. The veteran camper, in constrast, usually is careful not to sully the property where he set up temporary residence.

MANY OF today's machine-minded novices take to the road in self-contained campers, auto-drawn trailers or tent-carrying vehicles. The late fall, winter and early spring will bring out family snow-fun equipment in some sections, making outdoor living a year-round activity.

This adds up to some 40 billion people wandering around the United States in search of recreational areas where they can park for a day, week or month. They are anxious to soak up a maximum of outdoor entertainment with a minimum of effort.

Many simply zero in on a designated section and never leave until it's time to return home. Others desire a base where they can drop their camper-trailers and spend their time sightseeing.

STATE PARKS, which either are free or charge a nominal fee for overnight camping, suffer the most from the untidy segment of the camping population. Conversely, the more people pay for their camping privileges, the less they are inclined toward messiness.

The private campgrounds, charging for electric, water and waste disposal hookups, cover less territory than the public recreational areas, and, as a rule, are easier to police.

"When there's a minimum of campers, each person seems to take pride in leaving his campsite the way he found it," says John May, who once traveled the entertainment circuit with a million dollar invertebrate collection and now runs a 350-acre camping ground near Colorado Springs, Colo.

• THE TOP executive of a franchised camp group maintains that his company is "ecology-oriented" and even urges campground owners to stock nothing but non-polluting detergents in their stores.

"This may not seem like much on the surface, but it's a start," offered James R. Estes, president of Safari Camps of America. "It's also our policy to preserve the natural beauty of the wooded camp areas so that people who camp to get away from the concrete canyons can stay in touch with a nature they see dwindling rapidly."

There are some people, however, who couldn't care less about preserving our natural environments.

THE CAMPING motorcyclist has discovered his vehicle can range far on a small capacity gasoline tank and many are determined to explore the rarely visited parts of the U.S.

The crisscross of tire tracks proclaim an army of adventurers bent on reconnoitering an area for its recreation potential and the esthetic value of the property be hanged. The litter many leave represents a "Kilroy Was Here" attitude and serves as an invitation for other cyclists to follow the newly-discovered paths of nature.

Preserving and protecting the natural beauty of the landscape apparently escapes many dune-buggy drivers and snowmobile riders, too. Conservationists say these vehicles don't belong in the woods and city dwellers complain they are hazards to traffic.

What's a sportsman to do when people argue about his method of transportation? Conservationists say he can establish a nationwide code of environmental ethics that would attract the fair minded segment of riders. Others may swing into line to be part of the crowd.

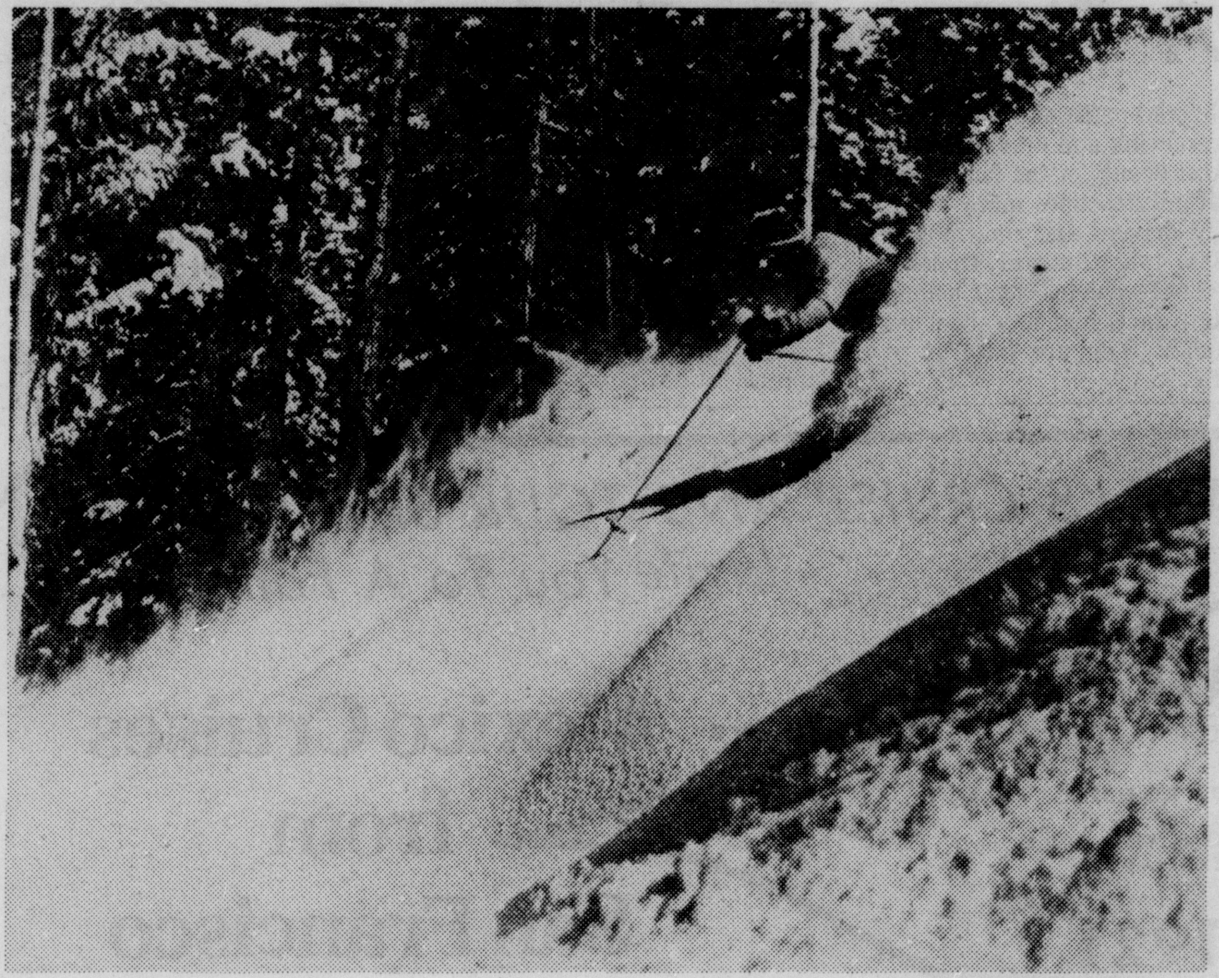
Taos Beckons Visitor With Skiing, History



KNEE-DEEP IN the beautifully white and dry powdered snow for which the ski runs of the Taos Ski Valley in New Mexico are famous, these skiers enjoy the exhilaration of a fast and challenging run. But winter sports is only one of several attractions of this New Mexico area that is fast gaining in popularity with tourists of all seasons and many interests.

The atom is New Mexico's biggest industry and there are more Ph.D's in the state per each thousand of population than anywhere else in the nation. It is the past, however, that lives in Taos, located in a sheltered valley 70 miles north of Santa Fe.

"Civilization has flourished in and around Taos for several centuries," reports Continental Airline's travel experts, "and modernization is still resisted today.

"There are two main Indian communities on the outskirts of Taos, separated by a small stream, and the pueblos there, some standing five stories high with their only openings on the ground floor, have been occupied continuously for over 800 years. Women still sweep the dirt plaza with crude straw brooms, bake their bread in beehive ovens, and tribal laws forbid such improvements as electricity, running water, television or even radios."

TAOS OFFERS a unique and colorful combination of Indian and Spanish character along with its history. It was an Indian medicine man named Naranjo from Taos, in fact, who incited the bloody revolt of the Pueblo Indians in 1680 — nearly a century before the American Revolution —that first drove Spanish rule from New Mexico.

Today, the Anglo-Spanish-Indian atmosphere of Taos is further shared by an internationally sophisticated group of winter sports experts who dominate the nearby Taos Ski Valley, which claims the driest snow anywhere in the United States or Europe.

All of the many lodges in the Taos Ski Valley are run by the area's European ski instructors, and the chefs —representing such countries as Switzerland, France, Denmark, Austria, West Germany and Italy — serve superb family-style meals from do-it-yourself fondue to Finnish fruit soup.

"TAOS HAS SOME of the toughest ski runs in America," reports Continental, "but there is also a perfectly-groomed beginner's area and 12 miles of intermediate slopes. Skiing here is at its best in February and the early spring months."

The activity in Taos, though, is year-round, and the Indian pueblos and their residents are among the most photographed subjects in America. The height of the season for visitors to the Indian ruins and communities is in the summer and fall.

"Taos Indians allow you to bring your camera into the pueblos for a fee of $1.50," reports Continental. "This entitles you to take all the pictures you want. However, if you want the Indians themselves to pose you're expected to pay them something extra — usually 25 cents a picture."

ANOTHER POPULAR spot for visitors to Taos, which is the permanent home for a large colony of writers and artists, is the fully restored Kit Carson House and Museum in the heart of town.

A Travel Guide For 'Man In The Middle'

The big gap in the travel guide field has been in the medium-price range.

There are a number of really fine guides for the economy and budget travelers. And a few for those who prefer and can afford first class and deluxe accommodations.

But relatively little has been written for the many who travel comfortably but not lavishly.

FRANCE IS A country that can present special problems to tourists in this category.

Thus Arthur Frommer's "Dollar Wise Guide to France" authored by Stanley Haggart and Darwin Porter for Air France is an especially welcomed addition to the travel guide field.

With the same thoroughness and care demonstrated in the Frommer books for budget travelers, this new book provides information on hotels, restaurants, nightsports, tours, etc., that fit the needs and means of "the man in the middle."

BUT TO MAKE the book still more valuable, Haggart and Porter have also included both upper bracket and budget recommendations while emphasizing restaurants, hotels, etc., in-between. And they tell you not only where to go, but why, and what you can expect to find there, in tempting and helpful detail.

The book sells for $2.95. And, quite frankly, the traveler visiting France, and particularly Paris, and unfamiliar with the country, is foolish not to first arm himself with a guide such as this one. Otherwise he is going to miss out on a lot of opportunities. And the price of this thick, fact-packed book is a bargain $2.95. D.K.

A Coffee Festival In Hawaii With Tours, Parade, A Queen

By LINDY BOYES

Does the aroma of fresh-brewed coffee put thoughts of Hawaii into your mind?

Why should it, you wonder? Because some of the world's most aromatic and flavorful coffee comes from Kona, Hawaii.

To help broaden general knowledge of Kona coffee by encouraging visitors to the area, the Kona Coffee Festival will be held Nov. 11, 12 and 13 with the Kona Chamber of Commerce acting as coordinator for the various sponsoring organizations which include the Hawaii Visitors Bureau.

CONSIDERED by many a gourmet product, the only coffee raised in the United States is grown in the Kona coastal area of the "Big Island" of Hawaii.

Coffee has been grown in the Kona district for nearly a century and a half and has been an important crop since the middle of the 19th Century.

For decades, Hawaiian planters dreamed of coffee as a great potential export crop and experimented with the plant on several islands. Now, however, only the Kona district grows coffee commercially.

The coffee plant, a cousin of the gardenia, is grown occasionally as an ornamental because of its fragrant white flower.

THE KONA district produces the best coffee in Hawaii for several reasons. Ample rainfall and volcanic soil that provides good drainage is found on the slopes of Mauna Loa from the 1,200 to 2,000-foot elevation.

Coffee needs partial shade. The nearly twin 13,000-foot tops of Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea catch the trade wind-blown clouds in the morning, leaving Kona sunny and bright. By midday the clouds break free and move to cover Kona until late afternoon, shading the coffee plants.

The mountains also protect the plants from wind and storm damage. The coffee cherries start ripening in early autumn, with November usually the peak of the harvest season. And this is the time of the three-day Kona Coffee Festival.

VISITORS TO this first annual event will tour coffee farms, see parades, a Coffee-Picking Queen contest, art show, food sales, coffee recipe contest, a pageant and many attend a Coronation Dance.

For more information of the festival write to the Kona Chamber of Commerce, Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, 96740. For more information of Kona coffee, write to the Kona Coffee Association, Post Office Box 766, Captain Cook, Hawaii, 96704.

A Look At The Irish

By DON KEOWN

Although millions of Americans have their ancestral roots in its green sod and still other millions feel a sentimental attachment to its land, Ireland remains a mist-shrouded enigma to its admirers in this country.

A way of life that has resisted supposedly irresistible progress almost as determinedly as it has resisted British domination is beyond the comprehension of most progress-minded, comfort-oriented Americans.

One Irish-American who does understand his ancestral land and who can interpret it for us is the writer Richard O'Connor. And he does so with wit and insight in his marvelous book "The Irish: Portrait of a People."

"The Irish are a whirlwind of contradictions," begins O'Connor, who divides his own time between homes in Maine and County Cork, and then proceeds to plunge into the center of the turmoil to dissect its currents.

He gives us pieces on Ireland's ancient history, on its devout Catholicism, on the Anglo-Irish Ascendancy and aristocracy, on national hero Michael Collins, on Eamon De Valera so devoid of charisma and yet so unquestionably the leading figure of the Republic, on the Irish Republican Army, on Dubliners, on Connemarans, on poets and playwrights, on Ireland's marriage-resisting bachelors, on the newly rich and upon the religious hatred in the North that has now exploded so tragically.

Sometimes O'Connor writes with broad humor and sometimes with the utmost seriousness. He is at his best when he is witty. But it is fair to say that in either mood, he is very, very good and always entertaining.

MORE THAN ANY other land, Ireland today, Richard O'Connor points out in his book, "The Irish," is a country where the old — pony carts and thatched roofs — has succeeded in surviving the onslaught of the new — automobiles and central heating. Of the people of Ireland, O'Connor writes: "They have proved it is possible to survive in the modern world through powers as insubstantial as thought and as valuable as an idea."

THE IRISH by Richard O'Connor; Putnam, 384 pages, $7.95.

And through all the book runs one thread — the dilemma that confronts Ireland and the Irish today: Shall they exchange their isolation and independence to claim their slice of the pie of progress? And if they do make the change, how much must it cost them of the purity of their environment and the quiet of their way of life that they enjoy today?

O'Connor makes it clear that Ireland is already moving in the direction of progress. Ireland, he tells us, has clung determinedly to her childhood, but now there is a "creeping Rotarianism" afoot in that land. Smoke-belching factories, motor cars and tall buildings are appearing in what were once gorse spotted green landscapes.

"With the flush of prosperity that began about 10 years ago, he (the Irishman) discovered the formerly scarce uses and pleasures of materialism" O'Connor writes. "The Irish today, whatever the degree of their past infatuation with decay and procrastination, are beginning to hustle. There are signs of impatience with quaintness, with charming eccentricity, with mooning over or in the 'Celtic twilight'."

Only the overly-sentimental will regard this trend as all-bad for the Irish, O'Connor makes clear, especially when he writes so movingly of the poverty and hard life endured for generations by the people of Ireland's rock-strewn West.

But later on O'Connor tells us: "Within a few years Ireland's celebrated 'backwardness' may be her greatest asset. As smog, urban congestion, strangulated traffic, and all the other evils attendant on total industrialization multiply, Ireland will relatively be an oasis of pure air and water, of an uncluttered countryside and cities with a controlled growth . . . if she is careful.

"And in many ways she is a cautious old lady. From the tales of her sons and daughters who have emigrated she knows that 'progress' can entail more than high wages and easy access to consumer goods."

Thus O'Connor reassures us of his confidence that Ireland will not go overboard in its movement toward progress. "It seems likely that the Irish, with their innate resistance to change, will retain their special qualities longer than most people."

O'Connor's splendid book is also a probe for the elements that make up these special qualities of the Irish people.

"Perhaps the most valuable thing about Irishness," he concludes, "is its dogged defense of individualism, its tolerance of the individual no matter how far he may stray from conventional norms."

And: "What the Irish and their fellow Celts have to offer a world which has largely absorbed and deracinated them is the spiritual and cultural qualities which have allowed them — Scots, Welsh, Bretons, Cornish, Irish — to make an impact on Western civilization greatly out of proportion to their numbers. They have a deep sense of humanity which has never desiccated into an automatic or dogmatic humanitarianism. That is what makes living among the Irish a vivid and reviving experience for refugees from a more standardized outside world . . .

"There is considerable virtue in a society that refuses to judge you solely on such criteria as the kind of car you drive, the size of your income, the scope of your business or social accomplishments."

One winds up this book hoping prayfully that the Irish do, indeed, succeed in their delicate task of adopting enough of the new ways to lift their land beyond the cruel clutches of want and poverty, while at the same time retaining enough of the old ways to keep Ireland the island of sanity it is today — despite the terror in the North — in a world that seems to be becoming increasingly irrational. One ends the reading of "The Irish," too, looking forward eagerly to his own next visit to that enchanted land. And agreeing with Richard O'Connor that:

"It is only fair to add that the Irish are as fascinating as their reputation and their country as beautiful as its propaganda makes it out to be."

BALLANTINE'S Western Division continues its project of reprinting the best about the West in both fiction and nonfiction in paperback with a new list topped by Oscar Lewis' classic "The Big Four" about the founders of the Central Pacific Railroad, plus George R. Stewart's epic novel "Sheep Rock" and Theodora Stanwell-Flutcher's award-winning nature study "Driftwood Valley."

BEAGLE BOOKS has marked P. G. Wodehouse's 90th birthday with the republication in paperback of three of his titles — "Brinkley Manor," "Leave It to Psmith" and "The Small Bachelor."

SEAFIRE by Bill Knox, Doubleday, 182 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Bill Knox, the Scottish journalist and author who alternates in his mystery novels between the Glasgow police and the Fishery Protection Service, is back with the latter and its Chief Officer Webb Carrick in "Seafire."

This time Carrick's adventures revolve around a research vessel investigating an underseas menace to sealife and the fishing industry, and from which two men have died.

Knox writes again with the controlled competence that he has demonstrated consistently in all his books, making "Seafire" a pleasure to read. As always, both the Scottish and the nautical backgrounds are first-rate. And yet another minor, unpretentious triumph can be chalked up for this very capable writer.

Justice Department Inside Story During The Kennedy Years

KENNEDY JUSTICE by Victor S. Navasky; Atheneum, 465 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Robert F. Kennedy as an activist U.S. attorney-general ran up against J. Edgar Hoover as an entrenched top bureaucrat. The encounter gave off sparks, and despite various public pronouncements praising the cooperation on both sides, few were deceived into thinking that all was happy togetherness in the Justice Department 1961-1964.

Victor S. Navaskay in "Kennedy Justice" more than reviews the situation between attorney-general and FBI chief; he dissects it, re-dissects it, analyzes and re-analyzes it.

Navasky's meticulous approach to telling the inner workings of the Justice Department in the Kennedy years is highly reminiscent of Gay Talese's in his story of the New York Times, "The Kingdom and the Power."

Kennedy admirers may not like it, for Navasky depicts Robert Kennedy as somewhat less the dedicated idealist than they like to believe. But Hoover admirers won't like it either, for the long-time FBI boss comes off with an image more for his resistance to change than for anything else. But anyone interested in reading 465 pages of the inside story of Robert Kennedy's years as attorney-general will find "Kennedy Justice" informative and perhaps even intriguing.

Chatty Introduction To Australia — Its People And Politics

LAND OF FORTUNE, A Study of the New Australia, by Jonathan Aitken; Atheneum, 267 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Jonathan Aitken has written a chatty, readable introduction to Australia.

Fortunately for the American reader he makes no assumptions about the depth of our prior knowledge. Starting from scratch we are introduced to the people, prejudices, opportunities, drawbacks, economy, politics and social structure of this predominantly white country.

Aitken is well-equipped to be our guide. He, too, is an outsider — a British journalist who originally visited Australia in 1965 as private secretary to Selwyn Lloyd, who was then Opposition spokesman for Commonwealth Affairs. Subsequently, Aitken made four additional visits, each of six or seven weeks duration and conducted over 500 interviews, making full use of his reporter's obervational skills.

A Conservative politician himself, his dissection of the politics and politicians of Australia is gossipy and enlightening.

Speaking of Gough Whitlam, Labor leader of the Opposition, he relates: ". . . when he (Whitlam) was asked what were the major Socialist reforms he would introduce (if he were elected) Prime Minister. His reply was a dreary recitation of the drainage statistics in Australia, which he said proved that Perth and Brisbane were the least sewered cities in the world. After more of this sanitary inspector's lament, the Leader of the Opposition declared: 'We are the only Party in Australia that will ever reform this situation. Sewers are usually Socialist.' "

Aitken can be catty, but he works hard at being fair-minded. He analyzes the forces bringing about modification of the White Australia policy and the resistance to those changes. He is sympathetic to the late Prime Minister Holt's desire to make Australia an integral part of Asia rather than continue the image of a European Caucasian island in an Oriental sea.

His discussion of the stock market and the migrants sounds like turn-of-the-century American — melting pot and all. On the other hand, the discovery of minerals, the vastness of the area and the underpopulation sound chords reminiscent of an even earlier America. There is still much of frontier values and attitudes in a country the size of the continental U.S. that holds only 13 million people.

On the dustjacket the publisher calls "Land of Fortune" a "love letter," while on the title page Aitken calls it a study. The truth lies in between. It is too critical and perceptive to be a love letter. It requires an index to be usable as a study. In fact, an index would make it a more re-readable love letter. On the plus side of the end paper maps are clear and helpful.

Read "Land of Fortune." Australia deserves a more knowing public in the U.S. and Aitken has sugar-coated the informational pill neatly. And for historical perspective, take a look at "The Tireless Traveler" and see what another chatty reporter from the Mother Country, Anthony Trollope, saw down under a hundred years ago.

The Biography Of A Free Spirit

THE REAL ISADORA by Victor Seroff; Dial, 441 pages, $10. Reviewed by Dee Dinsmore.

With no attempt to gloss her life and with an honest appraisal of her faults, Victor Seroff has written what is probably the first truthful biography of Isadora Duncan.

Moving quickly through Isadora's early years in San Francisco, where she was born in 1878, Seroff delves deeply into her life, her triumphs and her despairs.

A legend in her own time and a free spirit in the truest sense, Isadora Duncan brought a new concept of dancing to a generation that never really understood her.

Seroff, who knew her only in the final years of her life, perhaps knew her better than the people who were closest to her from the beginning of her career. It was to him that she told the truth of her love affairs, her total despair at the tragic death of her two illigitimate children, her only marriage at a late age to a man young enough to be her son.

He tears apart the biographies written after her death as figments of imagination and written for nothing more than financial gain and personal publicity. He dismisses Isadora's autobiography as pure fiction.

ISADORA DUNCAN was photographed in Nice, France, in 1926 in this never-before-published illustration from Victor Seroff's "The Real Isadora."

Isadora's fondest dream was to have schools throughout the United States and Europe and although she did manage to open one or two in Europe, there was never enough money and she was constantly exploited by "friends." The only time in her life when she was completely free from money worries were the years she spent with Paris Singer, a millionaire who worshipped and indulged her. But, even this, did not last for Isadora's penchant for exhibitionism soon drove him from her.

Seroff is unable to explain the genius of this woman with little formal education and no musical training. Her ability to sit quietly, listen to a musical composition, form the dance in her head and, with no rehearsal, give a beautiful performance, mystified the theatrical world.

In the final chapters of her life, Isadora lived what came to be known as her "Russian Years." Driven from the United States because of her curtain speeches in defense of the Russian form of government following the revolution, it was to Russia that she fled. It was here she married for the only time.

She was never to return to the United States. With her husband and with the aid of the Russian government, she went on tour to France with the hope of regaining her position in the theater. The dream was never realized, for in 1927, at the age of 49, in the south of France, Isadora Duncan, indulging her passion for speeding automobiles, was killed in a tragic accident.

Seroff's book is a moving tribute to an incredible woman, perhaps born too soon but who, nevertheless, left a lasting mark on modern dancing as it is done today.

A Stevenson Novel Encore

VITTORIA COTTAGE by D. E. Stevenson; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 250 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

A D. E. Stevenson novel in hand is an unfailing guarantee of an evening of quiet, relaxing reading pleasure.

It has been that way now for decades with this Scottish lady. And the unfading charm of her stories is demonstrated by the reprinting of "Vittoria Cottage," first published 22 years ago.

In truth, "Vittoria Cottage" is not one of her best books. But it remains an entertaining and warm story of romance in a rural English town, centered around young widow Caroline Dering who is involved not only in her own affairs of the heart, but those of her grown children as well.

Miss Stevenson is as always the calm, controlled, levelheaded narrator who does not need crises and catastrophies to win your interest, but who can hold your attention with more commonplace events, skillfully, incisively related.

The Human Dimension Of An Earlier Kind Of War

LONDON WAR NOTES 1939-1945 by Mollie Panter-Downes; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 378 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce Anderson.

It is so long ago now — the Second World War. And it was so far, far different from the wars of more recent memory — Korea, and the seemingly unending Indochina involvement with its aura of "1984."

"London War Notes" will bring back much of the almost-forgotten feeling of those years for those who can remember. It may even give some sense of what it was like to the many born since that greatest of all armed conflicts.

Mollie Panter-Downes wrote a series of letters for the New Yorker from the time the invasion of Poland by Germany plunged Europe into the war until the surrender of Hitler's armies nearly six years later. During much of that time, the London from which she wrote was either under attack from the air or in fearful expectation of attack by both air and sea.

The pluck of the British comes through in every one of the letters, collected in this volume. The petty annoyances are there, too — sometimes overriding the greater issues and the real dangers, just as they always do for human beings.

This is the human dimension of war for a non-combatant — war in which everyone was involved, not just those sent abroad to fight and die.

THE HOST who can serve his guests wine from a bottle bearing his own personal label, and who can mention casually that the wine was made from grapes grown in his own backyard, is entitled to a flush of pride. But before the wine can be made, the grapes must be planted and nurtured to maturity. It is not as difficult as it sounds.

Home-Made Wine? First The Grapes

Imagine the envious glances and comments you will receive if, at your next party, you serve a wine made from grapes grown in your own backyard.

A good many Californians will be harvesting grapes from their gardens and making like winemakers this month.

IT IS NOT a difficult hobby, particularly here in California. And it affords you a great deal of pride and satisfaction when you can gaze upon and taste the final product made from your own grapes and poured from a bottle embellished by your own private label.

But if October is the month for harvesting the grapes and making the wine, it is not the month for planting the grapes. If you did not take care of that at some earlier date, you will have to wait until January to plant, and until some future autumn for your first harvest and your first winemaking with the produce from your own yard.

So make a note right now to include among your New Year's resolutions for 1972 a January planting of a grape variety suited to the making of wine.

IN MARIN County, where cool temperatures rule out many varieties, the Thompson Seedless Grape is the best bet for a white wine.

For a red wine, the Concord and the Muscat grapes do well in Marin.

There are other varieties that can be grown in Marin County, especially in our warmer, more protected sectors. But generally the larger grapes, such as Toquay and the Ladyfinger, will not ripen satisfactorily in our climate.

BEFORE harvesting your grapes, visit any of the numerous shops that will provide you with all the necessary equipment from fermenting barrels to corks.

And detailed instructions on making wine are available in

AS A GENERAL rule, red wine is made more easily and more successful than white wine by the amateur, since the latter is more delicate.

Grapes take to most soils. Some of the best wine grapes of both California and France are grown in poor gravelly soils.

Depending on the variety, 12 vines should produce sufficient grapes for approximately 12 gallons of wine, or about 60 of the regular-size fifth bottles.

WHEN PLANTING time arrives this winter, prepare the soil before planting the vines in good-sized holes four to five feet apart. Grape vines are hardy when it comes to withstanding climatic changes, but they are weaklings when it comes to standing by themselves. They need the support of redwood stakes or trellises to which they must be tied.

The grapes should be fertilized with a 12-6-6 preparation such as Ortho Gro Liquid Plant Food. To prevent mildew, the vine leaves should be dusted with garden sulfur, especially after rains. And each year the dormant vines be pruned.

Patience is a necessity for the would-be home winemaker. It depends upon how large the vines are when you buy them as to when you will reap your first harvest. A wait of three or four years is likely. But after the fourth year you should get a good crop.

these shops, as well as in bookstores and libraries.

It is ironical that France, most famous of all countries for its wines, has areas where grapes simply will not grow. But some kind of grape suited to the making of wine can be grown in every region of the United States, providing they are given a little tender care.

BUT KEEP in mind that before you make that wine, you must register with the Internal Revenue Service by filling out its Form 1541, "Tax Free Wine for Family Use," and turning it in to the nearest office of the service's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division.

Registration must be completed five days before you begin your winemaking. And the registration entitles the head of a household and his family to make up to 200 gallons of wine tax free.

Floss Flower Aptly Named

Floss Flower is the name gardeners have given to Ageratum, and you have only to see its puff-like blue flowers to understand why.

Too many gardeners fail to take advantage of the hard-to-match, clear blue which this compact little annual offers. It makes a handsome edging for semi-shaded areas, a sea of blue when massed in a bed by itself.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓ Disbud camellias this month or next, before the plants come into bloom and waste their energies on too many buds. Avoid leaving two buds together — thin them out to some three or four inches apart along the branches. When forced to choose between buds, pinch off the one that faces into the disfiguring elements of sun and rain.
- ✓ Shop for chrysanthemums in bloom. Use them for indoor decoration, or sink the containers into the garden soil where quick splashes of color are needed.
- ✓ Hurry to plant those annuals for winter bloom. Calendulas, violas, pansies, snapdragons, Iceland poppies, stocks and fairy primroses all provide splendid cool season cheer.
- ✓ Try planting daffodils and other narcissus bulbs in pots for portable early spring color.
- ✓ Let the tops of dahlias ripen off before cutting them back when their bloom is gone.

A Guide For Rosarians That Rates The Varieties

In the compact, easy-to-read 1972 edition of "The Handbook for Selecting Roses" is a listing of horticultural and color classifications of all the most popular roses.

Each rose is rated by the American Rose Society to help people select roses for their gardens. The beginner will find the rating feature most useful as a guide for purchasing new varieties.

The new grower would be well advised to stick to the more highly rated kinds — those that have proven easy to grow under a wide variety of conditions. Any rose rated over 8.0 will do well in almost any garden and there are enough roses in this rating range to plant an entire backyard.

The convenient size (three and a half by six and a half inches) of the Handbook fits neatly into pocket or purse. American Rose Society members make it a practice to carry this handy reference with them at all times.

There are more than 1,000 roses listed in their horticultural classes, plus a section of high-rated roses by color.

This rose reference guide is available by sending 10 cents plus a self-addressed stamped envelope to The American Rose Society, 4048 Roselea Place, Columbus, Ohio, 43214.

National Flowers

Among the national flowers are:

Argentina, wattle, acacia; Canada, sugar maple leaf; Chile, bellflower; China, narcissus; Costa Rica, cattleya orchid; Ecuador, chinohona tree; Egypt, lotus; England, red rose; France, fleur-de-lis (iris); Germany, cornflower, Kaiserblume, centaurea cyanus.

Greece, violet and olive; Guatemala, lycasts (orchid); Holland, tulip; India, lotus; Ireland, shamrock; Italy, lily, violet, daisy; Japan, chrysanthemum and cherry; Lithuania, rue; Luxembourg, Honduras, Persia, rose; Mexico, prickly pear; Newfoundland, pitcherplant; Norway, heather; Nova Scotia, trailing arbutus.

YOUR HOME: Headboard Doesn't Have To Match

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

We've come so far from the matched furniture look that it still amazes me to find young couples purchasing coordinated groups of furniture for bedroom use.

The bedroom is probably the last place we allow the American eclectic look to take hold. Yet it's probably the easiest place to practice a simple form of eclecticism.

WHAT DO YOU need to accomplish a good night's sleep? A pad of foam? A box spring and mattress? A wooden slab with latex cushions? A hammock? What about a bunk bed?

Really there are minimal needs for body support. All the other things we add to the bedroom are for extra luxury, comfort and appearance.

We don't want to strip those luxury items away, but we should think anew about how to achieve them in a fresh way.

All a headboard is expected to do is provide a backstop for the bed, right? So it can actually be a piece of wrought iron, a panel of fabric, a great rug or tapestry or even a wall-hung bookcase. We seldom expect that headboard to tilt out as a pillow rest, although some manufacturers have so designed their furniture.

READING LIGHTS usually are on a wall or table adjacent to the bed, so that function needn't be fulfilled in a headboard.

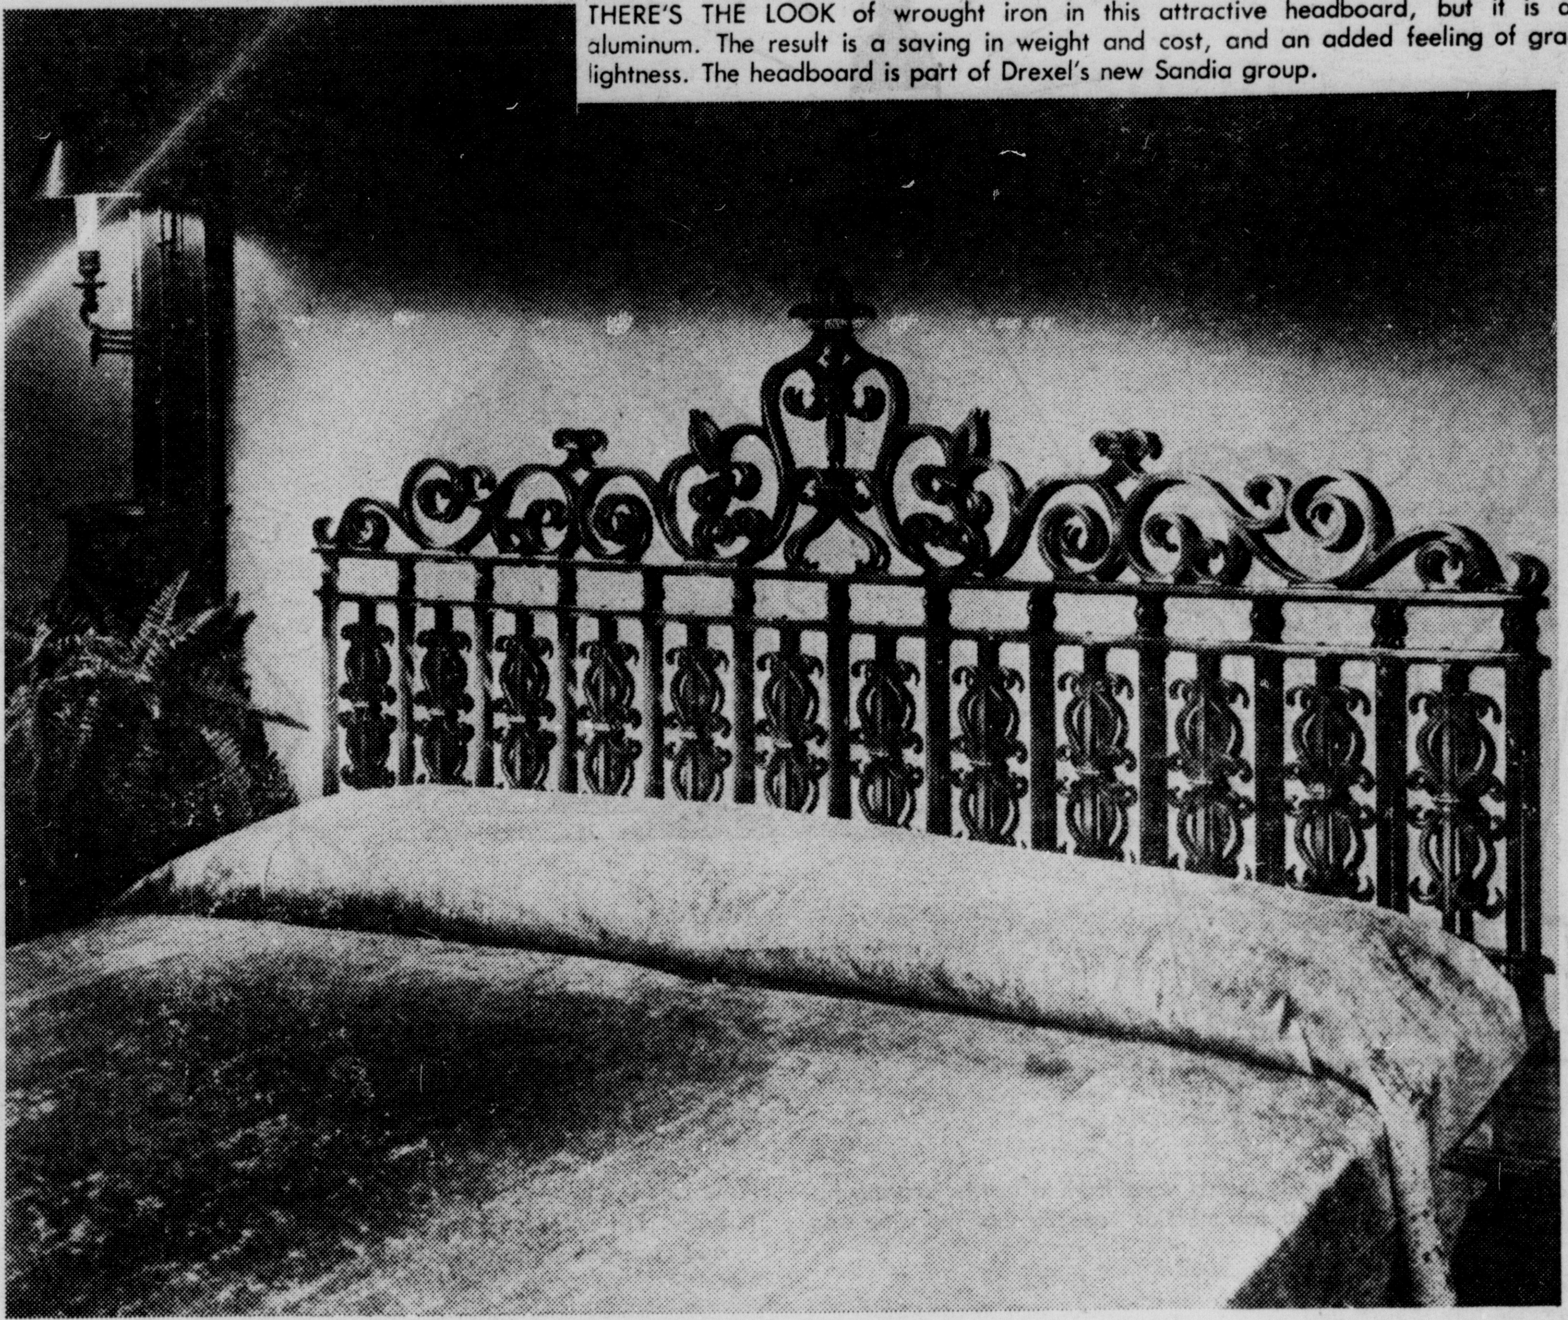
So, truthfully, we use the headboard more for a decorative element than for any real purpose.

The bed shown here is an example of an idea that started as an interior designer's trick and became so popular it wound up being manufactured.

Here a beautiful wrought-iron gate was reinterpreted in lighter weight aluminum in order to function in back of that sleeping pad. Wrought-iron fences have been widely used by decorators for this purpose, but not everyone happens to have a little old iron monger in his backyard. So the fences became scarce and expensive.

Now Drexel achieves that Old World look, but by interpreting it in aluminum they make it easier to move and less expensive than the iron kind. Naturally, you don't have to buy one of these, perhaps you can find your own original concept, an old window grille or a garden wall bracket.

There's always the old wagon wheel. Maybe you can think of a groovy way to turn that old relic into an item for your early eclectic or early Goodwill decorating job.



THERE'S THE LOOK of wrought iron in this attractive headboard, but it is actually aluminum. The result is a saving in weight and cost, and an added feeling of grace and lightness. The headboard is part of Drexel's new Sandia group.

How To Keep Your Winter Fuel Cost Down

If you want to play it smart, some "cool" fall preparations will lead to a warm winter.

The American Gas Association offers these simple, money-saving hints to help you conserve fuel and keep a check on your fuel bills during the coming winter season.

Use nature to its best advantage. Sunshine is free, and it's warm — so, when the sun is shining, open up window blinds, shades and curtains, and "let the sun shine in." When the sun goes down or doesn't shine, keep windows coverings closed, and let them form an insulation against the cold air outside.

IF YOU HAVE a fireplace, be sure the damper is closed when it isn't in use.

Try to keep the opening and closing of outside doors at a minimum. Each time one is opened, heat escapes, and your furnace has to work extra to replace the lost heat.

Keep heaters free from obstructions. If you cover a radiator or block off a heat duct, the heat from that source is cut off and the room temperature will drop.

A GREAT WAY to waste money is to get into the habit of constantly adjusting the thermostat. Contrary to popular belief, turning up the thermostat doesn't make the furnace produce any more heat — what it does is keep the furnace operating longer, and use up more fuel.

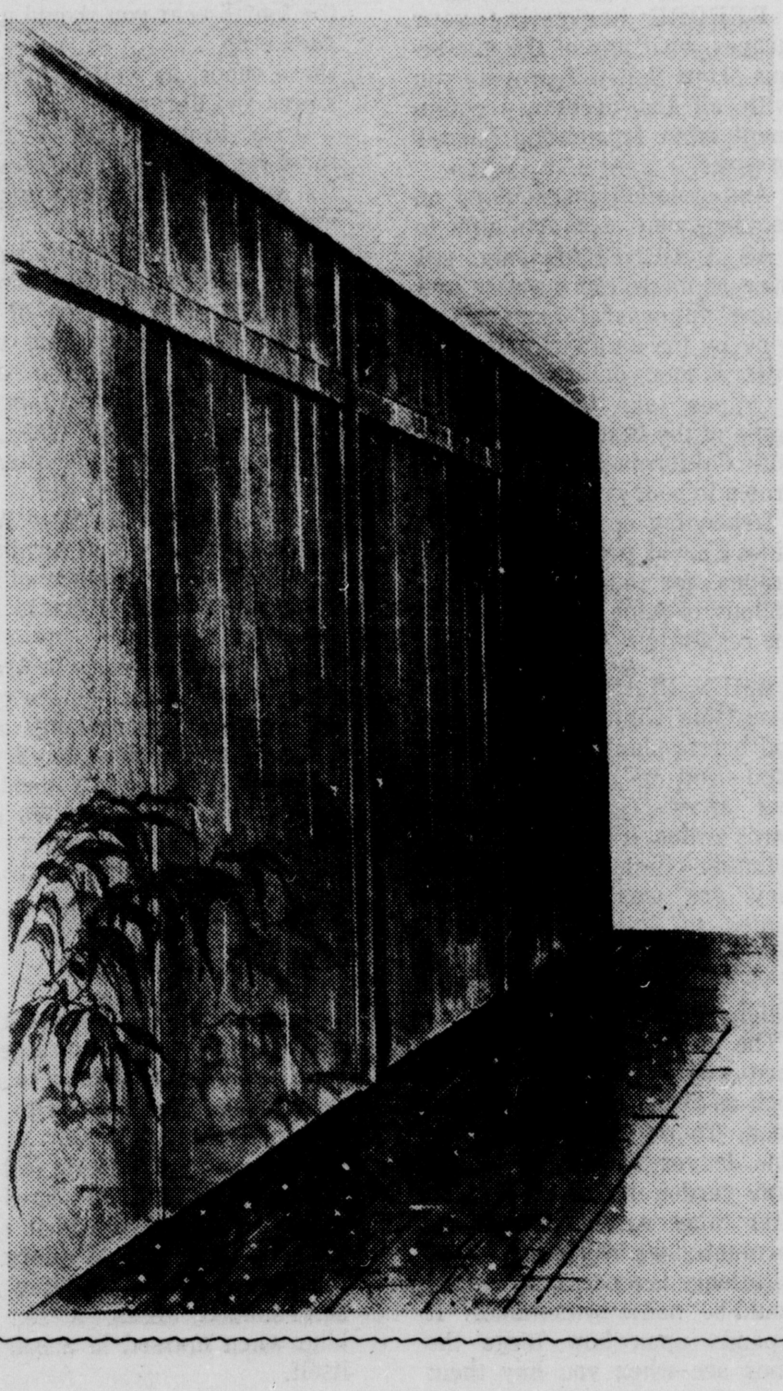
Experiment during the first few cold days to find the lowest Indoor temperature at which your home is comfortable. Then, set the thermostat at that temperature and leave it. The thermostat will automatically do the rest to maintain the desired temperature.

Change your furnace filter several times during the winter. If the filter is clogged, the furnace may operate all day long, especially during very cold weather, and still not be able to work efficiently.

IF THERE ARE some rooms in your home that are not used regularly in winter, turn off the registers and radiators in those rooms and keep the door closed. There's no need to heat an unused room.

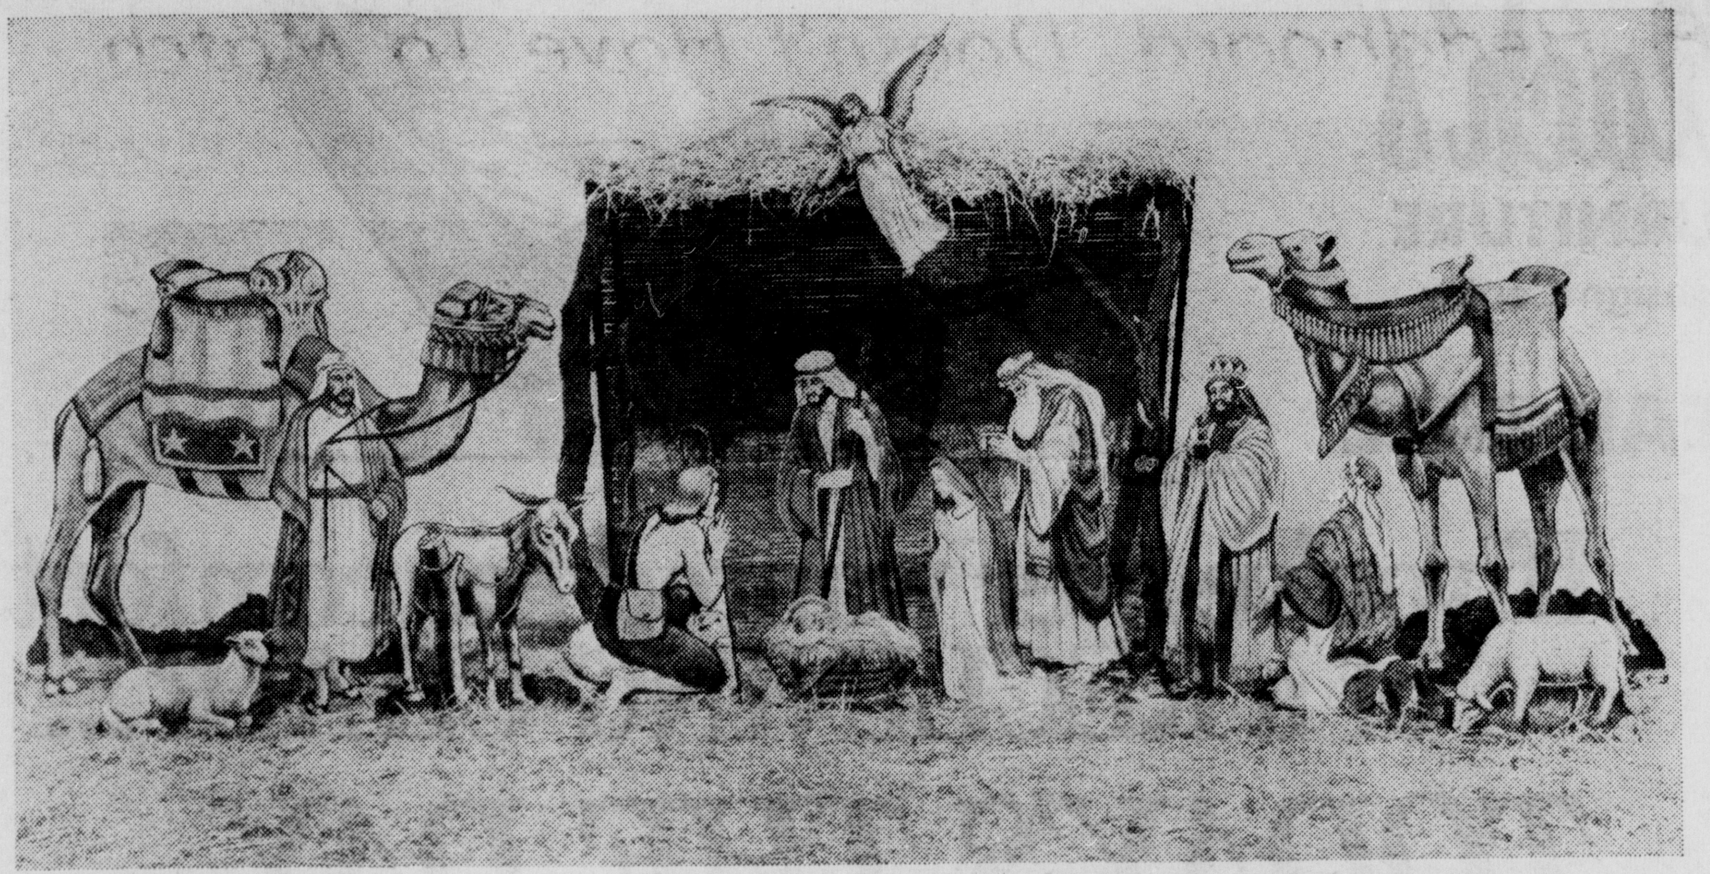
And, if your basement, attic or garage isn't heated, keep the door closed so that the heat from the heated part of the house won't escape.

It only takes a few minutes to follow these few simple preparations to winterize your home and be sure your furnace is operating properly. And it takes even less effort to keep your home heating system operating efficiently all winter long.



WITHOUT any doubt, the most frequent complaint of house owners is the absence of sufficient storage spaces in their homes. And a most practical solution to that problem is the installation of wall storage units. To install your own units, send $1 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Easi-Bild Pattern Co.'s "How to Build Wall to Wall Storage" Book No. 634. Be sure to include your zip code number. You will get illustrated instructions for the construction of a variety of useful storage units, some with sliding doors, some with wheels for mobility, and even one that can be hung inside of the kitchen door to provide storage for cans while taking up a minimum of space. It is a most useful project for the do-it-yourselfer suffering from that generations-old storage problem.

Handyman's Pages



AT LEFT, the creche remains by far the most popular and most meaningful of all the outdoor Christmas designs. This Nativity Scene was erected with the use of Steve Ellingson's picture set — No. C-7 — that he has been offering now for a number of years, and which have been used with great effectiveness by hundreds of churches, organizations, municipal and county governments and householders. Users of the Ellingson patterns have shown a marked preference, their designer says, for the more traditional settings. And thus, year after year, comes the calls for this telling in figures of the Christmas story.

The Nativity Scene: Christmas Favorite

By STEVE ELLINGSON

This is the time of year when letters pour in from do-it-yourselfers all over the country asking for outdoor Christmas displays.

Their favorite this year, as always, is the creche, and for good reason . . . it's the most appropriate and appealing of all outdoor decorations. In churches and homes, and even businesses throughout the world this Christmas more eyes and hearts will trun to the creche than ever before.

Today the nativity scene is a Christmas tradition — a symbol of joy and devotion. Its popularity constantly increases as more people and churches join the interdenominational "CHRIST in CHRISTmas" committee in its campaign to keep Christ in Christmas. This is the 17th year we have been asked to support this worthwhile cause.

The scene pictured above is something any amateur can make in a few hours. It's two-thirds life-size (camels are over five feet tall). The figures come to you printed in rich, vibrant colors. All you need do is glue the pictures on plywood, then saw them out. They are then ready to go on display.

The pictures are waterproof (like billboards) and may be used outdoors year after year in all kinds of weather. It's a project that the entire family, especially the youngsters, can help with.

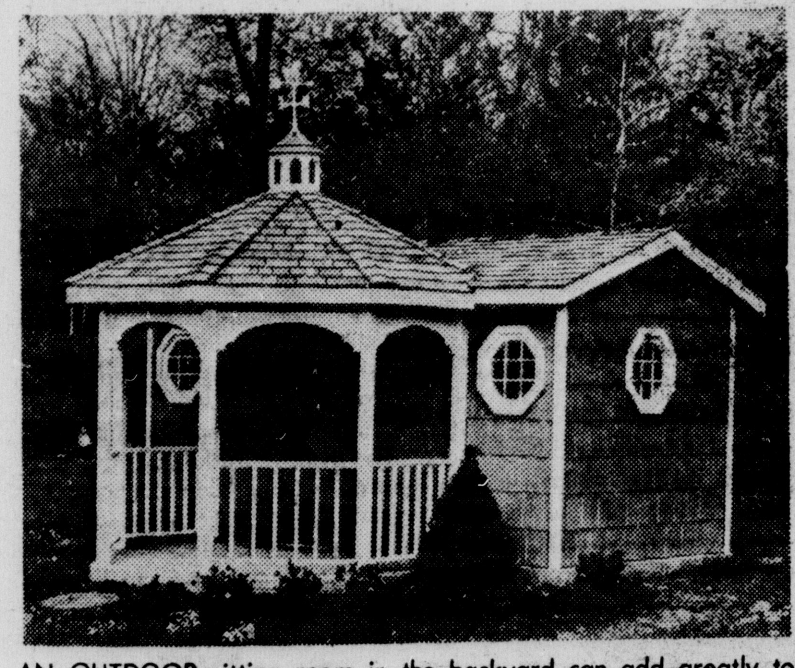
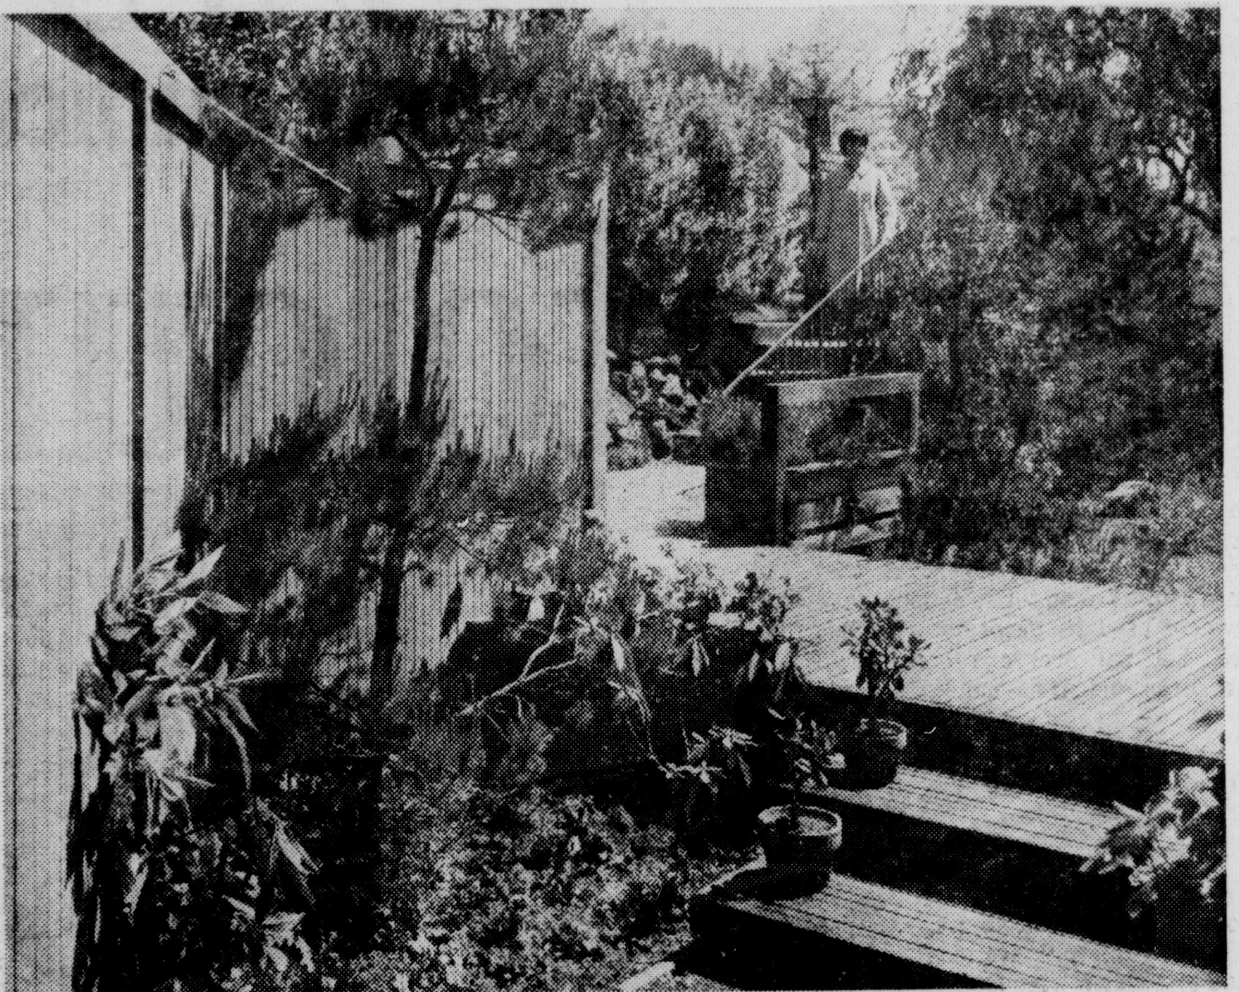
Send stamped, addressed envelope for a free folder picturing a complete assortment of outdoor Christmas displays and toys the handyman can build.

USEFUL GAZEBO



AN OUTDOOR sitting room in the backyard can add greatly to the appearance and value of a residential property. This octagon-shaped gazebo is especially attractive. And practical, too, in that it includes at the rear a storage house for bicycles, lawn tools, etc. The entire structure is built on a concrete slab. The exterior covering is a rustic, textured siding, Masonite Bayside, that looks like cedar shakes. And the two contrasting shapes are molded to form an integrated whole, while octagonal-shaped windows and a cupola topped by a weather vane add a look of distinction.



AN ENTRY DECK of two-by-four-inch western wood leading to the house has replaced a longer flight of steps, a gravel walk and a concrete porch to simplify and beautify the approach to this home. The fence is of one-by-two-inch resawn fir slats stained green. The planter box was left to weather naturally.

Remodeling Job Adds Charm

The natural landscaping look, disturbing the site as little as possible, is growing in favor, and can lend a gracious, inviting approach and entry to a home.

This often is the case with newer houses, built on sloping sites once considered unsuitable, or at least less desirable. But it's also possible to bring new charm to older homes that have long or sloping approaches.

ONE JOB of landscape remodeling recently observed added warmth and a new personality with an entry deck of western wood. The deck replaces a longer flight of steps down from the street, a gravel walk and a concrete porch.

Marking a turn as the new deck-walkway angles from the street to the house is a planter box of western red cedar and a low railing of four-by-four-inch cedar posts. Planter, railing and deck all have been left unfinished to weather naturally.

The deck of two-by-four-inch Douglas fir on edge bridges the existing walk-way around the house and leads up to the front entry. Two wide steps of two-by-four-inch fir lead down to this walk from each side of the deck, for access to the yard.

Garden steps must be at least as wide as stairs in a house, as garden equipment constantly is being carried up and down them, and wheeled equipment often must negotiate them.

A SCREEN fence across the front of the house adjoins the entry deck. It provides a backdrop for trees and plantings in the naturally landscaped yard and blocks glare of auto headlights passing in the street above. The fence is one-by-two-inch resawn fir slats on a frame of two-by-fours, and is stained green.

Entry decks also may expand across the front or around the side of the house, adding pleasant outdoor living space and improving access between separate areas of the house.

Ideas On How To Add A Room

As families grow larger, it soon becomes apparent the only housing solution, short of moving, is to add more room to the house. The problem usually is deciding where and how.

Five architect-designed add-a-room projects show how to gain living space with a loft room, master bedroom, garage conversion, over-the-garage room, and a learnning center.

Building Ban Is In Court

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — The first constitutional test of the state's water pollution control law went to trial yesterday.

The challenge came in a bid by Marin developers to overthrow a ban by the Regional Water Quality Control Board on new construction in much of the Ross Valley and Southern Marin.

Superior Court Judge Ira A. Brown Jr., however, again refused to consider lifting the ban until he reaches a final decision on the constitutional challenge. He indicated his decision will be reached sometime after Nov. 8.

"There is much too much here for me to assimilate to rule today," he said, pointing to a foot-high stack of legal documents filed in the case.

The ban was imposed on the City of Mill Valley and Richardson Bay Sanitary District in June, and on the Ross Valley Sanitary District in July. The court action was filed against the regional board by the Ross Valley district and the Citizens Assistance League to Marin County Sanitary Districts, a group of developers and real estate men.

The audience of more than 30 persons packed the small courtroom in city hall. Also present were top state water officials, who told newsmen that the state's 1969 Porter-Cologne Act was at stake in the court action. Without the power to ban new connections to force improvement of sewage treatment, the act would be gutted, they said.

Seaside attorney Saul M. Weingarten, representing the Ross Valley district and the citizens league, argued that the ban violated the equal protection provision of the 14th Amendment by denying owners of undeveloped land their right to develop their property.

He also asserted the regional board acted unfairly because it never heard testimony on the issue itself, accepting a recommendation from a hearing group.

Weingarten also branded the ban as "arbitrary and totally unreasonable," producing a witness who assured the judge that only "an inconsequential amount" of increased pollution would go into the bay without the ban.

The attorney claimed that the ban was based on standards tougher than those imposed on dischargers elsewhere, but Judge Brown quickly noted that other parts of the bay may not have the problems of Richardson Bay.

Weingarten's witness, Pal Alto consulting engineer John Jenks, testified that the regional board's standards for the three Marin dischargers were "excessively restrictive" because they were the same as for a recreation lake with no dilution of pollution.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Roderick E. Walston, however, won concessions from Jenks that he did not know the ban allowed additional construction as treatment was improved and that he was not familiar with the dischargers' violations.

Another witness called by Weingarten, Jeffory S. Morshead, Mill Valley real estate company owner, testified that the additional construction allowed as improvements are made did not satisfy the demand for building permits. He said he still could not sell more than $500,000 in property because of the ban.

After more than an hour of testimony by Jenks and Morshead, Walston moved that their testimony be removed from the record since they had had an opportunity to testify before the regional board. The judge reserved his decision on Walston's motion, but told Weingarten the court was interested only in testimony that had been excluded from the hearing by the regional board.

Weingarten challenged the re-

Cambodia Assembly Stripped Of Powers

Government Orders A New Constitution

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — The Cambodian government today decided to strip the sometimes maverick National Assembly of all lawmaking powers and order it to write a new constitution, government sources said.

The sources said the decision to form a "Constituent Assembly" was a compromise between factions who favored ending the parliament entirely or extending its mandate as a law making body.

The decision affects both upper and lower houses of the Cambodian parliament, but is aimed primarily at the National Assembly which roughly equals the American House of Representatives.

The government sources said Chief of State Cheng Heng played the final mediating role between the government of the prime minister Marshal Lon Nol, who favored letting the Assembly die when its mandate runs out Monday, and parliamentarians who wanted the mandate extended.

Under the Cambodian constitution, the chief of state is supposed to make the final decision on extending the life of the Assembly when elections are not possible but in fact its fate is decided by the cabinet.

The high command in Phnom Penh also reported today that Cambodian and Communist forces fought a bloody, hand-to-hand battle on the slopes of Mount Santuk Friday. A spokesman claimed 100 Viet Cong were killed while the Cambodians lost only 14 dead.

In Saigon, the U.S. command said B52 Stratofortresses raked Communist positions in Tay Ninh province at the Cambodian frontier, dropping tons of high explosives Friday night and once again today.

The strikes hit targets on three sides of Fire Base Pace, an embattled American artillery outpost which provides support for South Vietnamese troops who are engaged in a three-week-old battle against a Communist offensive.

The North Vietnamese Army (NVA) shelled three South Vietnamese bases today, wounding six soldiers at one of them.

In two ground skirmishes, both near highway 22, three NVA and one South Vietnamese soldier were reported killed.

In other action South Vietnamese forces killed 23 Communists in a battle near Song Mao, 130 miles east-northeast of Saigon Friday, the South Vietnamese command said. Another 11 Communist troops were killed in skirmishes in the central coastal region. No South Vietnamese casualties were reported.

The B52 missions to protect Pace came only hours after U.S. officers reported the

Magee Convinces Judge To Review Los Angeles Cases

By MARY LEYDECKER

San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee yesterday enjoyed probably his most triumphant day in court since he was first sent to state prison eight years ago for armed robbery and kidnapping from Los Angeles.

During the eight years, he was peppered the courts with handwritten writs and peititions calling the 1963 conviction a "railroad" and a "known fraud conviction."

Throughout his present case in Marin, where he is accused of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the August 1970 shoot-out at the Civic Center, the 32-year-old convict has based his hopes of acquittal on overturning the earlier conviction.

He has maintained that since, in his belief, he was illegally imprisoned, that he would not be found guilty in connection with the events of Aug. 7, 1970.

Yesterday Magee finally got a judge, Leonard M. Ginsberg of Tulare County, sitting in Marin Superior Court, to set a hearing on Nov. 10 on going into charges of possible error in the 1963 trial and a retrial granted in 1965.

(Magee won the 1965 retrial on the grounds that the judge had committed prejudicial error by combining the case with that of his codefendant.)

The retrial by the same judge, Herbert Walker, did not satisfy Magee, however, because the matters he had challenged were not taken up. He ened up by "taking the fifth" (refusing to testify on the grounds it would incriminate him) in the second trial.

Yesterday Magee got a big assist from his court-appointed attorney, Ernest L. Graves of Los Angeles, who was acting only as a "friend of the court," in the challenge of the old case.

Graves, a tall, gray-haired man, made an impassioned plea to the court in which he listed 11 "prejudicial errors" by the trial judge and Magee's earlier attorneys.

He claimed that a plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity" entered by an attorney against Magee's will had prejudiced the jury and that a defense attorney had not tried to produce evidence that would have established his client's innocence.

Even at this late date, Graves said, "I believe I can still show Magee's innocence."

"That was a nice argument, Mr. Graves," Magee said graciously when the lawyer had finished. He qualified his compliment, however, by adding, "It could have been shorter, more precise and to the point."

(Magee long has insisted that his present plight is due to attorneys and that he should be allowed to represent himself.)

Apparently pleased with the progress he made today, Magee who was allowed by Judge Ginsberg to appear in court without handcuffs although still chained to a chair, exhibited model behavior.

He apparently was especially pleased that Judge Ginsberg found his handwritten petition for a writ of habeas corpus in legal order and said he saw no reason not to allow the convict to continue to act as his own attorney in the matter with assistance from Graves and attorney Robert D. Carrow of Novato.

Graves said after court yesterday that if Magee's earlier conviction were overturned, the convict probably would be transferred to Marin County Jail to await trial on the shoot-out charges.

Winds Snap Tree Limbs, Power Lines

Brisk autumn winds, gusting up to 40 miles per hour, swept Marin County yesterday, snapping tree limbs and power lines in scattered areas.

On San Francisco Bay, where the Coast Guard reported winds at about 20 miles per hour with gusts up to 40, a houseboat broke loose from its moorings in Greenbrae and drifted past San Quentin Point.

A Coast Guard spokesman said a patrol vessel caught up with the bobbing houseboat at about 2:30 p.m. and towed it back to its berth.

In Santa Venetia, the wind lifted a 15-by-20 foot fiberglass patio cover over the roof of a home at 631 Vendola Drive, occupied by two women, Elise Doolittle and Gwen Davis.

After grazing the roof, the cover struck a parked car and came to rest in the driveway.

Elsewhere in the county, minor damage was reported from

HALLOWEEN DECOR

Skull — Forgotten Remains Of Murder

An old skull, used by a Sausalito family for eight years as a Halloween decoration, is apparently all that remains of a long-forgotten murder.

The Marin County Coroner's office said yesterday that the skull, turned in to Sausalito police Wednesday, was that of a man who had been dead 15 to 40 years.

Cause of death, the coroner said, was apparently a blow to the right side of the head which fractured the victim's skull.

Hildred Gallagher of 25 Atwood Street told police her children found the skull amid bushes in the family's back yard about eight years ago.

Police are investigating the identity of the forgotten victim. The rest of the skeleton has not been found, despite a search of her backyard, Mrs. Gallagher said.

Mrs. Gallagher said the family thought the grisly find was an old Indian skull and decided to use it as a scary Halloween decoration. When not in use, it was stored on a closet shelf.

However, when she removed the object from its keeping place this year, a neighbor asked if the find had ever been reported to police.

Mrs. Gallagher followed her neighbor's advice and took the skull to police, who turned it over to the coroner's office.

Yesterday, the coroner's office reported that two College of Marin anthropoligists had studied the jawless skull and reported it was that of a muscular young man about 25 years of age.

REDWOOD IS VICTOR OVER SAN RAFAEL

Marin County Athletic League football teams began a third week of conference competition last night with Redwood High defeating host San Rafael 21-13.

College of Marin opened its 1971 Camino Norte Conference play, losing 16-9 to West Valley College of Campbell in Buck Stadium, Santa Clara. Clara.

In a non-league high school game, Novato beat Vallejo 9-6 on the loser's field.

Tamalpais and Drake battled at College of Marin this afternoon, while San Marin takes on Terra Linda tonight at 8 o'clock at San Rafael High. Marin Catholic hosted Healdsburg today in another non-conference game.

Iranian Students Protest

FBI agents and bomb experts arrived in San Francisco today to investigate the blast that caused approximately $1 million damage to the three-story building and surrounding homes.

"At first we thought it was an earthquake—the shaking," Mrs. Homa Adle, wife of the Iranian consul general said. "Then we heard the blast and the shattering and breaking of glass. It sounded as if the house were falling down.

"Then the fire and smoke."

No one was seriously injured in the bombing. Both the blast and demonstration coincided with the glittering celebration held by the Shah across the world in Persepolis to commemorate the 2,500th anniversary of the Persian Empire.

"It is only a miracle that my whole family is not dead," said Consul General Dr. Parvis Adle, who rushed home from a meeting after Thursday's 11:44 p.m. blast. He blamed the bombing on "professional criminals" and called it a "definite plot to kill me and my family."

Mrs. Adle and her three children escaped from the flaming building through broken glass and shattered furniture and only suffered cuts and bruises. Police immediately cordoned off the area where nearly 50 homes were damaged.

"We had a terrible time at the front door," said Mrs. Adle. "The door is glass and it had shattered and the glass was on the hall floor. It jammed between the bottom of the door and the carpet and I couldn't open the door. We pulled on it, my son and I, and finally got it a little open and we ran out in our bare feet."

FBI bomb expert Tom Howard said it "was a blast of major proportion" such as would result from a minimum of 30 sticks of dynamite.

"We are not sure yet what kind of bomb it was," Howard said, "but the area smells of ammonia and ammonia is usually associated with dynamite."

Adle blamed the bombing on the same Iranian emigres who have repeatedly demonstrated at the consulate against the Shah's government.

"We know the names of the persons involved," said Adle. They are not students. They are professional criminals. They wanted to kill. This is not a political action, this is a criminal action."

Fairfax Recinds Townhouse Order

A stop-work order on a townhouse development in Fairfax was lifted yesterday at a special meeting of the city council.

City Clerk Eileen L. Foster reported the council lifted the order after representatives of the developer, Gentry Development Co., agreed to conditions in connection with their work in Fairfax Creek.

The council had ordered work on the Village West project halted Tuesday when Councilman Frank J. Egger charged Gentry was "violating" the creek and destroying trees and ground cover on a 150-yard stretch of creekside.

The council last night directed Gentry to restore the stripped area as close as possible to its natural state and ordered that — with the exception of one particular fig tree and one apricot tree — no more trees are to be cut.

The council also ordered that no further tree-trimming be done without specific permission of the council or its representatives. Mayor Cornelis van Vliet last night named Egger and planning commissioner Hugh O. Winn as council representatives in the matter.

Furthermore, the council ordered, clearing of blackberries, dead wood and debris from the creek was not to be done with bulldozers.

The apartment development is on a 6.8-acre site at Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Olema Road, adjacent to the creek.

Agnew In Greece For Short Visit

ATHENS (UPI)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew arrived today to visit the land of his ancestors and said the United States and Greece shared an inherited spirit —"the right of men to seek their own destiny and pride."

Hours before Agnew and his wife arrived for a combined official and private visit lasting eight days, two small explosions slightly damaged cars owned by two U.S. military men.

Police did not link the vice president's arrival and the explosions although leftwingers announced they would conduct an "Agnew, get out of Greece" campaign.

Strict security measures were in force when Agnew flew in from Iran where he represented President Nixon at the Shah of Iran's celebrations marking 2,500 years of the Persian Empire.

Premier George Papadopoulos greeted Agnew at Athens Airport. A crowd of cheering Americans was on hand and Agnew ignored the security cordon to shake hands with them.

Athenian crowds were so enthusiastic along the route into the city that Agnew twice stopped his limousine, which he shared with Papadopoulos, and got out to shake hands.

"When an American visits Greece for the first time it is a little like coming home," Agnew said in a statment at the airport.

"For those of us with Greek blood in our veins, it is a particularly moving experience."

Agnew's father, Theofrastos Anagnostopoulos, left Greece for the United States 75 years ago. The family name was changed later.

"The United States and Greece are joined today in a defensive alliance which in many ways is based on the spirit we inherited from your ancestors and mine...the right of men to seek their own destiny and pride," Agnew said.

He said he looked forward to talks with Greek officials during an official three-day visit starting Saturday and also to visiting his father's hometown of Gargalianoi.

Reagan Next?

SAN JOSE (UPI) — Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., says he expects President Nixon to dump Spiro Agnew in 1972 and indicated Gov. Ronald Reagan might be the vice presidential nominee.

McCloskey told newsmen yesterday that Nixon could be expected to "certainly look for a good-looking conservative" to maintain the GOP's appeal to that faction of the party.

Condor Count

BAKERSFIELD (UPI) — The rare California condor population that once ranged in the thousands has dwindled to 34.

That number of sightings was reported yesterday by the state Fish and Game Department, which held a two-day bird watch in the Tehachapi mountains — breeding grounds of the nearly extinct creature.

Rate Drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The unemployment rate among Vietnam era veterans aged 20 to 29 dropped to 8.3 per cent during the July-September period, compared to 8.5 per cent in the previous quarter, but still remained above the 6.4 per cent rate of one year ago.

Dayan Predicts Mideast Truce Until The Spring

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan predicted yesterday the Middle East truce will continue at least until spring.

Dayan, in a speech to a group of engineers in Tel Aviv, also said he would prefer war to submitting to a proposal by Cairo that Egyptian soldiers be allowed to cross to the Israeli-occupied east bank of the Suez Canal as part of an agreement to reopen the waterway.

International guarantees for security under those conditions would be "like leaning on crutches which have insecure foundations," he said. He referred to such guarantees as "illusions" and said "the day when America will have to send its boys to die for Israel will become a very black day."

The defense minister said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had told Washington "the United States must squeeze Israel like an orange" to get it to accept an interim peace settlement before the end of the year.

"Israel can be pressured, but it cannot be squeezed or blackmailed," he said.

Dayan's brother-in-law, retired Gen. Ezer Weizman, said in a radio interview Friday night that Israel retains its air of superiority and can knock down anything the Egyptians put up — including the modern MIG23s believed flown by Soviet pilots.

"Its a question of pilots, and we have the advantage," Weizman, an architect of Israel's aerial victory in the 1967 war, said.

In Paris, a French aeronautics official said Israel is using spare parts to build its own jets in an attempt to get around a French arms embargo imposed by the late President Charles de Gaulle. He said the Israelis are using French Mirage jet bodies and U.S. Phantom jet engines.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said in an interview Israel and the United States have not reached agreement on Secretary of State Rogers six-point interim peace plan, which revolves around the reopening of the Suez Canal.

New HEW Rules For Its Nonsmokers

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Health, Education and Welfare Department, which has 107,000 workers across the country and is the government's second largest employer, has announced new rules to separate nonsmoking workers from those who smoke.

The agency said no-smoking areas would be established in cafeterias, no-smoking policies will be instituted for HEW conference rooms and there will be no-smoking work areas wherever possible.

NIXON AND FRIEND — Evangelist Billy Graham holds his arm around President Nixon as the world-famous evangelist and the President acknowledge the crowd at the Charlotte, N.C., Coliseum. Nixon was the featured speaker last night at the event which honored Graham.

Nixon Honors Evangelist With An Old-Time Religious Speech

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI)—President Nixon, sharing a platform with evangelist Billy Graham, warned Friday that despite its wealth and power American society cannot survive without religion and strength of character.

The President's old time religion speech drew cheers from a crowd of 13,000 persons at a testimonial rally for Graham, but outside the arena Nixon faced a few of the most determined hecklers he has seen in several months.

Demonstrators made up a small percentage of the 150,000 persons who, by police estimates, viewed the President's motorcade through downtown Charlotte; but one youth was about to get close enough to Nixon to shout "murderer" virtually into his ear and others chanted slogans against the Vietnam War.

Nixon flew to Charlotte in his blue, white and silver "Spirit of 76" jetliner to unveil a plaque which will be put at the birthplace of Graham, the 52-year-old evangelist.

"He is one of those few people who is a prophet with honor in his town," Nixon said of Graham in a brief interview before he flew to Camp David, Md., his retreat in the western Maryland mountains, to spend the weekend.

In his speech during the ceremonies at the Charlotte Coliseum, Nixon called for a renewal of the religious faith, morality and strength of character that American had when it was young.

He said the civilizations of ancient Greence, Rome and Persia all fell when they were seemingly at the height of their wealth and power.

"As they became wealthy, they became soft," Nixon said. "As they became better educated without principle, they became weak."

In a similar vein, Graham was applauded for reminisinces of his youth on a North Carolina dairy farm.

"We wrestled with poverty, if you did not have sociologists, educators and newscasters constantly reminging us of how poor we were.

"We also had the problem of rats," he said. "The only difference then and now is we didn't call upon the government to kill them. We killed our own."

Following the ceremonies, Nixon and Graham strolled through a grassy plaza to Ovens Auditorium for a private reception. On the way they encountered about 20 college-aged hecklers interspersed with about 80 well-wishers.

With Nixon only about three feet away one of the demonstrators shouted "murderer" at him.

$1 Billion Program Proposed To Save Endangered Coastline

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A $1 billion program to create a new state agency and save the endangered California coastline has been proposed by the state Parks and Recreation Department.

A department report, prepared more than two months ago, was distributed publicly Friday after Democratic lawmakers leaked it to newsmen.

A dispute immediately arose over whether the report amounted to endorsement of the only surviving legislation to protect the state's 1,072 mile coast from exploitation and overdevelopment.

Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, said the 123-page document, dated Aug. 6, was "a strong endorsement for the policies embodied" in his bill which has passed the Assembly and is now in the Senate.

But Robert Meyer, deputy director of the parks department, said his agency had "no position" on Sieroty's bill.

He also said the report was not distributed sooner because of editorial revisions, delays at the state printing office and the need to get special permission from Gov. Ronald Reagan to print four color maps.

Predicting a 36 per cent increase in the utilization of coastal areas by 1980, the report declared "the use of the shoreline is presently proceeding in a random, often uncontrolled fashion, not always in the interest of all people."

It was sharply critical of local actions in connection with coastal development.

"In the process of protecting the private owner or increasing the tax base, the public's natural resources are being bargained away," it said.

"In the meantime," the report said, "the natural beauties of the California coastline are gnawed away into the insatiable maw of civilization and commerce.

"Because many of the changes, if not most, are irreversible, permanent damage is done which cannot be repaired."

It proposed a statewide agency to draw up a comprehensive coastal plan and to regulate development. Day-to-day administration would be left up to local authorities and regional commissions.

The report recommended acquiring hundreds of thousands of acres of coastal land, including 236 miles of shoreline, and expansion of state parks in 15 counties.

Currently 61 per cent of the shoreline is privately owned.

Land to be acquired would include areas seaward of every coastal highway where the distance is 300 feet or less.

The department estimated the cost of its proposals would be more than $1 billion at current land prices. It proposed financing the acquisitions by bond issues, gas tax revenues, toll roads, federal funds and general fund revenue.

The department also advanced a suggestion for a "modest tax shared by all of the Western states" because coastal parks in Washington, Oregon and California benefit all the people living in the area.

HEART OF THE SYSTEM — Programmer Lt. David H. Cookerly feeds information into a Univac 1218 computer, which interprets data from the powerful new radar installation on Mount Tamalpais. $3.7 MILLION MACHINERY

A New 'Eye' For Radar Station

The Air Force radar station atop Mount Tamalpais has a new $3.7 million eye.

The eye — actually, it's a sophisticated radar and computer combination designed to detect hostile missiles launched from submarines or the ocean surface — has been in operation for about a year but was only announced this week.

The device is called a Sea Launch Ballistic Missile Protection and Warning System — SLBM, in military parlance — and joins the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) System on Mount Tamalpais.

SAGE is designed to detect attacks by jet bombers.

The new radar installation is one of seven SLBM sites in the U.S., three on the west coast, three in the east and one in Texas. The other western installations are at Mount Laguna, near San Diego, and Mount Hebo, on the north coast of Oregon.

Although the existence of the new radar unit was revealed Thursday, many details of the system remain classified. One of them is how much warning the SLBM provides.

"I can't tell you that," said Capt. James L. Juntunen, commander of Detachment 3 of the 14th Aerospace Force, which operates the system.

"Obviously, though," he added, "we wouldn't have put it in if it wasn't worth it." The seven SLBM sites cost $26 million, he said, with the Marin installation running roughly $3.7 million.

Juntunen explained how the system works: the radar unit, housed in the westerly of the two white domes on the middle peak of Mount Tamalpais, constantly scans the horizon for possible missiles. All flying objects, including airplanes, are detected, and the information is fed into a Univac 1218 computer.

The mechanical brain is programmed to weed out airplanes — whose velocities are much lower than those of missiles — and sounds an alarm only if a missile is detected.

All information on sightings is relayed to the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo., where it is combined with other data on possible enemy action and sent on to the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb., and to the Pentagon.

The range of the radar unit also is classified, Juntunen said, although he disclosed the three West Coast installations cover the western flank of the U.S. and overlap considerably.

Judge Orders Dockers To Work For Full 'Cooling Off' Period

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— West Coast longshoremen were ordered to work for the full 80-day "cooling off" period of the Taft-Hartley Act by a federal judge yesterday despite union protests that it was illegal to move against only the Pacific portion of the nationwide dock strike.

U.S. District Judge William T. Sweigert called the union position "certainly intriguing" but said under the circumstances the 15,000 dockworkers must remain on the job. He then extended a temporary restraining order that suspended the 100-day strike Oct. 6, and said he would issue the formal injunction next week.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union attorneys argued that it was illegal for President Nixon to move against the West Coast while 32,000 longshoremen were striking the East, Gulf and Great Lakes ports. That walkout enter its 16th day today.

"The President has never made a finding that a strike on the West Coast alone affects the national health and safety," said ILWU attorney Norman Leonard.

"The government cannot pick and choose," and enjoin "a little piece" of the nationwide shipping tieup, he said.

After rejecting the argument, Judge Sweigert set next Thursday to hear a government motion that the ILWU should be cited for contempt because of alleged work stoppages and slowdowns in key ports.

In answering the union's presentation, Sweigert said:

"I think under a reading of the statute, the President had the power under the circumstances to order the attorney general to enjoin this strike on the West Coast. For that reason, I believe I must order issuance of a preliminary injunction."

Previously, affidavits were filed by the governors of the Pacific Coast states saying the lengthy strike was causing millions of dollars in damage and irreparable harm to the economy.

Local labor-management disputes have disrupted port operations in Los Angeles-Long Beach, San Francisco-Oakland, Portland, and Seattle.

An estimated 3,000 longshoremen in Los Angeles area had refused to work because of a dispute over which men should be hired first. That controversy was resolved and men began returning to the port complex yesterday.

Attorneys for the Pacific Maritime Association, representing shippers, said docks in Porland and Seattle were still only operating at 50 per cent or less capacity because of slowdown and obstructionist tactics.

After setting the hearing on the contempt issue for 10 a.m. Thursday, Sweigert told U.S. Attorney James Browning and E. Grey Lewis, deputy assistant U.S. Attorney General, to be prepared to present witnesses proving the union had defied the original back to work order.

Plea Made To Felony Pot Charge

James Christopher Wright, 22, of Sausalito, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to felony charges of possessing marijuana and car theft and a misdemeanor count of possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 26.

Wright was arrested Sept. 24 when San Rafael police raided a motel room at the Bermuda Palms Motel. Police said they found marijuana and a hypodermic syringe in the room and the car Wright was using had been stolen in San Francisco.

James Phillips, 26, of Sausalito, who was with Wright at the time of the arrest, was sentenced to 15 days in Marin County Jail after he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of being in a place where marijuana was used.

Class Action Suits Will Be Discussed

John Kelly, an attorney for California Rural Legal Assistance (CRLA), will speak on class action suits as a means of securing consumer rights at a Thursday meeting of the Mill Valley branch of the American Association of University Women.

The meeting, set for 7:30 p.m. in the gallery of the Mill Valley public library, is open to the public.

UC Scientists Find X-Ray Star

BERKELEY (UPI)—University of California astronomers report the discovery of an invisible star-like object that is only 10 miles in diameter but emits x-rays powerful enough to be detected on earth.

The scientists speculated Thursday the object might be a "neutron star," a type of body whose existence has long been suspected but never proven.

They said the evidence fits the characteristics of theories about neutron stars —the collapsed remnant of an old and large star whose matter is packed so densely that it is all transformed into the explosive energy of neutrons.

Such a star would be so dense that its weight and gravitational pull, even if the object is only 10 miles across, would be far greater than that of the sun.

Orbiting Space Lab To Earth

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Salyut orbiting laboratory plunged like a meteor into the Pacific Ocean last Monday at the end of a six-month mission that brought grief and glory to the Soviet Union, it was announced Friday.

The Official Tass news agency announced Salyut's fate Friday night and hailed its historic achievements as the first manned orbiting space station.

It did not mention that the three cosmonatus who had manned it in June died during their return to earth aboard Soyuz 11 on June 30.

Miller Slide Will Be Viewed Monday

Time may be running out for Mill Valley's massive Miller Avenue landslide.

After 984 days of partially blocking the city's major thoroughfare, the city council will consider removing the slide when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

City Engineer Stanley M. Bala will recommend the city immediately advertise for bids to remove the slide. The cost is estimated at between $20,000 and $30,000.

The city is preparing to take the action, according to City Mgr. William H. Cunningham, because an abatement order issued by the council Aug. 2 has been ignored by the three persons whose land, the city says, caused the slide.

Bala's proposal calls for "removal and disposal of all unstable materials," Cunningham said. Unstable materials are defined as those "still in the process of sliding."

Bala further recommends cutting terraces into the flank of the slide to discourage further movement and providing surface drainageways to channel rainwater to the sides of the mound of earth.

If the council accepts Bala's recommendations and calls for bids on the project, it will have to appropriate more funds, Cunningham said, because only $3,000 has been earmarked for removing the slide.

The city manager said the city, if it pays for cleaning up the slide, will bill the three property owners: Melinda Rowe-Beddoe, Joseph A. Moore and Henry T. Gunderson.

Montly meetings between prison officials and prisoners are held in Sweden for the purpose of discussing conditions and problems.

WHY "YES" ON ANNEXATION?

Protection Of Our Environment.
Every week, we see more and more results of the county's high density corridor theory. Our open land is disappearing under irreparable scars. Strawberry Cove will be next to succumb to land promoters and high densities - unless annexation passes! We helped draft the Tiburon Master Plan in 1967. Tiburon has vainly urged the county to follow the plan in our area. Through annexation, that plan would restore the Cove and preserve our other areas.

A Voice In Our Affairs
Right now we vote for only one of 5 supervisors. No wonder the county is deaf to our voices! By annexing, we end "taxation without representation". We gain immediate area representation on Planning and Parks Commissions. We elect all 5 councilmen. Those who are trying to scare you with misinformation about higher taxes are simply worried that you'll have a voice over their special interests!

Protection Of Our Tax Base and Revenues.
$340,000 a year in non-property taxes are right now drained from our community. Only by annexation to Tiburon can we gain control over those funds and retain them in the community! The Strawberry Rec. District is on record that only Tiburon's plan "will protect the integrity of the Strawberry District as a whole". In contrast, defeat of annexation means that Strawberry Shopping Center's property tax base will be stripped from our special districts and go into Mill Valley. The people will be left outside - but our tax base will be depleted, and our taxes will rise with no increase in service. What do you prefer: a small tax increase ($32 a year on a $40,000 home) for better services and local control, or a tax increase for which you get nothing?

Better Police Services
County figures show the crime rate is three times greater than it is in Tiburon. Why? Because Tiburon has triple the coverage we presently have. Moreover, annexation means a substation in Strawberry, with additional staffing. On top of this, we will have a voice in phasing in by Tiburon of its new department which will have even more extensive servicing. Under policies we help develop.

VOTE YES ON OCT. 19

Cycle Crash Is Fatal To 19-Year-Old

A 19-year-old Mill Valley youth was killed today when his motorcycle failed to make a turn on Shoreline Highway in Tamalpais Valley.

A passenger on the bike was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital.

Robert H. Hansen of 164 Janes Street was dead on arrival at Marin General, the California Highway Patrol said.

Officers said the motorcycle ran off the road near Shasta Way about 1:30 a.m.

The passenger, Richard Nielsen, 19, of 468 Wellesley Avenue, Mill Valley, suffered a broken jaw and cut chin, the hospital reported.

Hansen was the son of Haral Hansen of the Janes Street address. His death was the 27th traffic fatality this year, compared to 31 at this time last year.

Funeral arrangements were pending today at Russell and Gooch Mortuary in Mill Valley.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Trademarks Are Protected

By reason of advertisement or product identification, the average consumer is conscious of brands. The law protects trade names and trademarks. Even though the name is not registered, the law will not allow one to benefit from a "good name" of another. A competitor cannot "reap what he has not sown."

The name must have gained a secondary meaning. A product's shape or business' name may become so familiar that it gains a special meaning to consumers.

"Packaging" is often as important to name identification as the name itself. The familiar yellow box, the squeeze bottle, the cleaner in a drum, the Coke bottle, and thousands of other packages gain an identifiable shape. These are also protected.

Sellers often spend a great deal of money on the packaging and advertisement of a product. The configuration of the package is a factor in impulse purchases. If purchasers are likely to be deceived by similar packaging, even though the products are labeled differently, the court may put a stop to the copying competitor. The competitor will have to pay damages for deceiving customers.

In our free enterprise system imitation is part of competition. The law protects only against similar packaging that is "unfair," which is deceptive or in violation of special trademarks.

Free enterprise allows wide latitude in competition. True, the first maker of the product may have a great competitive advantage. But unless he has a patented trademark or similar protection, he must show that the competitor was unfair or deceptive. This is hard to do. There are cases involving claims of exclusive rights to the design and shape of biscuits, bread, pills, cologne bottles a wrench, a padlock, and many other items. Few have been successful.

It must be shown that the shape of the item has gained a special secondary meaning identified with the first businessman. And that a similar shape or packaging will result in public confusion over the product. Also there is usually an element of unfairness, dishonesty or piracy in copying the competition.

Tiburon Will Ponder Cove Moves

The Tiburon City Council will consider adoption of an ordinance paving the way for condemnation of land on Strawberry Cove when it meets at 6 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The council approved the ordinance on first reading Monday. It would permit the city attorney to file a condemnation suit against Leonard B. Fleischman of Belvedere for a 6.7-acre parcel on Strawberry Cove.

The city moved to condemn the land after Fleischman, who has proposed building 72 apartments on the site, turned down an offer of $125,000 for the property. The city wants to buy the land for a park.

Faire Operators To Seek Permit

Operators of the Renaissance Pleasure Faire will appear before Deputy Marin Zoning Administrator Harvey E. Bragdon Monday to seek a use permit to conduct the annual fair and open a cultural center on an Upper Lucas Valley ranch.

A hearing is set for 11 a.m. in the planning commission chambers of the Civic Center Administration Building.

About 100 protests have poured into county planning officials from residents of Lucas Valley, who fear traffic congestion and damage to environment.

Tools Stolen

Tools valued at between $800 and $1,000 were stolen from a carport at the residence of Robert K. Lane of 360 Tennessee Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, last Friday or Saturday, Marin County Sheriff's office reported yesterday.

American command had decided to continue manning the base, located only five miles from the rubber plantation town of Krek in Cambodia. Krek has been the center of bitter fighting for weeks.

American officers had been considering a possible pullout of the artillery located on Pace, along with the GIs assigned to protect it.

Leaching Lines Plan Rejected

Marin County's fill committee has turned thumbs down on a proposal to build septic tank leaching lines next to a sea wall on the east shore of Tomales Bay.

Arthur A. Bostow of Valencia applied for permission to build a four bedroom home on Tomales Bay north of Marshall, near Clark Road. To install a septic tank and leaching lines, he wanted to build a concrete retaining wall along the waterfront and fill behind it. Bostow said the retaining wall would also stop erosion of his property.

Pablo Magat and Jack Lee, district sanitarians with the county division of environmental control, said Bostow's plans do not meet county requirements.

Officer Is Faced With A Shotgun

A Fairfax policeman, responding to a phone call that a resident at 351 Olema Road "was ready to see an officer," found himself face-to-face with a shotgun barrel yesterday.

Officer John Cooper who was confronted with the weapon, radioed for assistance, and Jane Thompson of Apt. 23 at the Olema Road address soon was disarmed and taken to the Marin Community Mental Health Center for obervation.

Cooper responded to the telephone call to Fairfax police, although the apartment building is just outside the city limits.

Cooper said that as he approached the woman's apartment, the door opened and all he could see was the shotgun barrel sticking out.

Mrs. Thompson, about 42, handed over the gun when Sheriff's deputies arrived to assist Cooper.

Developer, Six Others Hurt In Crash

A Novato developer and six other persons were injured today in a traffic collision on an approach to the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

California Highway Patrol said the Novatan, Timothy W. O'Donoghue Jr., 36, suffered a collapsed lung, broken right arm, fractured ribs and head cuts in the 12:30 a.m. accident. O'Donoghue was in Mission Emergency Hospital in San Francisco today, although his condition was unavailable from hospital officials.

O'Donoghue apparently was driving north in the southbound lane of Funston Avenue, the highway patrol said, when his auto collided with a car driven by Samuel F. Russel, 20, of Alameda.

Russel and his five passengers, who are from San Francisco and Stockton, also were taken to Mission Emergency, but no information on the extent of their injuries was available.

STORM

falling tree limbs and broken power lines.

In Inverness Park, a tree limb crashed through a power line, setting off a small grass fire and halting service to about 12 homes on Pinecrest Road. Power was restored in about 20 minutes after the 11:30 a.m. break, a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. spokesman said.

In San Anselmo, an arcing was reported outside 333 Fawn Drive. There was no report of damage from the 2 p.m. break.

OBITUARIES

GIUSEPPE MEZZETTA

Private funeral was held yesterday in Larkspur for Giuseppe L. Mezzetta of Larkspur. Entombment was at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery in San Rafael.

Mezzetta, 79, of 40 Bayview Avenue, died Thursday at a local hospital following a long illness.

He was a native of Italy and had lived in Marin County 52 years.

He came to San Francisco from Italy in 1912 and opened a food importation and packing business. Mezzetta retired eight years ago and the company is now operated by his son, David Mezzetta of San Rafael.

In addition to his son, Mezzetta is survived by his wife, Colomba Rose; a daughter, Anna Fyfe of San Rafael; a brother, Augustino Mezzetta, and a sister, Carmella Mezzetta, both of Italy; four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

MRS. QUINN

Private inurnment is scheduled for Lilian Louise Quinn, 54, of Corte Madera, who died Wednesday in a local hospital following a long illness.

Mrs. Quinn was born in Alaska and came to California in 1952. She and her husband, Joseph, moved to Marin County after their marriage in 1954. The couple resided at 11 Lupine Drive.

Mrs. Quinn formerly was a director of military service clubs in Japan, Hawaii and the U.S. During the Korean War, she was supervisor of the largest service club in Japan, located in Okinawa.

Her husband owns the Corte Madera Car Wash on Paradise Drive.

JACK LILLESTOL

Jack Lillestol of Mill Valley, retired marble mason, died yesterday in a local hospital after a short illness. He was 84.

Born in Norway, Lillestol lived at 120 Ricardo Road for three years and had been a resident of California for 50 years.

He worked as a marble mason for Vermont Marble Co. in San Francisco for 20 years prior to his retirement.

He is survived by a son, Jack K. Lillestol of Mill Valley, and two grandchildren.

Funeral will be at 1 p.m. Monday at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley, with burial at Cypress Lawn Cemetery in Colma.

HAROLD MURRAY

Funeral for Harold C. Murray of San Anselmo, who died Thursday in a local hospital, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

Murray, 68, was born in Mound City, Mo., and came to San Francisco 48 years ago. Hd moved to Marin in 1943, living the rest of his life in the county, except for six years in Paradise, Butte County.

He was a former superintendent for an oil burner manufacturing company, and had served in the Navy.

Murray is survived by his wife, Flora Mae, of the family home at 15 Rowland Court; three daughters, Patricia Smith of Petaluma, Linda Elliot of San Francisco and Nancy Rickman of Soquel, Santa Cruz County; four sons, William and Charles Murray of San Anselmo, Robert Murray of Rohnert Park and Ronald Murray of Ignacio; two brothers, two sisters, 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial will be at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

Couple Is Given Term Of Probation

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Marin couple accused of performing sexual acts for an undercover officer has been placed on two years' probation and fined $5 a month in probation costs in superior court.

Prior to sentencing, Judge Walter Calcagno reduced felony charges of oral copulation against Michael Marsolais, 29, and his wife, Frenchie, 27, of San Quentin Village, to misdemeanors.

The judge ruled on the basis of evidence presented at a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court and after the defendants waived their right to a trial.

The couple was arrested in a San Francisco motel room March 4 after a policeman took about 300 feet of film and still photographs of the pair allegedly performing sexual acts.

The couple said, according to police, that they had appeared in virtually every erotic film then running in San Francisco movie theaters.

gional board for accepting last-minute testimony from its staff before ordering the ban in Ross Valley. He said the board barred him from rebutting the staff testimony, but the staff testified yesterday that the only effect of the last-minute evidence in July had been to ease the order against the Ross Valley district.

In a related issue, the judge set for trial Nov. 17 a separate legal action by a group of developers against the Richardson Bay district and the regional board.

Marin Woman To State Job

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The appointment of a Marin woman to the state Social Welfare Board has been confirmed by the state Senate.

Susan C. Schwab of San Rafael was appointed to the post by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Mrs. Schwab, who has been a member of both the Marin and state Republican central committees, in 1969 was named to the a state commission on education reform by the governor.

HOWARD BARNES
Posse captain

Barnes To Be Seated As Leader

Howard Barnes of San Rafael will be installed as captain of the Mounted Sheriff's Posse of Marin County at the group's annual installation dinner tonight at the Hamilton Air Force Base Officers Club.

The volunteer organization takes part in searches, rescues, trail rides and parades under the direction of Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos.

Barnes, a Marin resident for 12 years, is an estimator and manager for James E. Marsh contractors in Concord. He has been with the sheriff's posse for four years.

Other new officers include 1st Lt. Paul Hughes of Petaluma, 2nd Lt. Richard Todd of Novato, Secretary William Dreusike of Novato and Treasurer Oscar Montgomery of Novato.

Another Police Discussion Set

The Marin County Police-Community Relations Department will hold another in a series of discussions between law officers and citizens at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Terra Linda Recreation Center.

Participants in the seminar will be Marin Superivsor John F. McInnis; Fred E. Jensen and John A. Miskimen, San Rafael city councilmen; Robert Bennett, chairman of the Terra Linda Community Services District board; Richard Less, president of the Las Gallinas Valley Council, and Gerald Green, community relations officer with the San Rafael Police Department.

Others present will include Capt. Harvey Teague of the sheriff's department; Donald Bowden and Frank Wells, both teachers at Terra Linda High School; George Walser, chief of public safety of the Terra Linda Community Services District, and Dr. William Scalapino, behavioral science teacher at the College of Marin.

Tough Drug Law In West Germany

BONN (UPI)—The West German Parliament has passed a tough new drug law which provides for imprisonment of up to 10 years and a fine of $15,000 for drug-related offenses.

Health minister Kaete Stroebel said the law was an "attempt to force unscrupulous criminals to quit their handiwork."

The old drug law dated back to 1929 and had a maximum penalty of three years in jail.

The new law is aimed primarily at drug peddlers and distributors, rather than persons found in possession of drugs.

No Support For Nominee From State

By BENJAMIN SHORE
I-J Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Romana Banuelos of Los Angeles, President Nixon's controversial nominee for the ceremonial post of treasurer of the United States, has failed in her attempt to receive the open backing of California's two U.S. Senators.

Mrs. Banuelos called upon Democratic Sens. Alan Cranston and John V. Tunney this past week, but she came away empty handed.

"I will not take a position until after the confirmation hearings," Cranston said in an interview after his talk with Mrs. Banuelos. He declined to comment on the specifics of the case.

Tunney, who was represented by aides in a meeting with Mrs. Banuelos, also is declining any comment until the Senate confirmation hearing is held.

Mrs. Banuelos, 46, was accompanied by her husband, Alexander, and Gene Knorr, a Treasury Department specialist in Congressional relations.

Visiting with senators before confirmation hearings is considered traditional for Presidential nominees. However, it was learned that Mrs. Banuelos was also looking for open support from her state's two Senators.

The fact that she is making the customary rounds on Capitol Hill is considered a sign that the Whita House wants to push ahead with her nomination.

However, some Senate observers believe that if her personal contacts with Senators and the Treasury Department's own assessment indicate that she might be rejected, the White House may be prepared to withdraw her nomination.

Mrs. Banuelos seemed assured of quick and routine confirmation until her food products plant was raided last week by U.S. immigration officials looking for illegal Mexican aliens employed there.

Thirty-six aliens were caught and sent back to Mexico, and another 35 were reported to have escaped during the raid, which was the sixth in four years at Mrs. Banuelos' plant.

Several Senators, including Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee which will hold the confirmation hearings, have expressed doubt since the raid that Mrs. Banuelos' confirmation will be routine.

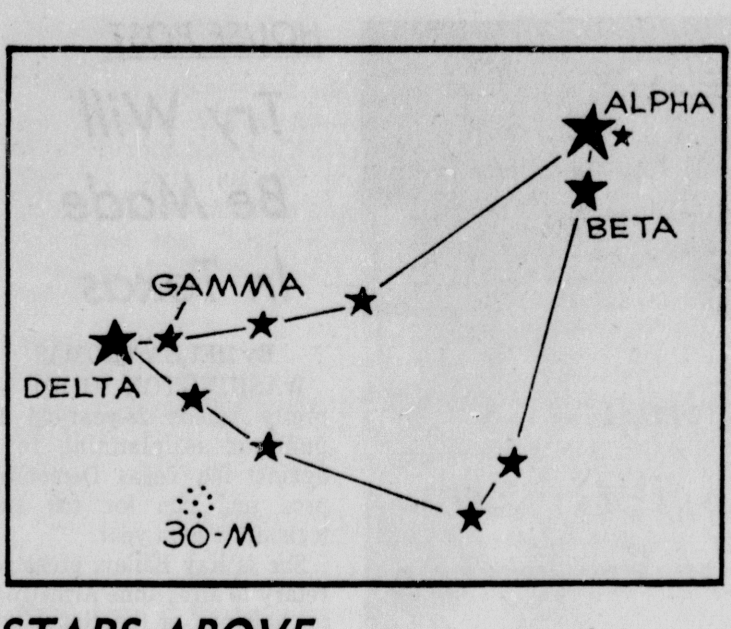
Joan Garrity Files Huge Suit

NEW YORK (UPI)—Joan Garrity, who under the initial "J" authored the best-selling book "The Sensuous Woman," has filed suits in federal and state courts seeking nearly $4 million in damages from the book's publisher.

In Manhattan Supreme Court, Miss Garrity demanded treble damages of more than $3 million and unpaid royalties of $145,913 from Lyle Stuart Inc., and Lyle Stuart, president of the publishing firm. In Federal court, she sought $737,740 in treble damages.

Her state suit charged the defendants and others not known to her with conspiring to defraud her and with harassment, including making her come from her Palm Beach, Fla., home to New York to collect her checks.

Her federal suit claimed the defendants discriminated in the price the book sold to distributors by offering a discount to selected retailers.



STARS ABOVE

Capricornus — The 11th Constellation

By SHERMAN WALKER

Capricornus, the Sea Goat is the 11th constellation of the zodiac and one with considerable historic significance. It can be imagined to look like the head of a goat, but that's as far as the resemblance goes.

To locate the Sea Goat in the sky, face southward at 9 p.m. and look at the region of the sky that is one-half of the distance up from the southern horizon to overhead.

The bright star of this figure, Alpha Capricorni, is a double that can be separated without telescopic aid (if your eyes are a lot better than mine). Each of the companions are telescopic doubles, making a system of at least four stars. The two Alphas are also known as Prima Gaedi and Secunda Gaedi and they are of magnitudes 3.2 and 3.8 respectively. Beta Capricorni is also a double star with components of orange and blue. They are magnitudes 3 and 6.

Gamma Capricorni is magnitude 4, and its Arabian name means the Bringer of Good Tidings.

It was on the eastern edge of this figure that two mathematicians named Leverrier and Adams computed that a previously unknown planet would be found. In 1846, the planet Neptune was discovered less than a degree from the predicted place.

It was known to be there by its gravitational influence on Uranus.

Auto Burglaries Are Reported In Wide Area

A series of auto burglaries in unincorporated areas of the county has been reported by the Marin sheriff's office.

Deputies reported five such crimes in the last week, occurring in Lucas Valley, Muir Beach, Santa Venetia and Terra Linda.

Belmont M. Speroni of 330 Johnson Street, Sausalito, reported that a watch, wallet, camping gear and other items, valued at a total of $835, were taken Monday from his car, parked in a lot at Muir Beach.

Camera equipment, valued at $300, was taken last Friday from the auto of Henry H. Wallerstein of Paramus, N. J., while it was parked on Shoreline Highway near Muir Beach, deputies said.

Beverly Leach of 60 Vendola Drive, Santa Venetia, told deputies a tape deck and tapes, valued at $250, were taken from her car last Friday while it was parked in her driveway.

No Licenses

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court has ruled 5-2 a Los Angeles County ordinance requiring licensing of bookstore operators is unconstitutional. The court said the ordinance set no adequate standards for issuing a license and was therefore an invalid prior restraint of first amendment rights.

College Bond Has Endorsement

The Marin Alternative has endorsed a $16.7 million bond issue on the Nov. 2 ballot to finance construction on the College of Marin's Novato campus, chairman Alan Barnett reported.

Measure A on the ballot would go toward building a second campus in Novato and completing the buildingprogram at the Kentfield campus. A similar measure, for $16.9 million, went down to defeat last November, although it received a 62.5 favorable vote, 4.2 per cent shy of the necessary two-thirds approval.

Marin Alternative also passed several resolutions calling for the Marin County Board of Supervisors to initiate and support prison reforms.

Mill Valley Education To Be Aired

Parents dissatisfied with the quality and kind of education in the Mill Valley School District will voice their concerns at a special meeting of the district board at 8 p.m. Monday at Tamalpais High School.

Trustees have agreed to discuss two topics: the trend of education in the district and how to provide disgruntled parents with alternate choices.

The special meeting, which may be followed by others, was prompted by a petition to the board signed by 1,233 persons protesting "the experimental changes taking place in the Mill Valley schools."

The meeting also may mark the first time the specific complaints of the residents are aired. Two private meeting were held last week between board members and petitioners, but school officials have declined to discuss the outcome.

Monday's session will be held in the high school's Ruby Scott Auditorium.

Bars Banned

DJAKARTA (UPI) —A new national ruling has been sent to provincial authorities throughout Indonesia forbidding establishment of bars, night clubs and casinos in the vicinity of schools or places of worship. The ruling was made to "preserve a healthy morality," according to a joint statement by the home Affairs and Social Affairs ministries.

Park To Become A Playground

The Terra Linda Recreation-Park District board has voted to transform Munson Park from a builder's park into a playground for tots.

General Manager Zonwice Mulhaupt said the park has been a place where children could bring tools and make things but in the past year it has fallen into disuse.

The board, she said, decided Thursday night to use money left in the William Munson fund to put up a fence and buy playground equipment within the next two months to make a park for preschool children.

Two of the board members, Robert Bennett and Harold Reese, signed a letter from the Galinas Valley Council opposing the Renaissance Faire from moving into Lucas Valley, Mrs. Mulhaupt said. Elroy Munson, the only other board member attending the meeting, did not sign the letter, she reported.

Children's War On Castor Oil

CHICAGO (UPI)—Two 10-year old girls have circulated a petition against castor oil among patients in the pediatrics ward at West Suburban Hospital in Oak Park.

The petition read: "Petition against children having to take mineral or castor oil in the hospital or anyplace else."

The document —with nine signatures on it —was turned over to the supervising nurse. The hospital promised to give the petition "serious consideration."

Drama Class For Children Is Approved

Drama classes for children have been tentatively approved by the Petaluma Recreation, Music and Parks Commission.

Dale Meador, a retired actor, said he wanted to begin classes for children in which they would dramatize classical literature and plays. He said no full-scale play productions would be planned so that classes could be reserved for fun with little work or pressure.

Meador said he thought the classes could also be offered to pre-school youngsters and would stimulate young imaginations.

Commission secretary Phyllis Brewer said the commission on Wednesday instructed recreation director Richard W. Shollenberger to work with Meador in setting up the classes.

In other action, the commission agreed to solicit cost estimates on cleaning and gilding the town clock.

Innocent Plea To Burglary

Robert Miles Knox Jr., 18, of Terra Linda, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglary.

Preliminary hearing was set Wednesday for Oct. 26.

Knox and Donald Ray Simmons, 17, of Terra Linda, were arrested Tuesday after Fred M. Schalit of 751 Montecillo Road, Terra Linda, awoke in the middle of the night to find the youths in his home.

Simmons was booked into Marin Juvenile Hall.

NO MORE MOWING LAWNS

The Shelter Ridge project will include 187 units with six different styles to choose from. Density will be about four townhouses per acre, and 85 per cent of the site's 41 acres will be devoted to natural open spaces and landscaped greenbelt areas. Landscaped common areas will include meandering paths and miniparks separated from vehicular traffic. All outside areas are maintained for you by the Shelter Ridge Homeowners Association.

FUN AND GAMES

Your automatic family membership also entitles you to use of the recreation center clubhouse, game rooms, swimming pools, sundecks, tennis courts and saunas.

G.E. KITCHENS

Shelter Ridge units will be both one and two story, with sizes ranging from two to three bedrooms. Each home will have cedar-shingled roof, fireplace, private deck or patio, wall-to-wall carpeting, and kitchen with formica cabinets and counters and G.E. appliances. Underground cable television connections will be available.

COMMUTER'S PARADISE, WITH PRIVACY

The development has excellent freeway access, yet is sufficiently removed from traffic and commerical areas to provide a sense of privacy. It is within easy traveling distance of shopping areas, schools, churches, golf courses and numerous outdoor recreation areas. Driving to Golden Gate Bridge, takes about 7 minutes.

THE SPOUSE GAP

More On Marriage Drama's Second Act

(Condensed from the book, "The Spouse Gap")
By ROBERT LEE and MARJORIE CASEBIER

As the second act of the marriage drama continues to unfold, we confront complications aggravated by the middlescent malaise. Our spotlight now turns to sex as we look with candor at the sex life of middle-aged couples.

Since the bond of marriage admits its lovers to the basic ritual of intimate sexual life, this aspect of wedded life frequently raises complications and crises of its own. To the extent that a couple's sex life is a kind of barometer for their marriage as a whole, it is appropriate to consider it as the focus for much of the suspense in the marriage drama. "Facing it like it is" always carries with it the suspense of wondering how it will all turn out. And nowhere, perhaps, are there greater attendant feelings of anxiety, frustration, excitement, ecstasy, and anticipation than in the sexual side of marriage during middle age. Sexuality may contribute to the development of the well-made marriage or add misery to the growing spouse gap.

IF THE MARRIAGE is out of kilter, then the sex life of the partners will reflect that lack of zest and spice. The dangers of the middlescent malaise often threaten the marriage in such a way that the couple are reluctant or unable to relate on the sexual level at all. Difficulties of this kind hasten the spouse-gap crisis.

Their poor sex life reveals other hostilities and reasons of frustration toward each other. A familiar figure is the wife who complains that her husband expects her to be nice to him in bed on Saturday night after ignoring her all week — "all he wants from me is sex." Thus sexual incompatibility can be a cause of marital failure, or a result of it, or an accompanying symptom of the general marital malaise.

There is a story about a couple who had been married for almost 20 years and were experiencing the spouse gap during middlescence. A typical morning at breakfast found the husband and wife deeply engrossed in reading the morning newspaper without any conversation. Suddenly the husband peered over the top of his part of the paper, reached across the table to his unsuspecting wife, and wham! he slapped her across the face, saying, "That's for being such a lousy lover." Then he went back to reading his newspaper. Suddenly from across the table the wife reached out and wham! she slapped her husband across the face and said, "That's for knowing the difference."

PROBABLY THE basic general answer to the question of sexual complaints rests in the simple fact that any human activity can be used by men and women for destructive as well as for constructive and creative ends. The more delicate and intimate the expression of a relationship, the more likely it is to fall prey to manipulation and misuse. The sex act is the most intimate of all human relationships, with an unspoken language which richly expresses a host of emotional states of being. Through that language we can convey deep love and a desire for total closeness. But we can also convey fear, hatred, and impulse to punish or control, as well as many other such abuses. The very power of the sex drive makes it a viciously effective weapon. Many spouses, therefore, can twist sex to control or punish the partner, perhaps unconsciously but just as completely as if it were planned.

Of course, the various problems of the middlescent malaise form a vicious circle in realtion to sexual functioning. For instance, the burden of business worries weighs heavily on the libido. One man avoided sexual relations with his wife when he was unable to find work, saying he "felt shriveled." Another man brought on a self-induced impotence because he was failing in his business and did not want to assume adult male responsibilities.

It is apparent that one of the primary aids to the sexual rehabilitation of the man in the throes of his climacteric crisis in an understanding and reassuring wife. The best prescription is "TLC" — tender, loving care.

SEXUAL RELATIONS in middle age can become an important springboard into the wider vistas of human meaning. It can grow into maturity and meaning to rekindle the incendiary powers of love. Bertrand Russell expresses this beautifully in his autobiography:

"I have sought love, first, because it brings ecstasy — ecstasy so great that I would often have sacrificed all the rest of life for a few hours of this joy. I have sought it, next, because it relieves loneliness — that terrible loneliness in which one shivering consciousness looks over the rim of the world into the cold unfathomable abyss. I have sought it, finally, because in the union of love I have seen, in a mystic miniature, the prefiguring vision of the heaven that saints and poets have imagined. This is what I have sought, and though it might seem too good for human life, this is what — at last — I have found."

Suspense of this kind within the marriage-life drama is an experience to which we might all aspire. For Russell, in the long run, all was found and nothing lost in his sense of the sustaining power of love and the goodness of human sexuality. And he made his observations long after he passed middle age!

Pants Will Move Back Into The Sports Scene

BEVERLY HILLS, (UPI) — Pants, worn in recent years to full dress balls and white house weddings, move back into the sportswear field next spring.

"Pants are far from out," Mr. Blackwell told fashion editors attending the California fashion creators 21st national press week here, but now they've become a fashion classic for daytime wear at the office or shopping, and at night at home or the country club.

For spring and summer 1972 there was a trend back to the dress or blouse and tailored skirt for evening wear. And the hems for night were long —to the ankle or the shoe.

"Women are comfortable in the long skirts," said Michael Calderon, who designs for S. Howard Hirsch, "because their legs have been covered in pants for so long."

THE MORE casual pants, both fitted and flared, had a menswear look, and many sportswear firms showed them with a wide, wide cuff.

Topping the trousers were jackets —safari coats, battle jackets, crop jackets, cardigans, and blazers, blazers blazers and more blazers.

Alex Colman showed a single breasted cotton blazer with embroidered appliques over a pair of streamlined polyester pants.

Casa Di Cole had a blazer in poppy-colored tablecloth plaid in texturized polyester, worn over cuffed pants with a zip front.

KORET OF California had white seersucker blazers with a red or blue pinstripe, worn over white pants, and madras seersucker blazers over pants or pleat front skirts.

BLAZERS were also worn over hot pants or the ankle-length skirts that Fleischman-USA called bistro skirts.

Michael Calderon showed belted jackets over front-button long skirts for evening or daytime entertaining.

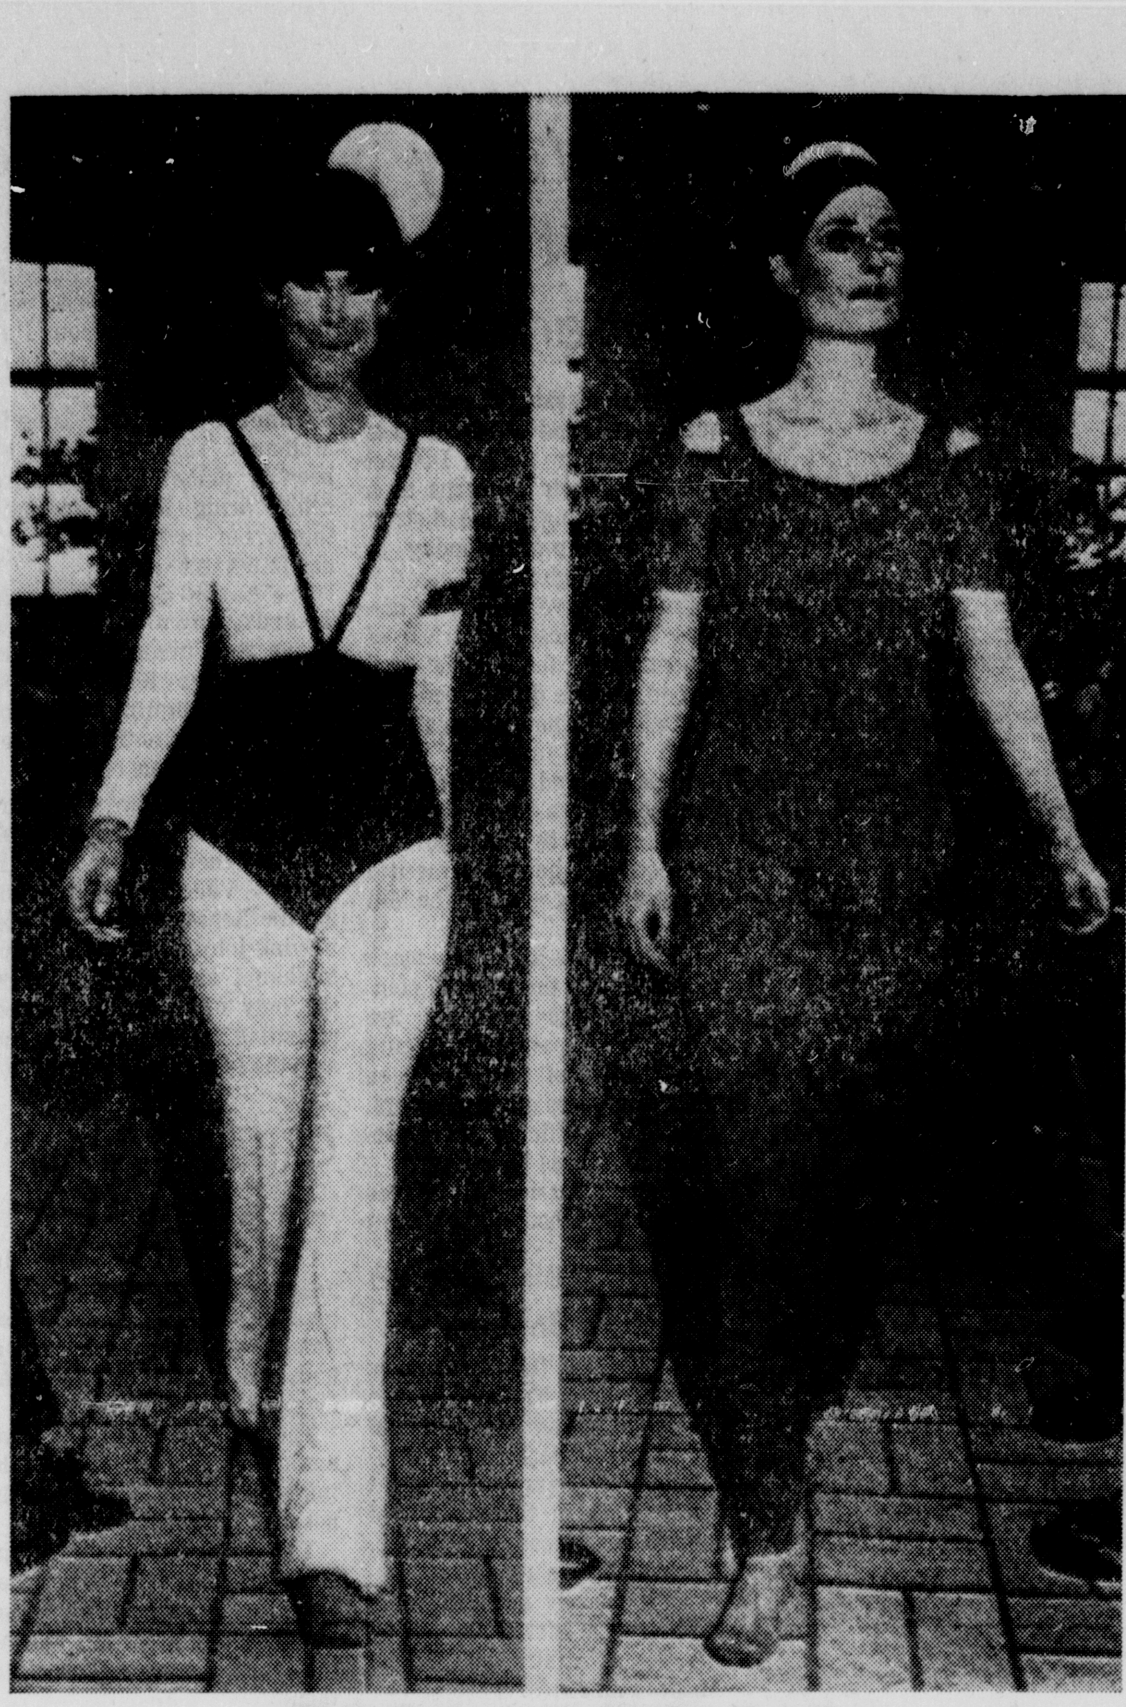
Calderon also had a striking army green chino ankle-length shirtwaist with a shirttail hem, similar to the St. Tropez shirts White Stag showed with appliqued sea gulls, anchors and ships on the front. White Stag used terry cloth in popsicle colors to make slacks and shorts, as well as beach cover-ups.

The firm also used corduroy in in spring colors in jackets and pants.

Slip Dress Carried One Step Further

The slip dress, one of the big looks from Paris and Rome fall couture collections, has been carried one step further for spring by Italian ready-to-wear designer Walter Albini, who has designed the slip jacket.

According to Women's Wear Daily, Albini's Misterfox collection, which will be shown Sunday in Milan, will feature a white pique slip jacket worn with a long black, bias striped, cotton skirt.



THE T-SHIRT GROWS UP

Fashion leader Rudi Gernreich believes the T-shirt and sleeveless undershirt will make it to fashions' front ranks come spring. In a knitwear collection he showed Tuesday in New York are (left) a jumpsuit with Bikini shapes appliqued on them and (right) a sleeveless T-shirt worn over the sleeved kind in contrasting colors to emphasize the layered look. HOUSE POST

Try Will Be Made In Texas

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A pretty blonde 28-year-old Republican is planning to go against the Texas Democratic pros and run for the state legislature next year.

She is Kay Bailey, press secretary to Mrs. Anne Armstrong, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee. She is quitting the Washington scene in December to begin her campaign.

Miss Bailey, who comes from La Marque, a small town outside of Houston, covered the Texas Legislature as a journalist before joining Mrs. Armstrong's staff. She also received her law degree from the University of Texas in 1967.

"I HAD been thinking about it before I took this job," she said. "I'll be running for the House from a new district. A lot of people back home encouraged me. I'm really excited. I've got some Democratic support as well."

She said she feels the Texas legislator should "be a higher caliber person," and added: "I'd like to get better people interested in the legislature."

So far there are only two women in the legislature, one in the House and one in the Senate —both Democrats.

"My real main aim is to get the legislature upgraded," she said.

She is no big women's liberationist, asserting: "I believe in equal rights for women but I like being protected.

"I just believe in a place for women that's different from men," she explained.

SHE INTENDS to carry on a door-to-door campaign to meet people. "I think its effective and necessary," she said.

"I'll do every kind of speaking engagement that I can," she said.

As a Republican, Miss Bailey is under no illusions that her party is going to make big gains in Texas territory. But she said: "I really believe in a two-party state. I want to help make the Republican party at least a forceful minority."

"We are not responsible in our budgeting and I also will campaign to hold taxes down," she said, in outlining her view of the issues.

"I'm really optimistic about my chances," she said. "I plan to work hard."

HER PARENTS, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey, are supporting her too. "But they're a little bit afraid," she said. "They know it's a tough world."

She is not going into politics for the money. She checked out the salary of a House member —$4800 a year, which she said is a "whopping $400 a month." So she plans to practice law on the side.

One thing she probably will get if she goes to the State House in Austin is a good press. She covered many stories with the reporters on the scene and says—"they are my friends."

'Black Identity' Program Topic

"Black Identity" will be the program at 8 p.m. Thursday in the "Search for Identity" series sponsored by the Marin Jewish Community Center and the Young Women's Christian Association at Edna Maguire School in Mill Valley.

Speaker will be Wallace K. Sheppard, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority, who will discuss his experiences with Marin institutions and what needs to be done to help them relate to people.

Reservations are made through the YWCA or the Jewish Community Center, both in San Rafael.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Foundation Will Salute Volunteers

By MOLLY MARIN

Members of the Marin Regional Council of the San Francisco Symphony Foundation will attend the sneak preview Wednesday of the renovated Stanford Court on Nob Hill, where a 5:30 to 7 p.m. cocktail-reception for over 200 workers will salute the foundation's 17th annual membership drive.

Champagne iced in wheelbarrows and eight-foot hero sandwiches served by "hard hats" in white gloves and overalls will carry out the party's building motif.

In addition to entertainment by the New San Francisco Jazz Band under the leadership of Symphony Foundation board member Dr. Charles Eberle of Belvedere, guests will meet orchestra members and see the debut of the foundation's first color television spot featuring conductor Seiji Ozawa in rehearsal.

Elizabeth and Charles left their Indian Valley Ranch home to arrive in London for her birthday dinner. Elizabeth, a former Marin County Parks and Recreation commissioner and a member of the American Interior Designers, raved about the beautiful flowers this time of year in Europe as they toured London, Paris, Vienna, Rome and Madrid. Before leaving London for Paris they attended the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra concert at Royal Albert Hall.

At each stop they spent one day in the country and in Paris they made a trip to the Fountainbleu Forest. Vienna was a "first" for them . . . "We longed to see the Vienna Woods of Schubert, Mozart, Hyadn and Beethoven, and it seemed unreal in following their footsteps, Elizabeth says. "My interest being park oriented, I was stunned to learn that these woods were to have been sold in 1870 to a timber syndicate which would have cleared the woods of timber." She added. At the last moment one man was successful with his flaming speeches and convincing appeals and the sale was cancelled, she learned.

On the same day they left Madrid they were met in San Francisco by friends, Mmes. Wilbur Tapscott and Jerry Kievenaar and returned to their Novato home.

WHEN JIMMY Allen Folkner Jr. was baptized at all Saints Lutheran Church in Novato on Sunday, five generations were in attendance at the baptism, but the baby's father was unable to attend as he is serving in Vietnam.

Attending the ceremony were the baby's mother, Mrs. Jimmy Folkner, and his grandmother, Mrs. Richard E. Hobbs, both of Novato; Mrs. Jud Siercks, his great grandmother and Mrs. A. M. Anderson, his great, great grandmother, both of Landa, N.D. Jimmy wore a christening dress made by his great great grandmother and first worn by his great grandmother.

THE ALFRED Patricks of San Rafael became parents of their first child, a son named David Adam, on Oct. 11. David's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Emile Patrick and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Campbell, all of Novato.

NEWLYWED MR. and Mrs. Carl H. Allen Jr. are living in Tiburon after a wedding trip to Maui in Hawaii. The bride, the former Fran Spiking, is a stewardess instructor for United Airlines and her husband is attending Hastings School of Law. They were married at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church, with the bridegroom's father, Judge Carl H. Allen of San Francisco officiating with the Rev. David Jacobsen.

AT HOME in San Rafael are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lautsch, who have returned from their wedding trip to Carmel. The former Linda Thomson and Ernest Lautsch were married Oct. 2 at St. Rita's Church in Fairfax and greeted guests afterward at a reception at Peacock Gap Country Club.

Tim Frost Is Wed To Miss Crosbie

A reception followed at the Officers Club at Treasure Island Naval Station.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert R. Crosbie of Oakland, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Frost of Belvedere are the parents of the bridegroom. He is the grandson of Mrs. Charles W. White of San Francisco.

The bride's sister, Mrs. John Gaston of Berkeley, was the matron of honor. Celinda Tabucchi of San Francisco was the bridesmaid.

Kenneth A. Frost Jr. of El Cerrito was best man for his brother, and R. Blair Evans and Robert and Scott Crosbie, the bride's brothers, all of Oakland, ushered.

Laurel is a graduate of Skyline High School in Oakland and the University of California. She also studied at the University of Padua in Italy and did graduate work at Hayward State College, where she obtained the teacher's credential.

Tim is a graduate of Redwood High School and studied at the Schiller Gymnasium in Preetz, West Germany. He was graduated from the University of California and attended the University of Goettingen, in Goettingen, Germany. He received the master's degree from Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University in Medford, Mass., and is now an ensign in the Navy.

The couple will travel to the East Coast on their wedding trip, and will live in Charleston, S.C.

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

Two years ago my parents said I could go on a cross-country trip to visit friends if I earned my own money. I helped elderly people, mowed lawns, got a paper route, did odd jobs and even saved some of my birthday money. Now I've got a carry-out job at a market, so I'll have enough saved by next summer.

But last night I mentioned my plans and they said "Absolutely not!" When I asked why, they wouldn't answer. — HOW COME?

HELEN'S ANSWER
DEAR HOW:

Your folks may tave taken the easy way. Believing you'd never save the money for the trip, they resorted, perhaps, to a familiar cop-out: "If you want it, earn it!"

Now that you have, they should either keep their word, or come up with a solid reason for backing down. — HELEN

SUE'S VIEWS
DEAR HOW COME:

Parents sometimes forget their promises because they have to make so many.

Here's a suggestion that often works: When your folks say "yes" to a long-range plan (which they may figure will "go away" before they need to face it), keep bringing it up in the conversation, like very casually, every day or so. (Parent psychology, get it?)

This reminds them that you're really counting on it, and you think they're great for cooperating.

It might even work for your next summer's cross-country trip. After all, you've got eight months to prove that if you can earn the money, you're mature enough to spend it wisely — especially since they thought so two years ago.

NOTE FROM HELEN:

Hm-m-m-m . . . So that's why our not-quite-definite trip to Hawaii just "happens" to pop up in the family conversation every day or so.

. . . The things a mother learns when she writes a column with her teen-age daughter!

LAST WORD FROM SUE:

. . .Me and my big mouth!

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I've been seeing this boy for a year. He's also been seeing at least one other girl — maybe two — but for his "needs" only. The way he talks about them, they're just dogs to him.

He respects me and says he loves me. We've never gone further than we should. Once he mentioned marriage, and an hour later he said, "Nobody's going to tie me down!"

I'm 22 and ready for a husband. If I just wait patiently do you suppose he'll decide for True Love? — W.C.

P.S. He's 20:

HELEN'S ANSWER
DEARW.:

They say patience is a virtue and virtue is its own reward. Which in your case might mean that all you'll get for your patience is a lot more waiting!

I think this "boy" is too young for you — and not just in years.

SUE'S VIEWS
DEAR W.:

The guy sounds like the Sultan type to me. Get out of his "harem" while you're still just a visitor.

Sympathy For Fat Persons

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fat is good and misunderstood if one is to place credence in Hippocrates' Aphorism 35. To wit:

"In all maladies, those who are fat about the belly do best. It is bad to be very thin and wasted there."

Dr. George V. Mann, cites the aphorism in a report title "Obesity, the Nutritional Spook." He sympathizes with contemporary men and woman plagued by experts, professional and otherwise, who view obesity as a moral issue.

He reminds that obesity has some uses that are often forgotten. These include: Flotation, flirtation, starvation and insulation.

Yes. Fat helps to keep one afloat, helps to keep one alive during periods of starvation as when no food is available and one lives off one's fat, stored calories, helps insulate in cold weather and, where placed in certain ways on a female, leads to flirtation.

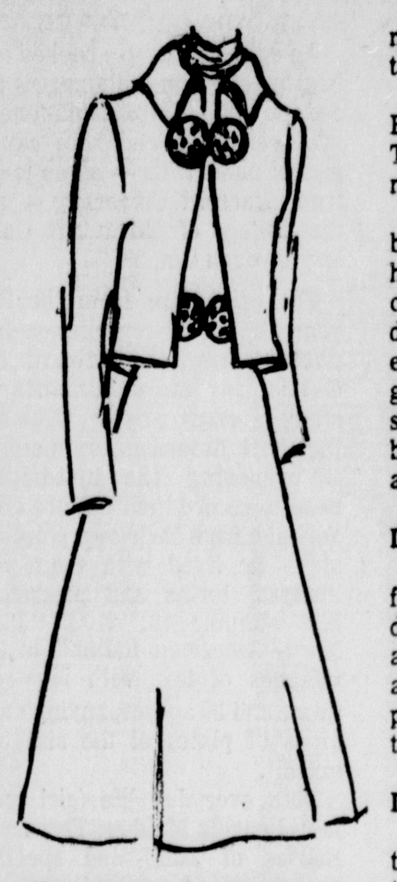
By EUNICE FARMER

Buckles are the latest accessory in fashion importance. We see buckles everywhere, and they can completely change the appearance of a dress. In one of the European magazines I read for new ideas, there was a use for buckles that I would like to pass on to you.

When you make one of those little jackets for a dress-jacket combination, many times they are not closed with the conventional buttons. Why not use a duplicate of the buckle from your dress for a dramatic closing of the jacket. It ties the whole thing together, and the look is new and different. Why not try it?

One of the most worthwhile and informative experiences I have ever had was on a recent trip to New York, where I spent a few hours at the Pellon research laboratory. In this spot many types of interfacings are tested in every possible type of application. These are done primarily for the manufacturers' benefit, but I learned a lot to pass on to you.

The most exciting to me was the way a contour belt could be made from a straight piece of knit fabric in a matter of seconds.



You must begin by cutting the belt on the cross-grain of the fabric. First, press the web-like fusible that is attached to paper, to one half of the width of the belt, eliminating the seam allowance. Next, remove the paper and fuse to a lightweight piece of bias, non-woven pellon. Proceed with the construction of your belt by stitching it in a tube, finishing the one end in a point. Turn to right side and top stitch if desired about 1/2 inch from the outer edges.

Now, the magic, place with the wrong side up on your pressing board, curve gently as you press firmly in the shape of a contour belt. Proceed until you have completed the belt area. You can go back and repress again if you didn't get the correct curve. It is simply beautiful, and a very flattering type belt for those of us who need a little slimming advantage.

MRS. STEPHEN York, New Bedford, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"My sewing career is just beginning. With a new baby, I have been making lots of baby clothes. Here's a little tip I discovered that might help other beginners. I put a little white glue on the cut edges of all my satin ribbons used for ties and bows. They never ravel even after many washings."

DEAR EUNICE,

When I use the press-on interfacing, it seems that I have difficulty in keeping the material from stretching out of shape as I press the interfacing in place. Is there a special trick to this?

MARY R.

DEAR MARY R.,

Yes, applying the press-on type interfacing can be a little tricky because the iron doesn't just slip over it. If you're not very careful, the section to be interfaced can be distorted completely. We use the expression "touch baste" when applying this type of interfacing.

First, in most cases, you will cut away the seam allowance on the interfacing before application to avoid the extra bulk in the seams. Then, position it carefully and touch the tip of the iron to it in several places over the entire area, this is what I refer to as "touch basting". This will hold the interfacing in place until you can proceed with the normal application.

To those who constantly write that the press-on type interfacing pulls off either during construction, wearing or cleaning, it simply was not applied with the proper heat. If it was, it wouldn't pull apart because the proper fusing makes this impossible.

It is always best to pretest any application of this type because the type of fabric can make such a difference. Where the fabric does not permit excessive heat, you will have to rely on a different type of interfacing. You simply can't use this product halfway and expect good results.

FIRST AMERICANS — This gravure print of attractive Indian maidens of the Zuni tribe, together with unusual examples of basketry and pottery — such as the Apache storage basket, the Pomo "wedding basket," and the Cochiti Picture Jar, are included in the College of Marin's North American Indian Art exhibit, through Oct. 29.

ART REVIEW

Gallery At College Of Marin Has Outstanding Indian Show

By ADA GARFINKEL

An easy way to get hooked on North American Indian art is to see the exhibit of 20 sepia-toned gravure prints and rare samples of handcrafts — all on loan from Stanford University — at the College of Marin Art Gallery through Oct. 29.

The prints are from the 23-year (1900-1923) compilation by photo-journalist, Edward S. Curtis, for his documentary study of every existing tribe on the North American continent.

Foreseeing the historical need to record their culture and heritage from their own point of view, he lived with them on intimate terms and produced his monumental work "The North American Indian" in 20 volumes of text with illustrations, and 20 accompanying volumes of plates of the size on exhibit.

Both everyday life (girl and jar; Jicarilla Maiden; Terraced Houses of Zuni) and special occasions and cremonies occur in the prints on the gallery walls: "War Party's Farewell"; "Snake Priest"; "Sundancer"; "Blackfoot Tipis"; "Navaho Medicine-Man". An interesting annotation to "A Zuni Governor" reads: "This portrait may well be taken as representative of the typical Pueblo physiognomy." One is captured by the presence and dignity with which these early Americans are pictured.

Gallery director Ann Jack has done a handsome installation of the artifacts. Using various enclosed, free-standing and wall cases, she has placed the rare potteries and baskets on beds of sand. For the silver jewelry and beadwork, her choice has been flat and sloped clear shelves which allow close observation of intricate design and facture.

Basketry and pottery were the North American Indian's foremost crafts. A rare example is the large Apache grain-storage basket showing an unusual combination of human and animal figures as design. And the Pomo Indians of Northern California wove finely-worked small baskets decorated with brilliant feathers. The one on display is a cherished "wedding basket." When wither one of the couple died, the basket was destroyed.

Potters used the coil method rather than the wheel, and a sample of this is the rare "corrugated" ware dated 1,000 A.D. Another, the striking black-and-white Zuni "heart-line" decorated water jar was supposed to direct the hunter's bow to the vital area for the kill.

Among the more unusual usage of beadwork are the Chest Piece and Neckband used by the Sioux Indians, and several ceremonial items, such as "A Medicine Bundle" and a "Peace-pipe Bag" from (respectively) the Plains and the Cheyenne Indians.

While basketry and pottery were "women's work", silverwork — jewelry making learned from the Spanish during the mid-1800s — was for men only! And the craft was passed from father to son.

Jewelry became a means of exchange — like money — and were often forfeited to local trading posts. However, some interesting samples of Zuni, Navaho, and Hopi work (both "tourist" and non-tourist types) are in the College exhibit.

Gallery hours during which the exhibit may be seen are Monday through Friday, from 8-5, and from 6:30-10 p.m.

Stars Set

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Leslie Caron and Warren Oates will co-star in "Open Shadow," a private detective film based on the heroics of private eyes of the 1940s.

$163,000 For Beach Development

A federal grant of $163,000 is just about assured so that McNear Beach can be fully developed with utilities and picnic facilities by next year, Marin's director of parks and recreation reported yesterday.

Pierre W. Joske said he received word from State Sen. Peter H. Behr that Marin's application for the federal grant had been approved by the state and was forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

The federal grant will be mated by $163,000 in county funds for the $366,000 needed for Phase Two development at McNear Beach.

James Vande Weg, park development coordinator, said second-phase development includes the installation of 75 picnic tables, two acres of lawn and play areas, a sewer system, new restrooms and dressing rooms, shore protection, bicycle and pedestrian trails and landscaping.

The park is now closed for a $130,000 Phase One development, which includes paving the parking area, turfing, water supply and a path system.

The first phase should be completed in January. "We hope to complete most of Phase Two by next summer," Wande Weg said.

Just One Way To Bag A Deer

RENO, Nev. (UPI)—Some hunters will do anything to bag their deer.

Devon Warren was in the hills on opening day when he heard a shot and saw a deer running down the mountain, a bullet wound in its shoulder.

Warren grabbed his hunting knife, jumped on the deer and rode the animal 60 yards down the mountain, wrestled it to the ground and slit its throat.

The hunter who shot the deer arrived at the scene and said: "anyone who can ride a deer down a mountain deserves to have it."

Mrs. Gage To Top GOP State Post

I-J Special Report

FRESNO — Mrs. William P. Gage of Belvedere has been elected to one of the top posts of the California Federation of Republican Women at the federation's 17th biennial convention here.

Mrs. Gage was chosen Northern California vice-president of the federation, which also has vice-presidents for central and Southern California.

Mrs. Harry Umhey of Los Angeles was elected president.

Mrs. Gage is a director, parliamentarian and bylaws chairman of the Marin Federated Republican Women and is president of Marin's California Lambda Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians. She and her husband, a retired chemical engineer, are parents of two grown sons and reside at 12 Eucalyptus Road.

Bound Over To Superior Court

Carol Ann Daenzer, 28, of Corte Madera, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on two felony counts and one misdemeanor count of passing bad checks.

She is to be arraigned in superior court Oct. 27.

She was arrested Sept. 28 on a warrant charging her with passing a series of bad checks in Corte Madera during July.

Similar charges are pending against her in San Mateo and Orange Counties, according to police.

Standard Fined For Oil Spill

RICHMOND (UPI) — For the second time in less than a month, Standard Oil of California has been fined $1,000 for spilling oil into San Francisco Bay.

The fine was levied for a 10-gallong spill which occurred in July when a company employee had trouble with a valve on an oil truck.

On Sept. 30, Municipal Judge Charles Baldwin fined Standard and placed the company on two years probation for a spill which occurred July 18.

12 Selected To Assembly At School

The 12 winners for the San Marin High School representative assembly for this school year have been announced by Asst. Principal William M. Stiveson.

The assembly consists of three candidates at large and three from each of the three classes, he said. This year, the three representatives at large were all seniors. They were those receiving the largest number of votes. There were 35 candidates running Tuesday — 21 seniors, eight juniors and six sophomores.

Voting was done before school, during the noon hour and after school. There were 324 votes cast out of the 916 enrolled, or 35 per cent, Stiveson said.

San Marin High School does not release the number of votes cast for individual candidates because it might cause hard feelings, Stiveson said.

Mark Hanzlik, Barry Sullivan and Jay Woods won the at-large posts.

Joyce Beedle, Daniel L. Connell and Wendy Putnam were elected from the junior class. They won over Stacey Crosby, Cindi Duncan, Rori Giannini, Liz McFarland and David Milano.

Drake Delzell, Kenneth Kassenbrock and Ann Sorensen were elected by the sophomore class over Aletha Conett, Liz Hamon and Joe Marcum.

Live!
You Only Do It Once
"WHERE COULD I GO DANCING BY MYSELF?"
"Every Friday night there is an Arthur Murray party which is for all students. You have the opportunity of meeting many new friends your own age and of using your dancing right away in a real fun atmosphere. You'll have the time of your life . . . even if you've never danced before. Even refreshments are free. By the way, you can also use the studio facilities to practice in."
"YOU'VE GOT TO BE KIDDING! WHAT CAN I LEARN?"
"Any of the popular dances of your choice: Fox Trot, Waltz, Rumba, Swings, Cha-Cha, Tango, Merengue, Samba - even the Bossa Nova."
STUDIO OPEN

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Even Though Mild, Treatment Of Acne Strongly Recommended

Ninety per cent of adolescent boys and girls develop acne that varies in severity. It is difficult for teen-agers to avoid the disorder because the sex hormones are flowing freely and stimulating the oil glands in the skin to overproduce sebum. Unfortunately this occurs at a time when the youngster is trying to make a good impression.

Other skin changes narrow the openings of the oil ducts. As a result, the pores retain the greasy material. A small thin cap of dirt collects in the area, but acne lesions are caused more by internal conditions than from failure to wash the face often enough.

PIMPES DEVELOP when the plugged sebaceous glands become infected. Acne is the name given this combination of greasiness, blackheads and pimples. Some youngsters are bothered for a longer period than others, but the majority improve spontaneously as the body matures. Marriage does not cure acne and any improvement that takes place after the wedding is due to growing up.

Treatment is recommended even though acne is mild. These boys and girls are self-conscious and want a clear complexion. Therapy minimizes and lessens the residual scarring which is likely to occur when sebum accumulates and forms hard bumps under the skin that heal with scarring.

EARLY AND constant treatment with salves, along with proper diet, cleanliness, ample exercise and sleep will go a long way toward prevention of these obstructive lesions.

An experimental product not yet approved by the Food and Drug Administration is showing promise. It is called retinol (vitamin A acid) and has been found superior to two widely used acne remedies.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

THYROIDECTOMY

A.G. writes: Are there any changes in body function after the thyroid is taken out?

REPLY

The surgeon usually leaves a small amount of thyroid tissue. This may be enough to supply the body with its quota of thyroid extract. If not, signs of hypothyroidism develop, such as dry skin, slow pulse, puffiness of the face, and lack of pep and ambition. Thyroid tablets correct the situation and may be needed for life.

SINUS INFECTION

A reader writes: Can chronic ethmoiditis ever be cured?

REPLY

Yes — with medication. Drug therapy is effective if there is no obstruction and the nasal passageways are not being irritated by nosedrops, swimming, or allergy. Surgery is done when conservative measures fail.

HEAD SWIMMING

Mrs. B. writes: What causes my head to swim and my stomach to burp when I raise my head from the pillow every morning?

REPLY

God works in mysterious ways. Do you have car trouble?

WANING IMMUNITY

H.P. writes: I was vaccinated against smallpox as a child. Do I need it again?

REPLY

Yes, if you want to be protected. Immunity from smallpox vaccination begins to wane after three years.

Cultural Enrichment Program Scheduled

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) —The Model Cities agency of Youngstown has selected Youngstown State University's Center for Urban Studies to direct the agency's cultural enrichment program there.

The program, a five-week intensive seminar involving 25 young persons, is designed to develop a greater awareness and pride in their cultural background.

Cleaver's Wife Returns From Algeria; Plans A National Tour

BOSTON (UPI) — Kathleen Cleaver, the wife of black revolutionary Eldridge Cleaver, returned from two and a half years in Algeria Friday night and said her fugitive husband would sneak back into the United States "very soon" to help head "guerilla warfare."

Mrs. Cleaver, 26, who landed at Boston's Logan International Airport on a Swissair flight diverted from New York, was accompanied by a black woman who was handcuffed and taken into custody by FBI agents.

Mrs. Cleaver later identified the woman as Jessica Scott Weinrich, of Frankfurt, Germany. She said the FBI mistook the woman for Gwendylin Joyce Patterson, wanted for air piracy.

"I know Jessica and I know Gwen. She (Miss Patterson) is in Algiers. I saw her yesterday" just before leaving to return to the U.S., she told reporters outside the John F. Kennedy Federal Building where the woman was believed to have been taken.

Mrs. Cleaver, who returned with a two-year-old and a one-year old daughter born in Algeria, declined to say just when her husband, wanted in California for parole violation, would try to return to the U.S.

"I can't say, but it will be very soon. It's just a matter of waiting until conditions are favorable. It's just a matter of time," she said.

"There's only one way they can get back in and that is come in as guerillas and wage guerilla warfare,,' she said.

Wearing a beige turtle neck sweater and leather skirt and boots, Mrs. Cleaver said she was returning after 30 months in Algiers to make a speaking tour and to work "for revolutionary organization."

"I plan to speak in as many places as possible," she said, but added that no definite engagements had been made.

Mrs. Cleaver said she tried to stop FBI agents when they handcuffed the woman and took her from a U.S. Customs gate at the airport.

"We had a slight fight. I told them they had no right to handcuff her. They were pulling her one way, I was pulling her another," she said. "They told me if I didn't let go I could be charged with assault."

Bill Is Signed; Reverses Court On Access Rights

SACRAMENTO — A bill reversing a state Supreme Court ruling which gave legal access to private lands has been signed into law by Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke.

The measure (SB 504), introduced by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, and cosponsored by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, was submitted after the court ruled that private land open to public access for five years could remain open.

The bill had the support of the Marin Property Owners Association but was opposed by the Sierra Club.

The court ruling involved a dispute about access to an ocean beach at the mouth of the Navarro River in Mendocino County.

It was under that ruling that Marin conservationists had hoped to keep some of the county's undeveloped forest land and beach properties open to the public.

Although the measure does not guarantee public access to private property, after five years of use, supporters said it will free many property owners from fencing off their land in order to insure private title to the land.

Reinecke called it "a landmark measure that will allow private property owners to (voluntarily) open their lands to recreational use without facing the threat of losing title to the property."

Vassar Coed Files Suit Over Drugs

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI)—A petite coed sued Vassar College for $1 million Friday, claiming she flunked out because her roommate held marijuana parties and psychedelic gatherings and sang "with abandon all through the night."

The roommate, identified only as Pamela, "became a focal point of drug users on campus," Raymond Graber of West Hempstead, N.Y., charged in the suit filed on behalf of his brown-haired daughter Nancy, 20.

"Pamela insisted that the door from the corridor be kept open at all times when she was in the suite, even throughout the night. I was unable to shut my door to the noise and the haze of pot smoke in the corridor," the suit said.

The girl alleged that, when she complained to Mrs. Elizabeth M. Drouilhet, dean of residence at the former women's college which has since gone coed, she was told "open the window" if marijuana smoke bothered her. Prof. Robert F. Martin, a faculty member who lived in the dorm, said he was "powerless to act in drug matters," Miss Graber alleged.

As a result of sleeplessness brought about by the alleged drug activities, Miss Graber said she flunked out. She also charged she was unable to transfer to another college of her choice because Vassar refused to give her a recommendation.

A spokesman for Vassar said there would be no comment on the suit until the court papers reached the school.

Spectator Is Booted From Prison Round

The ejection of a female spectator from the courtroom marked an otherwise quiet Marin Superior Court session yesterday for six San Quentin inmates charged in connection with the Aug. 21 violence at the prison, in which three inmates and three guards died.

Little progress was made in the case as the inmates — again in the courtroom only one at a time — said they still had not obtained attorneys.

The session was repeatedly interrupted by an attorney, John Thorne, who said he was speaking as a friend of the court, until Judge E. Warren McGuire finally ordered him to sit down and stop interrupting.

A blond young woman in the last row of the room laughed at the exchange. McGuire ordered her out of the court and she left without further ado.

The judge continued the case to 9 a.m. Oct. 29 when he said, he would appoint attorneys if the inmates had not then arranged for their own.

Transfer Of Park Office Confirmed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—National Park Service Director George Hartzog confirmed Friday that the NPS Western Service Center here will close, and the office will be transferred to Denver with a sharp staff cutback.

Hartzog had said at least 90 employes in the center here would be fired if not transferred to Denver or if they refused to transfer.

But Friday, in a two-hour meeting with employes at the Federal Court Building here, he amended his position, saying anyone not transferred would be kept on the payroll if he elected to take a NPS opening elsewhere.

The service center employs about 300 planners, architects, and engineers who perform special services for the NPS.

Hartzog cited economy as the reason for the closure here.

Plan Advanced On Yacht Harbor

Conceptual designs for a development plan for the Sausalito Yacht Harbor have been approved by the Sausalito Community Appearances Advisory Board, Planning Director H. Eric Borgwardt reported.

The revised plans, submitted by architect Roland Mays, will now go before the planning commission which has been studying the development plan and recommending changes for the past several months.

The appearances advisory board also has approved plans for renovation of a building for Sasaki-Walker Associates Inc. at 2250 Marinship Way, according to the planning director.

Kaiser Blamed In Cancer Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A jury has awarded a woman cancer victim $300,000 in a suit against Kaiser Foundation doctors.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Hannlore Heilbrun, 46, San Francisco, was wheeled into court on a gurney to testify briefly during the six-day trial.

Her attorney, Gerald C. Sterns, said the doctors failed to properly diagnose cancer of the breast although she was under treatment from 1967 to 1970.

Lagoon Lock Bond Vote Is Approved

The Bel Marin Keys Community Service District Board has voted to go ahead with a special bond election in an attempt to raise money for a lock on the lagoon.

Secretary Betty L. Zoeller said that the board estimated that it would be for between $600,000 and $700,000. Tentative election date was set for Jan. 11.

The estimated cost of the lock if $456,000, with about $114,000 for contingencies and bond attorney, and possibly $130,000 for property purchase, she said.

The board awarded a $5,000 contract to Bresnan-Dalecio Inc. of San Rafael to construct a multi-use blacktop pad for two outdoor basketball courts at Montego Park.

It also accepted the resignation of Stanley C. Rakeman as maintenance man.

Eight To Seek College Posts

Eight College of Marin students have been nominated for six student government positions up for election Monday and Tuesday.

Only two positions, college center commissioner and sophomore men's representative, have contests.

Running for center commissioner are Janet Martinson and Delane Cochran while Will Devers and Tom Estudillo are competing for men's representative.

Balloting will take place during school hours at the college center.

OF GOD AND MAN

Serious Illness Can Be Blessing

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

Serious illness can be a blessing.

I've been reading assurances to that effect in the Bible for many years. But on paper they sounded pretty far-fetched, and I guess I didn't take them very seriously. Now I know, from recent personal experience, that it really is so.

I'm not trying to suggest that a hospital is a jolly place to be. It isn't. But I never really expected it to be. What surprised me was the discovery that there are certain aspects of a heart attack which can invest the whole experience with good cheer, joyfulness, even a kind of zest.

The author of the 23rd Psalm glimpsed the basic reason, I think. When you walk through what is called the "valley of the shadow of death," your natural fear can be quite remarkably allayed by a strong awareness that God is with you.

It is important to realize that this phrase means exactly what it says: God is "with" you.

What He extends in an hour of real crisis is a sense of His presence — not magical protection from the natural consequences of your illness.

Neither the Bible nor the common experience of humanity offers us any ground for believing God will automatically intervene to spare from pain and death those who call upon him for aid. The noblest petitioner who ever lived, Jesus Christ, got no for an answer when he earnestly prayed that he might avoid the ordeal of crucifixion.

As Jesus once said, God allows the rain to fall impartially on the just and the unjust. He has bestowed on his creation a radical freedom. This freedom enables us to be men rather than puppets. But it also exposes the hardest-praying pietist and the most calloused unbeliever to precisely the same vicissitudes and accidents of an impartial order of nature.

So to say that God is with you when you enter the "valley of the shadow" doesn't mean you're assured of getting safely through. It simply means that in serious illness you can be aware of His presence and confident of his love to a degree not often attained in the peaceful and painless passages of everyday life.

This feeling that God is with you is a very wonderful thing. It does not merely comfort you. It gives you a new outlook, a different perspective on all your plans, problems, ambitions and worries. It liberates you — from fear, and anxiety, and petty ambitions.

The inner happiness, which sometimes is a strange fruit of illness, does not continue without interruption. Like all other human moods, it has its ups and downs. In cardiac cases particularly, there are periodic attacks of acute psychological depression, so familiar to doctors they are considered a normal progression of the disease.

But even in these intervals, I found my depressions were mainly at an intellectual-verbal level. I spoke sometimes quite gloomily and occasionally indulged in a bash of feeling very sorry for myself. But in hindsight, I realize that these transitory moods of depression never managed to shake what St. Paul (who had plenty of first-hand experience with pain and illness) referred to as "God" peace, which is far beyond human understanding."

No one can earn this peace. It is dispensed, thank God, quite without regard to one's just deserts. It is need, not righteousness, helplessness, not holiness, that makes it possible to receive this benison.

There are other reasons, too, why serious illness can be a blessing.

It teaches you how many really good, kind and loving people there are in the world—people who'll go to great ends to help you, for no reason other than their own warm compassion. It is good to be reminded how much sheer goodness there is among human beings—especially at times such as now, when we're all continually tempted into cynicism.

It helps, for example, to learn that most doctors and nurses, no matter what it is currently fashionable to say about them, really do care intensely and unselfishly about healing the sick.

It helps to find out, for sure, what I already had good reason to suspect—that the "heartless corporation" which employs you is in fact run by men with very big and generous hearts.

Finally, very far from least, it is nice to know that the girl you married 28 years ago meant all she said about "in sickness and in health," and that the son who seemed only yesterday a crazy kid has suddenly become a mature, thoughtful and responsible young man capable of taking over problems rather than causing them.

Synod Votes Pay Hikes For Leaders

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Despite vehement objections from some delegates, the United Presbyterian Church's Synod of the Golden Gate has approved a budget containing salary increases for headquarters executives.

Among the hikes approved during last weekend on a voice vote by 262 delegates to the synod was a "merit raise" paid the official who wrote national Presbyterian headquarters requesting $10,000 for the Angela Davis Defense Fund.

The $10,000 donation, which was eventually returned, caused a nationwide furor among Presbyterian lay groups.

Rev. Eugene Turner, of the synod's office of ethnic church affairs, who asked for the donation, received a raise to $17,115 annual in salary and housing plus $5,345 for "benefits and expenses."

Debate over the budget included disputes over the Angela Davis donation and over increases for executives at a time when many pastors receive only $6,000 or so a year.

In addition to the dialogue speakers and agency chiefs, Dr. D. Manning Jackson, pastor of the El Bethel Baptist Church in San Francisco will speak on Nov. 9, and Dr. Browne Barr, current pastor of the First Congregational Church of Berkeley on Dec. 14.

IJ Church Page

Former Inmate To Be Series Speaker

Former San Quentin inmate Lawrence Baulch will be the speaker tomorrow in the fourth Sunday morning series on "Our Stake in the Prison Crisis" at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo.

Author of "Return to the World," Baulch served three terms in San Quentin and is currently head of Job Therapy, Inc., an organization fostering personal relationships between prisoners and those outside prison.

Rev. Byron Eshelman, former San Quentin chaplain, will lead discussion. The series, under Eshelman's leadership, will conclude October 31.

On Wednesday at 8 p.m. attorney Charles Garry will speak on "Is Equal Justice Possible in Our Courts?" in a special mid-week series which will conclude Oct. 27 with Arlo Smith, chief criminal deputy in the state Attorney General's office. The series is being moderated by former Superior Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr.

The two programs are part of the church's effort to bring a Christian perspective "to bear upon contemporary concerns," said Rev. John O. Najarian, church pastor.

GUEST — Rev. William A. Younger, an Assemblies of God Missionary to Malawi, Central Africa, will be guest speaker at tomorrow's 7 p.m. service at the Central Assembly of God, 517 D Street in San Rafael.

Science Writer To Talk Tomorrow Night

Alan Vaughan, science writer, will speak on "Spiritual Implications of Psychic Phenomena" at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the First Congregational Church on North San Pedro Road in San Rafael.

Vaughan, a founder of the Central Premonitions Registry in New York, has studied at parapsychological research centers in England, Holland and Germany.

Leadership Course Will Begin Monday

A six-week leadership course of Sunday school teachers will be offered beginning Monday at the Neighborhood Church of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Petaluma.

Classes for teachers, prospective teachers and youth group leaders will be given by Rev. Richard S. McMillan on Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Gargiulo Will Lead Bible Study

Joseph D. Gargiulo, Novato mayor and school administrator, will lead a four-month series on the Bible beginning tomorrow at the United Methodist Church in Novato.

The sessions will be held on Sundays from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. and will deal with the first five books of the Bible.

Gargiulo has 20 years' religious education experience and is former president of the Marin County Council of Churches.

Witnesses Set Circuit Meeting

I-J Special Report

RICHMOND — More than 100 Jehovah's Witnesses from San Rafael are expected here next Friday, Saturday and Sunday for the semi-annual circuit assembly.

Key speakers of the conference will be Lyle E. Reusch, district minister for Northern California, and James L. Waddington, circuit supervisor.

The sessions will be held in the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.

BOB SMITH
To give two talks

Peninsula Pastor Will Give Talks

Bob Smith, associate pastor of the Peninsula Bible Church in Palo Alto, will be the guest speaker tomorrow at the 9:30 a.m. worship service of the Marin Covenant Church. He will be speaking on the theme "Saints Alive - Church Alive."

Following the morning service there will be a discussion of the message with adults and teenagers during the church school hour at 10:45 a.m.

Prior to joining the staff at Peninsula Bible Church, Smith was employed as an engineer for a research firm.

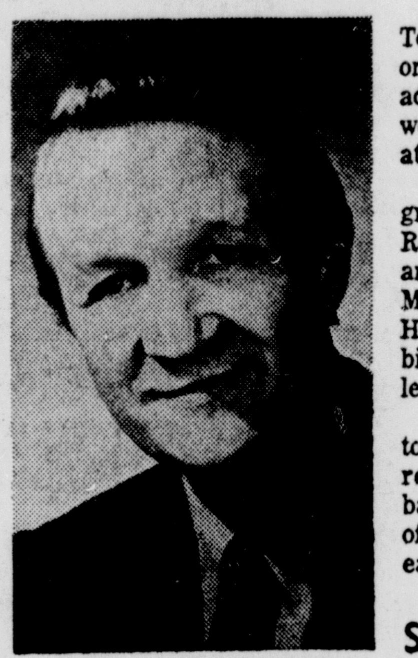
The two Sunday morning sessions with the congregation of the Covenant Church will conclude a three-day visit in Marin.

Beginning last night, Smith led an adult retreat for the congregation on the theme of "Saints Alive - Church Alive."

The Marin Covenant Church meets on Sundays at the Miller Creek Junior High School at 2255 Las Gallinas Avenue in Marinwood.

Mexico's famous San Francisco Church was established in 1524.

New Director Will Be Seated Tomorrow



JOSEPH T. BELGUM
Lutheran social services

SAN FRANCISCO (LC) — Lutheran Social Services of Northern California will celebrate its fifth anniversary and install a new executive director tomorrow.

Rev. Joseph A. Belgum formally will assume the agency's top post during an installation service at St. Mark's Lutheran Church, 1111 O'Farrell Street. The service begins at 3 p.m.

Belgum had served as executive director of Lutheran Social Services of North Dakota, with headquarters in Fargo, for the past 14 years.

The fifth anniversary celebration will follow at the Urban Center adjacent to St. Mark's.

Lutheran Social Services of Northern California was formed in 1966, bringing together the programs of Lutheran Child and Family Service and Lutheran Welfare Service of Northern California.

The new agency became the major social ministry arm in the northern portion of the state for the South Pacific District of the American Lutheran Church, the Pacific Southwest Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, and the California and Nevada District of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Lutheran Social Services of Northern California maintains its headquarters at 3208 16th Street, San Francisco. However, it has regional offices in Sacramento, Fresno, and Palo Alto.

The agency provides chaplaincy services for institutions, sponsors programs for family life enrichment, works with groups in community organization, counsels families and individuals in crisis situations, organizes various volunteer services, provides food and clothing in emergency cases, assists with the resettlement of immigrants to the U.S., and coordinates the gathering of clothing for overseas relief.

GUEST SPEAKER — Rev. Ethel Higgins, founder and minister of Unity Christ Church of San Francisco, will be guest speaker at tomorrow's morning service at Unity-In Marin, 24 H Street. She will speak on "Love Is the Measuring Line."

Faith Lutheran Adult Seminar Slated Tonight

Faith Lutheran Church of Terra Linda will offer the second in a series of four monthly adult evening seminars on the works of Teilhard de Chardin, at 7 p.m. today at the church.

Speaker for the evening's program, "Scientific Evolution and Religious Faith: A Search for an Integrated View to Life's Meaning," will be Dr. John Hopkirk, associate professor of biology at Sonoma State College.

Rev. Bliss W. Bellinger, pastor of Faith Lutheran, will be resource leader, presenting background on de Chardin, one of the leading theologians of the early 20th Century.

Science In Mind Lecture Wednesday

All Faiths Church In Special Event

The Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera is hosting 26 youths and adults from 13 churches and communities in Northern California this weekend as part of its Lay Witness Mission.

The special witness program came to the forefront in 1961 when a group of Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal laymen visited a small Methodist church in Alabama. Since then the program has been used by more than 20 denominations throughout the nation.

The Corte Madera program began last night with a potluck supper. Group meetings, general sessions, and a farewell luncheon are on schedule.

Activities will conclude tomorrow with an evaluation of the program scheduled at 1 p.m.

Baha'i's To Observe Prophet's Birthday

The Baha'i Community of San Rafael will observe the 151st birthday of Bab, the prophet-herald of the group's faith, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Nura Samandari Loas, former pioneer of the Baha'i Faith in Mexico, will talk at a special meeting at 8 p.m. in the social hall of the First Methodist Church of San Rafael.

What the boys do does something for the boys

So Junior gets on his bike and delivers the I-J to you. Big deal!

You may wonder what values a boy receives from doing this job. Money? Very definitely. Our boys are businessmen who know a dollar has two sides — work and reward.

But newspaperboys "earn" something else which parents and teachers consider is perhaps the most important kind of education: personal confidence and self-reliance . . . the feeling too, that their service is something genuine and needed by the community.

This comes gradually, day by day, as a boy realizes that this is his newspaper route, that he is the manager. He discovers that people are relying upon him, that punctuality and service are appreciated. He learns to manage time as well as money. Most important, he learns that even a boy has reserves of personal responsibility which increasingly develop as he draws upon them.

This is not random, hit-or-miss development. Supporting the youngsters is an unusual program of the I-J Circulation Department which provides guidance and training from men who understand a boy's needs and capacities. Junior always has an advisor to whom he can turn.

What the boys do, then, does something for the boys. And in turn does something for society. More than 800 I-J carriers prove it every day.

800 I-J newspaperboys deliver that which lives only for a day — the news, the history of each 24 hours. Yet this "history", which will be entirely new tomorrow, is the strongest reinforcement of a free and informed society. It makes each boy's job important.

BULLDOG SURROUNDED — San Rafael High School fullback Mark Farrar was cornered last night by a bevy of visiting Redwood High School defenders in the Giants' 21-13 victory over the Bulldogs. Dan Young (65) was among those ready to pounce on Farrar in this sequence.

Redwood Holds On To Top San Rafael

Terrific 21-13 Win For Giants

By PAUL CANE

Redwood High School's Cinderella football team was about to turn into the proverbial pumpkin at the hands of San Rafael High last night, until Bob Fulton's last-minute goal-line interception helped the Giants hold onto an upset 21-13 decision in San Rafael.

Trailing 21-7 with seven minutes to go in the game, San Rafael drove 81 yards for a touchdown, and then recovered a Redwood fumble to move to the Giants' five-yard line, before a crucial penalty set the Bulldogs back. On third and goal from the 15-yard line with one minute remaining, San Rafael quarterback Dirk Gansloser fired over the middle, only to deliver Fulton's crucial interception.

Redwood's win was sparked by Mike Connor, who scored on touchdown runs of two and 45 yards, and by running mate Daryl Edralin. Connor rambled for 131 yards, while Edralin riddled the Bulldog linemen for 92.

Individually, however, Bulldog Scott Duncan really stole the show in defeat, breaking away for 187 net yards on 23 carries. Redwood coach Phil Roark cited Duncan as a "real outstanding back," but added that the Giants relied on "all 32 varsity team members," instead of having "a one-man offense."

Redwood, who hadn't scored first in any of its four games up to now, scored a touchdown late in the first quarter last night on an 82-yard drive, spearheaded by Connor's 45-yard TD burst. San Rafael mentor Bob Muster commented sadly, "Our biggest problem was that we had their runners on the hook and let them go." On Connor's run, Muster reflected, there were three or four tackles broken, which added up to disaster for the Bulldogs.

In the middle of the next quarter, San Rafael turned the mistake around, by driving 24 yards after blocking quarterback Bob Brown's punt. Dun-

Lutz In Stunner Over Rod Laver

COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — Tenth-seeded Bob Lutz of Tiburon scored his second upset in two days when he knocked Australia's Rod Laver out of the quarterfinals of the 17th round of the World Professional Tennis tour Friday.

Lutz, 24, needed 89 minutes to beat the Australian lefthander, 6-4, 7-6.

In another surprise young Jeff Borowiak of Los Angeles, playing in his first professional tournament, advanced to the semi-finals by beating Andres Gimeno of Spain, 7-6, 7-6.

Borowiak, 22, beat veteran Fred Stolle, 6-4, 6-3 on Thursday.

With the score 6-6 in the second set, and the tie breaker also at 6-6, Laver double faulted after dropping his racket. On Lutz' final serve, Laver lobbed back so weakly Lutz slammed it home easily.

In addition to beating Laver, the second seed, Lutz eliminated another Australian, eighth-seeded Roy Emerson, Thursday, 7-6, 6-2.

Late Touchdown Drops Marin, 16-9

By JIM SMITH

SANTA CLARA — An 18-yard touchdown pass from Craig Chelonis to Charles Chelonis to Charles Prior with five minutes remaining gave host West Valley College of Campbell a 16-9 win over College of Marin last night at Buck Shaw Stadium.

It was Marin's Camino Norte Conference opener.

"The offense moved the ball fairly well," said Marin's head coach Dick Read, "but we made some crucial mistakes. Our passing game was good; Bob Daniele threw real well."

Daniele didn't play safety or kick any extra points, but he did complete 10 passes out of 25 attempts, totaling 90 yards. Daniele provided Marin's only touchdown. With 53 seconds left in the third quarter, the ex-Terra Linda High School flanker took a Dave Knutson punt, sped up the sideline, broke three tackles, and flashed 70 yards for the score, to square the slate at the time at 9-9. However, John Loane's extra point attempt was blocked. Loane had kicked a 33-yard field goal earlier in the quarter.

Down 16-9, with under a minute and one-half left in the game, the Tars got the ball due to a Leon Howard fumble recovery. Daniele found split end Neal Given for a first down; on the next play, he scrambled out of the pocket, netting another first down. After tossing to Bob Larson for another first down, Daniele found that five Viking pass defenders were one too many as West Valley's safety, Herb Hodgins, stole Daniele's last aerial, and hopes of a Tar victory. Other spark plugs for Marin were Neal Given with five receptions and Larry Walker who treaded through enemy lines for 83 yards rushing.

"I was pleased with our defense, they kept us in the ball game all the way, lauded Read, referring to the charing four times the Tars held off on own 15-yard line. Chris Fenton, who sought and destroyed backs and ends all night, Leon Howard, and Mike Phillips, who each intercepted a pass, shared the defensive limelight.

"My kids came to play football," Read said, "but we beat

GOOD TRY — In San Rafael High School end Duke Bessee leaped for a high Dirk Gansloser pass, despite heavy pressure from a Redwood defender.

Novato Hornet Gridders In 9-6 Win Over Vallejo

"We just suffered a big letdown," Al Scott said today after his Novato High School footballers narrowly defeated an underdog Vallejo team last night, 9-6 on the loser's field.

"That and the fact they played well made it pretty close," Scott added.

The Hornets (4-1) displayed a fine defense. Scott explained that tackle Russ Weklych, middle guard Rick Reis and end Jeff Eisenhauer "all played outstanding. Safety Tom Conklin also performed well."

After a lackluster first half highlighted only by a Bob Cooper 37-yard field goal, the Hornets opened up in the second half to control the ball. However, two fumbles crippled deep penetrations into Apache territory.

The turning point took place in the fourth period when Weklych blocked a Vallejo quick kick attempt; the Hornets picked up the ensuing 35 yards in four plays with quarterback Marty Moroski sneaking over from the one. The big calls in the drive included a Moroski to Terry Johnson pass covering 13 yards and an 11-yard run by Leo Magers, who totaled 142 yards on 16 carries. Magers effort, coming off a quick pitch, placed the ball on the Apache one.

"We have a tougher time with these non-league teams.

'New' Warriors Whip Celts, 97-75

BALTIMORE (UPI) —What difference do newcomers Cazzie Russell and Jim Barnett make for the Golden State Warriors?

It turned out to be about 33 per cent Friday night as the newly named Warriors embarked successfully on their new season with a solid 97-75 victory over the Celtics at the Boston Garden.

It was defense from the opening whistle for the Warriors who controlled both backboards and used the fast break to great advantage in the second half.

Russell, obtained from the New York Knicks for Jerry Lucas in the off season, meshed 15 points and Barnett, acquired from the Portland Trail Blazers, added 18. Those 33 points were about one-third of the Warriors total production.

The Warriors will try to employ the same tactics tonight against the Bullets at Baltimore whose residents could be in a gay or glum mood, depending on the outcome of today's sixth game of the World Series.

The Bullets dropped their opener to Chicago 106-82 Friday night.

Knowing if you stop John Havlicek, you stop the Celtics, the Warriors did just that. Havlicek managed only six points, hitting on three of 15 from the field and missing his only two free throws.

The Warriors led by six points at the half but put the game away by running off 13 straight points to start the third period. The Celtics never caught up.

San Rafael Soccermen Retain Lead

San Rafael High School remained one point up on the Marin County Athletic League soccer parade by scoring a 6-1 triumph over host Tamalpais High School yesterday.

In other games, runnerup Drake kept pace with a 1-0 win over host Terra Linda; San Marin whitewashed visiting Marin Catholic 3-0; while Novato tipped Redwood 1-0 on the winner's field.

Adolpho Flores scored three, while Steve Bianchini, Misak Piringian and Carlos Castro each scored one for San Rafael. Tamalpais' lone score was by Jim Acker. Rolf Bell kicked one through for Drake. Ken Neibur had two San Marin goals, while Wiriya Naitree had the other. Rich Esmerin tallied for Novato.

Bruce Gossett, San Francisco 49ers' place kicker, will be guest of honor at the Monday luncheon meeting of the 49er Goal Rushers, Marin County Chapter, 12:15, San Rafael's Holiday Inn.

9-6 DISASTER

Glover Is Fired And Seals Lose

By DAVID DIETZ

OAKLAND — The California Golden Seals started out yesterday by replacing the coach, then took the Coliseum Arena ice last night and whipped home six goals, normally enough to win a National Hockey League game.

Trouble is, the Vancouver Canucks got nine tallies, crushing the debut of coach Vic Stasiuk and leaving the Seals still winless in the young season.

The damage went beyond that, however. Not only were six goals wasted, but a five-goal lead was dissipated and speedster Bobby Sheehan's three-goal hat trick went down the drain. It was, incidentally, the second hat trick in two games for California, Norm Ferguson scoring three against Philadelphia Wednesday night.

California skaters got only one hat trick all last season.

From the dumping of Fred Glover to the 9-6 debacle, the developments of yesterday and last night could be summed up in only one word: weirdsville.

First, General Manager Garry Young summoned an afternoon press conference to announce the firing of Glover, coach since 1969, and hiring of Stasiuk, 42, who coached the Philadelphia Flyers for two seasons until he himself was dumped after taking his team into the playoffs last year.

Glover, his eyes red-rimmed, was in the stands for last night's flop, exchaning farewell handshakes with fans and reporters. As he talked to well-wishers, his daughter, Nancy, leaned on her father's shoulder and cried.

"It wasn't Charlie," Glover said. That meant Charles O. Finley, owner of the Seals, hadn't wielded the ax, and that was difficult to believe in view of Finley's track record as owner of the baseball Athletics.

Glover's finger, of course, was pointed at Young, a broad-shouldered man who seldom smiles. Since training camp, it is said, Glover and Young have agreed little on the handling of the young, inexperienced team.

After the game, Stasiuk, a large man with a bulbous nose, waxed ebullient with the press as he reviewed the ghastly play of his squad.

"The crowd got on Kurt (Gary Kurt, the rookie goalie), but damn it, the players — especially the forwards — just stopped doing their job. We forgot the game is 60 minutes, not just 15."

With four minutes left in the first period, it was 5-1, Seals. The Canucks then scored six straight goals, the winning tally coming on a deflection by Andre Boudrias 34 seconds into the final period.

The goal total staggered Stasiuk, who played for 13 years with Chicago, Boston and Detroit, gaining a tough-guy reputation along the way. "That's more goals than I got in my whole career," he joked.

Canuck coach Hal Laycoe, asked whether the rag-tag play reminded him of his days as a Western League mentor said: "It sure looked like minor league hockey, didn't it?"

Revson Tops Grand Prix Qualifiers

MONTEREY (UPI) —Peter Revson of the Team McLaren will lead Can-Am drivers at Sunday's $75,000 Monterey Castrol Grand Prix over the Laguna Seca course.

Revson tore around the nine-turn, 1.9 mile course in a flashy 59.1 seconds or 115.932 mph to lead qualifiers Friday. That just missed the record of 58.8 set by Vic Elford of England last year in a unique 2J Chapparral, known as the vacuum cleaner car, which is now banned from racing.

But Elford will be in competition Sunday to challenge Revson and the powerhouse Team McLaren.

Elford was declared out of competition Thursday night after his car was demolished in a spectacular flip. But owner Roy Woods purchased a new machine and Elford was eighth in Friday's qualifying.

Elford planned to try to improve his position today.

So did England's David Hobbs, a surprise second in Friday's qualifying with a 59.45 in his Titanim-22 car.

That split the Team McClaren drivers as Denis Hulme of New Zealand settled for third with 1971 world driving king Jackie Stewart the fourth qualified.

Today sees more practice and qualifying for the three races Sunday, followed by three amateur races.

Sunday morning there will be more practice and qualifying. Then will come a $10,000 Super Vee Formula race at 12 noon, an amateur event at 1p.m. and then at 2 p.m., the big 90-lap, 171 mile race for $90,000 in prize and accessory money with $13,000 or more for the winner.

49ERS FAVORED

Bears' Speed Worries Coaches

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco 49ers are 10-point favorites to beat the Chicago Bears Sunday but to listen to head coach Dick Nolan and linebacker coach Mike Giddings you'd think it was the other way around.

"There isn't a club we've played this year that has as much speed as the Bears," said Nolan and then ticked off the names of such hay burners as Dick Gordon, Don Shy, Cecil Turner, Gale Sayers and Cyril Pinder.

"They can all fly, added Nolan, "and no question Chicago's team speed is a major concern for us."

The 49ers take a 2-2 record into the game while the Bears, playing in the tough NFC Central Division, are 3-1. The fact the Bears will be taking a healthy Sayers into the game indicates that perhaps there is an overlay in the odds.

"Chicago's running backs will pose a big problem for us," said Giddings. "They get outside in a hurry and that's always a tough assignment for the linebackers. Sayers, they say, will play and we all know about his speed. I'm also worried about Shy, who took Gale's place while he was injured. He can go as fast as Sayers."

Sayers, coming back from knee surgery, always has played well against San Francisco. He tuned up last week against New Orleans by carrying the ball eight times for 30 yards and said later he felt just fine.

"I'm ready to go, I think," he said.

The 49er defense has played well in the four games thus far. It's the offense which has Nolan worried.

"We've made too many turnovers," said the San Francisco coach. "You just can't give up the ball as many times as we have and not get burned. Fumbles are one thing but penalties have hurt us even more. We certainly don't teach our players to hold but how do you tell a man to ease up on his enthusiasm."

Last week in bowing to the Los Angeles Rams 20-13, the 49ers saw three different drives stalled because of holding penalties.

"Those penalties hurt us more than anything else," said Nolan.

Tight end Ted Kwalick caught five passes for 81 yards and one touchdown against the Rams and may be quarterback John Brodie's favorite target this Sunday. That's because the Bears like to play a zone defense, which means they'll probably have double coverage on wide receiver Gene Washington, who burned Chicago badly last year.

"If they want to put double coverage on our wide receivers," said Nolan, "we'd like to make them pay the price."

Jim Dooley, the Chicago coach, says his team is not in a class with the 49ers but promised a tough, close game. He features what he calls his $100 backfield. That includes quarterback Kent Nix, halfback Shy and fullback Jim Grabowski. Grabowski cost Chicago the $100 waiver price and the other two were picked up when dismissed by other teams.

"They accounted for all four of our touchdowns last week," said Dooley. "We hope they do as well against the 49ers."

Nix passed for two touchdowns and Shy passed for one score and ran for another against New Orleans.

Sunday's tussle is a sellout at 44,000 in Candlestick Park. The kickoff is set for 1 p.m. PDT.

DARYLE IN DOGHOUSE?

Stabler To Start In Raiders' Game

OAKLAND (UPI) — What's with the Oakland Raiders?

Has Daryle Lamonica, the man who led the Raiders to division tctles the last four years, fallen into disfavor?

It's hard to tell for sure, but it's beginning to look that way.

Lamonica, who has a leg pull, insists he will be able to play Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles, but coach John Madden says he more than likely will start young Ken Stabler at quarterback.

"I can play," says Lamonica. "There is no reason for me not to."

"There is no sense in rushing Lamonica," answers Madden and then points to the job Stabler did last Sunday after replacing Daryle in the first quarter against Denver and leading the Raiders to a 27-16 victory.

Maybe Madden also remembers the job Stabler did in a preseason game against the Eagles. He completed 17 of 27 passes for 254 yards and three touchdowns.

The Raiders have a history — like the Dodgers of Branch Rickey's time —of unloading players while they still have high market value. But to do that you have to get someone else ready.

This seems like the perfect time to give Stabler the ball, the way the Raiders view things. The Eagles are close to if not the worst team in the NFL with a 0-4 record and going nowhere in particular under a coach —Ed Khayat—in his second game.

The Raiders, on the other hand, are 3-1 and solid favorites to win the AFC West.

Second year quarterback Rick Arrington will start for the Eagles Sunday in place of veteran Pete Liske, who threw his 10th and 11th interceptions in a 13-0 loss to Minnesota last Sunday.

Besides Stabler, Raider fans once again will see Marv Hubbard and Pete Banaszak at running back with holdovers Hewritt Dixon and Charlie Smith still on the sidelines with injuries. Hubbard and Banaszak, plus rookies Don Highsmith and Clarence Davis, have helped the Raiders to the AFC rushing lead with 741 yards, an average of 185 yards per game.

"No question, our running with the ball has been impressive," says Madden. "While we were primarily a passing team before our running this year has forced the other teams to do some new things on defense."

The Raiders, if it's possible, are tougher on defense this year than last. In four games thus far the defenders have picked off 10 enemy passes. Last year at this stage they had four.

Raider fans, if they look close, may spot an old friend on the Philadelphia bench. That would be former head coach John Rauch, hired earlier in the week by Khayat to coach the Eagles quarterbacks.

Sunday's game, which will be Oakland's 22nd consecutive Coliseum sellout (54,000), is the first with Philadelphia in regular season play. In 1970 the Raiders scored a 30-19 exhibition victory and this year the Eagles won the warmup game.

Rams Temporarily Without A Coach

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The Los Angeles Rams temporarily were without their coach today as the team enplaned for Atlanta where, on Sunday, it meets the Atlanta Falcons in a National Football League contest.

Coach Tommy Prothro flew to Memphis, Tenn., early Friday after receiving word that his father, Dr. James Thompson "Doc" Prothro, had died after a lengthy illness. Coach Prothro was to remain in Memphis for today's funeral services and then rejoin his team in Atlanta in time for Sunday's game.

The Rams still were not sure whether their star defensive end, David "Deacon" Jones would be available for action against the Falcons because of an arch injury he suffered two weeks ago.

But quarterback Roman Gabriel has recovered from the concussion he suffered at San Francisco and is listed as the Rams starter against the Falcons.

Should Jones not be able to play, Jack Youngblood is available to start in his place as he did against the Forty Niners.

The meeting is the second between the Rams and the Falcons. In their first encounter Sept. 26 at the Coliseum in Los Angeles, the Rams pulled out a 20-20 tie on a last second field goal by David Ray from the 47-yard line.

Sonomans Trying For Upset

An underdog Sonoma State football team faces California State College of Hayward tonight at 8 o'clock on Santa Rosa's Bailey Field.

The East Bay aggregation ranks as one of the top three small college teams in Northern California, thus prompting Sonoma coach Carl Peterson to quip tht the locals are "out of the frying pan and into the fire."

Although the Pioneers are unbeaten in four starts while Sonoma is just 1-3, the Cossacks do have the tools to spring an upset.

Flankers Jack Trujillo and Greg Akula looked sharp in last week's 48-16 loss to the University of California of Davis, and quarterback Mike McBee showed flashes of stardom, completing half of his 22 tosses for 118 yards and two touchdowns.

However, McBee and his alternate Ernie Simon will have to go a long way in matching the skills of Pioneer field general Mike Jacinto. The frosh signal caller has hit on 10 touchdown aerials, while connecting on 40 of 83 attempts for 618 yards. He has also run for another 150 yards.

Jacinto's chief target is the acrobatic flanker Wes Jackson. The Far Western Conference decathlon champion has latched onto 17 throws for 387 yards and a score.

The Jacinto-Jackson combination will give a thorough test to Peterson's revamped secondary, which features newly converted flanker Donivan Hall at safety. Randy Marnell, Bob Sears and Paul Renfrow will also try to patch up a defensive backfield which leaked six Davis touchdown passes last week.

699 Series Tops Week's Keg Scores

Elmer Tynes rolled a 699 three-game series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Ernie Evans a 696 at Greenbrae Lanes to win the high score honors for the week in Marin County league bowling.

Pat Piver's 632 series at Country Club led the women, while Mike Blum led the juniors with a 625 at Greenbrae.

Arago Wins; Marin Second

College of Marin took second yesterday in a tri-team cross country meet at San Pablo.

West Valley of Campbell won with 28, the Tars had 30, while host Contra Costa had 79.

The Tar's Mike Arago finished first over the hilly four-mile course with a 21:37.0 clocking, some 26 seconds ahead of runnerup Jon Ahnberg of West Valley.

AT SAN RAFAEL HIGH

Terra Linda Vs. San Marin

Two former coaching colleagues will match wits when Terra Linda and San Marin high schools vie tonight at 8 o'clock on the San Rafael High School field.

Don Lucas and Bob Martin, both Terra Linda High assistants in 1964 and 1965, will pit their football minds against each other in a contest both teams need to win.

Lucas' Terra Lindans, upset in the final minute by host Novato 16-13 a week earlier, must get back on the victorious track if the squad is to retain its coveted Marin County Athletic League title.

Martin's men have not been on the long end of the scoreboard in five tries, thus both delegations are indeed pointing to this battle.

"There won't be any letdown because of last week," Lucas promised. "If anything," he continued, "my confidence is bolstered; our kids played well enough to win."

He vowed his team would "come out hitting," and so did Martin.

This is no grudge match, if only because of the friendship between the rival mentors, but each realizes the importance of the contest's outcome.

"We've always played well against Terra Linda," Martin began, "and we expect it will be another tough one this time."

Injuries and a lack of depth have forced Martin to juggle his lineup; a loss and a sprained ankle prompted Lucas to alter his starting arrays.

Lucas loses tight end Wes Emerson to an ankle sprain; Martin may forfeit the playing time of tackle Steve Fowler, depending on the condition of a damaged arm.

The lineups:

Terra Linda (Offense): SE Mike Sabel, LT Steve Rowell, LG Mark Sullivan, C Jon Loberg, RG Brian Jordan, RT Larry Madden, RE Larry Chiaroni, QB Kevin Donohoe, TB Sean Casey, FB Doug Long, FLK John Buckley. (Defense) LE Sabel, LT Loberg, MG Trygg Andersen, RT Madden, RE Wil Hamilton, LLB Jordan, RLB Steve Withers, HB Rich Nicholes, CB Jeff Leaird, S Buckley, Monster, Paul Berry.

Managers Agree: Kison's The Man

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Both World Series managers agreed on one thing today. The difference between the Orioles and the Pirates in the first five games was Bruce Kison.

"If there's been one thing that's been the pivotal point of this series," said Manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles, "It's the job Kison did in the fourth game."

That was the fourth game Wednesday night when Kison held the Orioles to one hit in 6 1-3 innings and picked up the victory that evened the series at two games a piece.

"Without that, we'd be up three to two instead of being down three to two," Weaver said. "Someone should have told him who he was pitching against."

Manager Danny Murtaugh of the Pirates, who rarely expresses surprise at anything his players do, admitted the pitching of the 21-year-old Kison had surprised him.

"To say that he didn't surprise me, that would be false," Murtaugh said. "My idea of a good long man is a guy who can come in out of the bullpen and maybe hold a team to one or two runs in the four or five or six innings he works. But that was just great, for him to come in and let them get only one hit and shut them out like he did for six innings."

Kison, who had a 10-1 record with Charleston, W.Va., of the International League before he was recalled last July 3, also picked up a victory in relief when he beat the Giants in the final game of the National League Playoffs.

"Their pitching has been better than our pitching because the kid came out of the bullpen and did a good job," Weaver said. "Before the series started, we figured they had good pitching. Our scouting report said their pitching was better than Cincinnati's was last year.

"But, and this is not to take anything away from the games (Steve) Bloss or (Nelson) Briles pitched, because you expect the starting pitchers to pitch good games, Kison is the one who had us down right now."

Murtaugh said Kison would remain in the bullpen for today's game and, Sunday, too, if a seventh game became necessary.

But Bob Moose, today's starter, will have no one rooting for him any harder than Kison. Kison is to be married Sunday night in Pittsburgh, and Moose is the best man. If the Pirates lost today and the series were prolonged, the wedding would have to be delayed.

Kison Brushed By Passing Car

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Bruce Kison, the Pittsburgh Pirates' young relief hero of the first night game in World Series history, escaped injury Friday when he was brushed by a car a few blocks from the club's hotel here.

Kison said the auto pulled out of an alley and brushed his pants, but the impact was so slight he said he did not even lift his pants to see if he was bruised. The car continued on its way, he said.

The 21-year-old righthander stopped the Orioles on one hit in 6 1-3 innings to pick up the 43 victory in Wednesday night's fourth Series game.

Silvestri To Vie In Night Drag Race

San Rafael's Ken Silvestri will race his Double AA Gas Super charged Corvette against Bill Bradford of Hayward tonight at 7 o'clock on the Vacaville Drag Strip.

Following the Bradford go, Silvestri will test Jerry and Ron Mallicoat's Plymouth Barracuda and then face a 1951 Anglia, to complete his three-race schedule inquest of the $500 first prize.

A Pass Catcher In McKay Home

BERKELEY (UPI) —USC football coach John McKay won't have to travel far to land a top pass-catching prospect for his Trojans next year. He's got one at home.

McKay's son, John Jr., snagged 10 passes for 164 yards and two first-half touchdowns Friday in sparking the USC freshmen to a 45-17 drubbing of the California frosh. Allan Carter picked up 186 yards rushing for the young Trojans, scored on a 75-yard run and fired a touchdown pass to Don Smith.

Cal quarterback Steve Bartkowski overcame a sloppy first half in which he lost four of six fumbles to lead the Cubs to 17 straight points in the third and fourth quarters.

Picture Contest In Bike Race

The race begins on Stinson Beach at 10 a.m., an hour after contestants sign in.

can passed 20 yards to Duke Bessee on an option play for the touchdown, and went ahead 7-6 after the point was kicked by Rick Klarkowski.

Opening the third period, Brown marched the Giants 80 yards in a brilliantly planned sequence, alternating backs Edralin, Connor, and Mark Asiano for 10 plays, capped on a four-yard scoring dive by Edralin. Roark, although not pleased about Brown's dull passing statistics, lauded his signal caller for moving the team. "Bob does an outstanding job calling the plays, and the team does a great job in running them."

After the kickoff, the Bulldogs gave up one of their two lost fumbles, a mistake which was promptly turned into the winning touchdown by Redwood. After moving to the six yard line on a 31-yard sweep by Connor, the junior three-sport standout blasted for another pair of yards to make it 21-7.

Enter San Rafael's fairy godmother. Duncan and compatriot Jim Grigg led the Bulldogs on a debauchery through the Giant defensive backfield, and when the smoke cleared, Mark Farrar had leaped for a three-yard score, making it 21-13. Gansloser, circling left end on a two-point conversion attempt, was halted inches short of the goal line, giving Redwood an eight point edge.

It would have seemed to have been enough, but the usually reliable Connor lost the handle on the ball on Redwood's first scrimmage play after the kickoff, and it looked like the Bulldogs had their glass slipper wedged firmly in the door.

But the steady gains netted by the big San Rafael backs on a 38-yard drive chewed up the time, and with less than a minute to go, Gansloser was forced to go to the pass, with the resulting game-clinching interception by Fulton near the goal.

Roark's players, now 2-0 in Marin County Athletic League play, "feel like they are going all the way," in their mentor's words. Roark was pleased his team escaped without injury.

'Skins, Cardinals In NFL Rematch

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The St. Louis Cardinals may be the long and the short of the Washington Redskins' winning string this season.

Washington started a four-game victory streak by beating the Cardinals in its National Football League opener and tries to make it five in a row Sunday against the same St. Louis club.

The 'Skins are four-point favorites and own a reputation of making the opposition yank its starting quarterback in all four games this season. St. Louis probably will start Jim Hart and have Pete Beathard in the bullpen.

Bill Kilmer has done remarkably well for Washington. He failed to build much of a reputation with San Francisco, fared better with New Orleans and seems to have reached his peak with the Redskins. Kilmer has been intercepted only once this season. He has thrown four touchdown strikes and ranks as the NFL's third leading passer this season.

The Cardinals defense had a field day against Atlanta last weekend as St. Louis intercepted four passes and recovered two fumbles.

In other Sunday games, Baltimore is a 10-point pick over the New York Giants, Detroit is rated 10 better than Houston, Minnesota is favored by seven over Green Bay, Cleveland is seven over Cincinnati, Oakland by 17 over Philadelphia, San Francisco 10 over Chicago, San Diego 3 over Denver, Los Angeles 3 over Atlanta, Miami 14 over New England, Dallas 14 over New Orleans and the New York Jets 4 over Buffalo.

Kansas City is picked by 10 over Pittsburgh in the Monday night game.

Baltimore, boasting the league's stingiest goal line defense with a total of 17 points given up, is out for a 4-1 record as Eastern Division leader in the American Football Conference. The Colts haven't much of a passing game, but Norm Bulaich is the AFC's No. 2 rusher with 312 yards.

Cleveland, the AFC Central Division leader, may run into difficulty against former coach Paul Brown and his Cincinnati Bengals. There's not much to choose in the clubs' offensive game, but Browns having rung up 1,328 yards to 1,293 for the Bengals. It'll be Leroy Kelly and Bo Scott leading the Browns on the ground and Bill Nelsen in the air. Cincinnati again will start rookie quarterback Ken Anderson.

Los Angeles, the NFL's top rushing team, is out to protect its Western Division lead in the National Football Conference against a higher scoring Atlanta team. The Rams pulled out a 20-20 tie with the Falcons three weeks ago on David Ray's 47-yard field goal in the final seconds.

Chicago, Detroit and Minnesota are tied for the Central Division lead with 3-1 records.

Wyoming Black Seeks Big Protest

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LARAMIE, Wyo. — The head of the University of Wyoming black student alliance says a planned demonstration against Brigham Young University during today's football game between the two schools is not "radical" enough.

"Non-violent protest is fine," Mel Hamilton said Friday. "But the extent of just sitting in the stands with black arm bands on and picketing the (Mormon) Church every Sunday of the year isn't going to have impact on the citizens."

Hamilton said he planned to turn in his resignation Monday to the black student group.

The black student alliance is demonstrating against BYU for alleged prejudice within the church of the Latter Day Saints toward Negroes.

Hamilton suggested "more radical" plans but they were rejected by BSA members. He said the protests should make "people stand up and take notice." He said he would not rule out violent protests either.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON GREB

Guess who was born today, Oct. 16, and became:

1. a U.S. Supreme Court Justice? A Yale law professor who came to Washington in 1934, he is the last remaining justice on the high court appointed by President Roosevelt: (A) William O. Douglas; (B) Frank Murphy; (C) Tom Clark.

2. a founder and Prime Minister of Israel? He first went to Palestine in 1906, helped organize the Jewish Legion under General Allenby, and became head of government when Israel achieved independence in 1948: (A) Moshe Dayan; (B) David Ben Gurion; (C) Theodor Herzl.

3. a Hollywood motion picture actress? A successful screen test at age 15 led this beauty to a film contract and starring roles opposite Tyrone Power in pictures like "The Mark of Zorro" and "Blood and Sand": (A) Rita Hayworth; (B) Linda Darnell; (C) Jennifer Jones.

4. a famous American educator and lexicographer? In 1783 this New York school teacher published a spelling book (which eventually sold more than 62 million copies) and its success led him to compile a dictionary which today still bears his name: (A) John McGraw; (B) Edwin C. Hill; (C) Noah Webster.

ANSWERS

1 — (William O. Douglas); 2 — (David Ben Gurion); 3 — (Linda Darnell); 4 — (Noah Webster).

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Mixed Pair Events Usually Produce Some Silly Bidding

You may say whatever you like about South's foolish bidding in today's hand. Any sensible player would raise diamonds enthusiastically, perhaps even to the slam level. Silly bidding of this kind often takes place in a mixed pair tournament because the male half of the partnership often tries to steal the play of the hand from the female half. I'm in no position to blow the whistle on the declarer in today's hand, but I certainly can't defend his bidding.

OPENS CLUBS

West opened the king of clubs and continued the suit, forcing South to ruff. Now, if South had been playing the hand at rubber bridge, he would have drawn just two rounds of trumps with the king and ace, after which he would run the diamonds and let the opponents take their two trumps whenever they liked. South would lose only one club and two trumps, and his game contract would be safe.

At any rate, South claimed that he would have played the hand that way at rubber bridge. It would certainly be the correct line of play, and how can we doubt the word of a gentleman who just got trapped into playing in a mixed pair event?

NEEDS ALL TRICKS

Anyway, this was trounament bridge, and South needed all the tricks he could get. So he took the king of hearts and then tried a finesse with the jack of hearts. Have a little pity for the poor fellow, because you'll need all the pity you can get when you make the same kind of play yourself.

West won with the queen of hearts and led another club, forcing South to ruff for the second time. Now South had only one trump left, and West had two. South led his last trump, hoping the two missing trumps would fall on the same trick.

A DIAMOND RUN

Then South tried to run the diamonds, but West ruffed the second diamond and led his last club. East took two club tricks, and South was down two.

"Down two at four hearts," North remarked bitterly. "I'd have had to bid eight diamonds to go down two. Maybe next time I will."

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠-Q 10 8 5
♦-10 9
♣-A 9 5 4 2.

What do you say?
ANSWER: Bid one spade.

The hand is not strong enough for a response of two clubs, but is strong enough for a response at the level of one.

Benefit Film Set At College

A film, "The World of Buckminster Fuller" will be shown at the College of Marin Oct. 21 and 22 to benefit the Switchboard of Marin.

The showings each day will be at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Olney Hall on College Avenue at the Kentfield campus, according to June Radtke, publicity chairman.

Fuller, inventor of the geodisic dome and other innovations, is interviewed in the film and his many creations are depicted.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Uncertainty Still Prevails On Market

NEW YORK (UPI)—Labor threw its support behind Phase II of President Nixon's economic program, but it didn't relieve much of the uncertainty on Wall Street. Stocks closed lower for the week, with volume moderate.

There was some suspicion the administration may have granted organized labor too many concessions to get its backing, and that this may doom Phase II to failure even before it gets off the ground.

Lucien Hooper of W. E. Hutton & Co., a Wall Street veteran of 50 years, said "Phase II rules out the possibility of a big, bull market because somebody is going to get hurt, whether it be

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Uncertainty Still Prevails On Market

labor or some of the nation's business."

"The public is cautious and skeptical because of the many loopholes in Phase II," said Bradbury K. Thurlow, vice president-research for Hoppin, Watson & Co.

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson indicated during a broadcast interview that most wage increases already agreed upon in signed labor union contracts would be allowed to go into effect when the wageprice freeze ends on Nov. 13.

The Hoppin, Watson executive observed "if you give a wage increase to a man in August, it's hard to tell another fellow in January that he isn't entitled to the same shake."

Economist Paul A. Samuelson said he doubts the phase II economic plan will be able to hold the line on wages and prices.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

The Editor's Notebook

Our Prestige College Needs Our Support

ONE DAY SOON each of us in Marin will be asked to dig into his wallet and pungle up a contribution for Dominican College.

To many this will come as a bewildering surprise.

Dominican has always been here, apparently self-supporting, perhaps even a "fat cat," we have assumed.

If we gave it a thought at all, we figured it had a faculty of nuns who are paid next to nothing, it is located on tax-free land in tax-free buildings, it is attended by the daughters of the rich who can well afford to pay high tuition and living costs, it must be generously supported by wealthy alumnae, and it must be heavily subsidized by the wealthy Catholic Church.

Unfortunately, nearly all of these assumptions are far from true.

Nuns comprise a minority of the faculty. Dominican has always provided scholarships to less fortunate young ladies (especially those from distant lands). More recently the college has begun to provide scholarships for girls of minority background. The families of a high proportion of students are far from affluent. Alumnae support doesn't come close to making up deficits, and the Catholic Church makes no direct contribution of funds to Dominican nor has it ever done so.

Dominican's projected deficit for the current academic year is $200,000.

The college has an endowment of only about $250,000. Obviously, it cannot long continue on its present course.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP of its present board of trustees and its president, Sister M. Samuel Conlon, it is changing course. New efforts are being made in new directions. The most dramatic recent change has been toward coeducation. Men as well as women students now attend Dominican.

Also, Sister Samuel has embarked on a campaign to correct false assumptions about Dominican among those of us who live closest to the college.

For seveal generations, Dominican has had a national reputation as a very fine liberal arts college for women. Like the prophet who is without honor in his native land, Dominican's outstanding reputation was largely unknown to most of us in Marin.

A year or two ago, Sister Samuel invited some leading Marinites to form a citizen advisory committee so as to begin bridging the gap between the college and the Marin community.

That committe, headed by Shane H. Brady, is now preparing to conduct the first local general appeal for assistance to Dominican.

HOW DID DOMINICAN get itself into its present predicament?

The same way Stanford University and nearly all other private institutions of higher learning in the country came to face the financial crises they presently are attempting to solve.

Stanford president Richard W. Lyman addressed the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco on this very subject only last month.

"The selective, high-quality, full-scale private university in the United States," said Lyman, "is facing a fight for survival.

"I know of no private university that can look at its financial projections for the next decade without serious forebodings as to the institution's capacity to maintain its present level and quality of educational program. . ."

"Our financial problem is born of inflation, and the fact that we are a labor-intensive industry in that savings by technological change are very difficult for us to achieve . . . Personal attention to students is (increasingly) expensive."

While Dominican has an endowment of but a quarter of a million dollars, Stanford has an endowment of a quarter billion. And still Stanford faces an even more critical crisis than does Dominican.

SHOULD WE JUST forget about high-cost private universities and colleges and leave all the educational process entirely in the hands of our tax-supported institutions?

President Lyman answered this way:

"No one today can plausibly argue that the private sector has any monopoly on excellence. Without making any claim to be ipso facto 'better,' the private sector can at least say we're different and that the difference counts for something.

"A private university can limit its size and the number of tasks it takes on more easily than a state university. It can pick and choose among the fields in which it will offer any program at all. The pressure to try to do everything is less intense and more readily resisted than that which comes from a state legislature."

In his book "Iberia," James Michener tells of his question to a Spaniard concerning his nation's system of having all education provided by the church instead of public schools.

"But, senor, " said the Spaniard, "we think the education of our youth is much too important to be left in the hands of the politicians."

The Spaniards have something there. America would be the poorer if our private colleges and universities were all to close. Marin would be much poorer if Dominican College suffers because of lack of community support.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Agrees With Younger On Angela Davis Trial

I have just finished reading the story in Monday's (Oct. 11) issue regarding Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger's comments on the Angela Davis trial.

How thoroughly I agree with him, that many people are being led to believe she (Angela) is indeed, a political prisoner, forgetting the terrible crime that was committed, and her alleged part in it.

She is in jail like any other murder suspect who is caught — and certainly there is enough evidence to legally keep her there.

She has been shown consideration beyond what she deserves, and more, I feel, then the widow of Judge Haley — her wishes are certainly not granted.

Magee is another one . . . What possible difference could it make who fired the shot that killed the judge? He'd have been killed for sure anyway.

I think it's time those of us who have something to say about this ridiculous trial, and the lengths they go to, to give criminals their every right, at our expense, to voice their opinions.

I am sick of it. Desperately sick of it. It's so disgusting, the injustice to the widow, and the every justice to the criminal.

Virginia Franklin's Teaching Defended

While attending San Rafael High School a few years back, I was fortunate enough to have been a government student under Virginia Franklin.

In her class, Mrs. Franklin covered all types of government and explained their functions to her students.

Only by being exposed to different teachings and works of government, many that differ from our own, can a young person emerge with a true and healthy knowledge of what is around him. We that studied under Mrs. Franklin did not step out of San Rafael High with violently radical minds, rather, with minds that were broadened and clear with the understanding of different people, different thoughts, and different ways of life.

It saddens me that there are people who can mistake an interested woman who cares and who is doing a good job of teaching her class, for some mad radical whose main objective is polluting our young people's minds.

I can only see ignorance on the part of these people, and worse than that, the product of their ignorance, which is fear.

Parents; have faith and trust in your children, let them prepare themselves for what awaits them.

Lucas Valley Periled By Renaissance Plan

It seems that Jack Craemer and I have a favorite national park - Lassen Volcanic National Park. I have enjoyed the column in which he described the tranquility and beauty which he found there . . .

Luckily, I can come back to my home in Upper Lucas Valley and get at least a partial relief from noise, pollution, overcrowding and commercialism. However, now I feel threatened because there is a possibility that unless sanity prevails, Lucas Valley's pastoral and residential character will be despoiled by the introduction of a crassly commercial enterprise, the Renaissance Center and Renaissance Pleasure Faire. This enterprise pretends to be educational, cultural, and recreational but it will have to expand its present commercial activities beyond the six weeks of the Pleasure Faire, into other commercial types of festivals, shops, etc.

The enterprise is headed by Mr. and Mrs. Patterson who are salaried directors of a non-profit foundation which would take 1,000 acres of taxable land off the Marin County tax rolls, and which will find it hard to survive without very strong commercial support over and above any grants and donations which it may be able to secure.

I, and other members of the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association feel that our valley is being threatened with an undesirable change which we will oppose in person and in writing in any meeting or a hearing in which the necessary zoning change or use permit applications will be argued and decided on . . .

Phase Two: Produce More, Spend Less, Boost Profits

WASHINGTON — I was putting a Phase 2 sticker in my living-room window to prove I supported the President's economic game plan, when my wife came by.

"What are you doing?" she demanded to know.

"Read it. It says, 'WE FIGHT INFLATION — WE SUPPORT THE U.S. ECONOMIC PROGRAM.'

"It means that as loyal Americans we have joined a volunteer army of wage earners, executives, bankers and consumers to fight the godless hordes of inflation."

"We have?" she asked.

"YES. DON'T YOU remember the other night the President said that we should look at his program, not as Democrats or Republicans, workers or businessmen, farmers or consumers, but as Americans? Fighting inflation is everybody's business, he told us. Well, showing this sticker is the first step."

"But I don't understand how showing a sticker will fight inflation."

"It is a warning to everyone from the milkman to the Avon lady that we're willing to lay down our lives for the President's game plan. When they come to the door we will say, 'No, thank you, we shall not contribute one dime to the spiraling forces of inflation that have been unleashed all over this land."

"I thought the President wanted us to spend money so there will be jobs and a strong economy."

"HE DOES," I said. "But at the same time he is asking us all to show restraint. He says, buy things but don't expect higher wages, because if you get a raise that means prices will have to rise, and the whole thing will be self-defeating."

"How can we spend more money if we can't get more money to spend?" My wife demanded.

"Now you're thinking like a Democrat," I said disgustedly. "We can get more money by going to the banks and borrowing it. Then we can buy things, which will perk up the economy and make it possible for factories to tool up, people to be employed and stockholders to get dividends."

"You mean stockholders are going to get dividends?"

"Of course. You don't expect stockholders to make sacrifices during a wage-price freeze, do you?"

"WHY SHOULD PEOPLE who work be frozen, but people who clip coupons be allowed to make all the profits they want to?" she asked.

"Because, my dear, the only incentive business has is profits. If you take profits away from people, they won't go out and buy stocks. Then the stock market will suffer, and that could be very bad for the country."

"Well, what am I supposed to do?"

"Increase your productivity. Instead of doing two washloads a day, do three. Instead of vacuuming one room, vacuum two. Drive the kids to nursery school four times a week instead of three."

"IS THAT GOING to lick inflation?" she wanted to know.

"Maybe yes, maybe no, but it is sure going to scare the hell out of the Japanese."

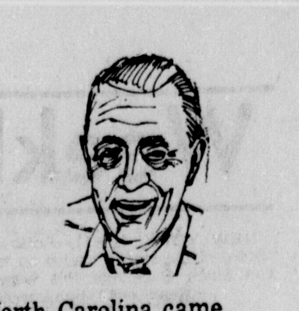
"You mean if every American woman did twice the number of chores she does now, the Japanese will be worried?"

"Right on! If they see our women are willing to make sacrifices to increase their productivity, it will have a fantastic psychological effect on the Japanese yen."

"And what are you going to do?"

"I'm going out and fight inflation in the streets, so I'll never have to fight it in my home."

MARQUIS CHILDS



Proposal To Put Sen. Byrd On Court Deeply Disturbing

WASHINGTON — The scenario of the Supreme Court of the United States as a political football is ugly and demeaning.

The report that President Nixon intends to nominate Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia to one of the vacancies on the court is profoundly disturbing to all who prize the institution as a bulwark of justice and freedom.

Byrd has none of the qualifications for a place on the highest tribunal in the land. He has had no judicial experience whatsoever. So far as the record shows he has never practiced law nor is there any indication of his admission to the bar, either in the District of Columbia or in his native West Virginia. He got his law degree through six years of part-time study at American University while serving in Congress.

The report is that the President has sent Byrd's name with five or six others to the American Bar Association for rating. The ABA has three broad categories: (1) qualified, (2) not opposed, and (3) not qualified. While one may question the propriety of asking the trade union to pass on the fitness of one of the legal profession, the system has the merit of judgment by those with expert knowledge.

BYRD'S MEMBERSHIP in the Ku Klux Klan and his service as an organizer is being equated with the late Justice Hugo L. Black's connection with the Klan. Black, as an ambitious young politician in Alabama in the 1920s, had a brief membership which he later repudiated. In the 1940s Byrd had an active role in the Klan in West Virginia with a target of Roman Catholicism at least as important as the animus toward the blacks.

The Democrats have a heavy responsibility in this matter. A majority of Senate Democrats elected Byrd as deputy leader in a contest with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts. They did this knowing his record of opposition to civil rights measures, with southern votes tipping the scale.

Now his friends in the Senate seem only too anxious to have him move to the court. On the left, Sen. George McGovern hastened to give Byrd his endorsement. Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina came in with his hurrah, adding the cynical observation that Byrd would surely be confirmed since so many senators would like his job.

THE SCENARIO has another sharper political twist Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia, a Republican, would name one of his own party to fill Byrd's seat until the election in 1972, should Byrd go to the court. This would change the Democratic majority from 55-45 to 55-46. Moore, with ambitions to run for the Senate himself next year, would have little chance to defeat Byrd, who has won the highest vote totals in the history of the state.

The knowledge of Justice Black's membership in the Ku Klux Klan came out after his nomination and confirmation by the Senate. It caused a loud outcry. He had been a senator and, while there was grumbling on the right over his lack of judicial experience and his strong liberal bent, his confirmation was never in doubt if only because of the Senate's club-like spirit. Whether membership in the Klan would have been an impediment if it had been known, no one can say.

Black went on to become one of the most distinguished justices in the history of the court, quickly overriding early doubts of his capacity. This could be true of Byrd, who has proved tireless and able as Senate whip.

BUT THE IMMEDIATE and urgent need of the court is for a nominee who can command respect. That is to say, a nominee who would not raise the dust of angry controversy as Byrd surely would, no matter what the final count in votes on his nomination. There are such men with judicial experience and broad background in the law.

The present seven-man supreme court is a sufficient reason for quickly filling the two vacancies with justices who can pull their weight in the boat and help to restore confidence in an institution battered by the political tides. Decisions of a seven-man court divided four to three could call for reargument before a full court, with a reversal in a five-to-four decision. The law's delay is grim enough without such a handicap.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

The 'Impossible Job' Again Looking For Taker

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Wanted: Top-quality, noncontroversial diplomat to take over "impossible" job. Knowledge of languages helpful. Salary $65,000 annually plus living allowance. Applicants contact United Nations.

After 10 years, Burmese diplomat U Thant is stepping down from the job which Trygve Lie, the first man to hold it, described as "the most impossible job on earth."

Thant doesn't call it impossible. He just calls it "one of the most difficult."

IN WHAT COULD have been billed as a farewell speech to newsmen assigned to coverage of the U.N. in mid-September, Thant outlined some of the reasons for difficulties attached to the job and the qualities he believed were needed in the man named to succeed him.

Neither the job nor sometimes the resolutions the secretary general is called upon to carry out are clearly defined.

Governments frequently dump problems upon the United Nations because they don't know what else to do with them.

The secretary general therefore becomes a natural scapegoat.

BECAUSE THE secretary general's most effective role frequently is the carrying out of "good offices," he should possess the following qualities:

"...My successor should be a man who will look to the future and to a global concept of the problems we all face. He should be impartial and objective without necessarily being neutral. He should be responsible to the movements and preoccupations of world public opinion, especially of young people...He must have political judgement, tact and integrity. He must have also an unassailable conviction of the importance of individual human dignity and value...He must have a sense of proportion and of humor to protect him against the bitterness of frustration and the discomfort of perennial, and sometimes unjustified, criticism..."

Thant did not say so in this speech, but the secretary general also must play a role as fund raiser.

IN A REPORT to the general assembly's budget committee early in October Thant described the U.N. "as of now, in a state of near and hopeless insolvency." It has exhausted its working capital and more than once has had trouble meeting its payroll.

It has overdue assessments of more than $65 million of which "at least $33.5 million must be regarded as uncollectable."

The assessments cover such items as peace-keeping forces in the Congo and Mideast which the Soviet Union and France, among others, refused to pay.

Next year's budget calls for expenditures of $215 million as compared to this year's $195 million and is in special doubt because of the "two China" issue now before the U.N. and the possibility Nationalist China may be expelled. Some U.S. senators have threatened a drive to ut the big U.S. contribution to the U.N. if the Nationalists lose their seat.

NOT ONLY is the U.N. close to financial bankruptcy, it is under constant attack for being bankrupt spiritually as well, unable to live up to or to enforce its own ideals.

Yet it lives on because man retains world peace as his goal and rejects any thought that he must continue to march off to war and his own destruction.

Nixon's Planned Peking Visit — A New Asian Key

Behind The News

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon's plan to visit China has generated powerful new geopolitical currents in Asia whose ultimate effects cannot be foreseen.

The trip, now scheduled for early next year, is unlikely to result in any immediate breakthrough on major issues dividing Washington and Peking.

Both the President and Communist Premier Chou Enlai envisage the pilgrimage as an exploratory operation on "normalization of relations" as well as "questions of concern to the two sides."

CHOU, IN a recent interview, said that "by contacting each other, we may be able to find out from where we should start in solving these questions."

The mere announcement of the visit has had major repercussions, however. In Asia it has forced several nations to take a hard new look at their policies.

The most spectacular impact has been in Japan. Nixon's move has virtually destroyed the political position of Premier Eisaku Sato and has greatly increased the influence of the pro-Peking wing of his Liberal Democrat Party.

Elsewhere, repercussions have been quieter but perhaps equally significant. Thailand, site of a number of large air bases used by the United States, has suggested "confidentially" to Japan that Asian nations must consider new multilateral relationships in view of the new Chinese American dialogue.

IN MALAYSIA, Premiere Tun Abdul Razak must be congratulating himself for snuggling up to Peking six months in advance of Nixon's move. His immediate reward was a deal to sell Malaysia's entire rubber and tin production for the year to China. He presumably anticipates further benefits.

Jakarta, Singapore, Vientiane, Phnom Penh, Saigon, Hanoi, Seoul and Manila are still seeking to assess the significance of the development, particularly how far Chinese-American rapprochement may go.

Nobody really knows. The sudden announcement of a Sino-American summit naturally led to intense speculation and considerable euphoria, despite official warnings by both Peking and Washington against expecting too much too soon.

Ralph N. Clough of the Brookings Institution, a veteran of 25 years diplomatic service in China, put it this way in a recent magazine article: "That Washington and Peking could agree on so improbable a visit, almost seems to justify bold and improbable predictions of what the visit may accomplish."

ALMOST BUT not quite.

The White House has clamped a tight lid on the specifics of what Nixon hopes may come out of his meeting with Chou, Chairman Mao Tse-tung and other Chinese leaders.

Those few knowledgeable officials who will talk say Nixon envisages the Peking talks as the beginning of a long process which he hopes will reduce tension and provide a stability that Asia has not enjoyed for many years.

They say most emphatically that the President does not expect the Peking consultations to solve the Vietnam conflict. The best they foresee in this respect is creation of an "atmosphere" in which the North Vietnamese might be more willing to negotiate secretly and sincerely to end the conflict.

Chou has made it abundantly clear, in his talks with American newsmen and others, that he will continue to support the stiff terms outlined in Hanoi's various "peace plans."

IN ANY EVENT, U.S. officials believe the most Chou could do would be to persuade Hanoi and the Viet Cong to word their demands in terms less humiliating to the United States. No one here seriously thinks Peking could dictate an end to the war.

The U. S. appraisal is that while Hanoi is getting 30 per cent of its war supplies from Peking, it is not going to take any orders from Chou, even if he were inclined to give them.

The forthcoming visit to Hanoi by Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny also is not expected to have any influence on the peace talks. Russia found several years ago that although it supplied about 65 per cent of Hanoi's war materiel, it could not influence policy of the North Vietnam government vis-a-vis the United States.

According to Soviet sources here, the Podgorny trip is principally to show the Kremlin's support for North Vietnam.

MOSCOW OBVIOUSLY wants to make a major show of solidarity with Hanoi at a time when that capital is worried over Peking's willingness to talk with the American "imperialists."

The Podgorny trip also is seen here as one more move in the struggle between Russia and China for dominance in the international Communist movement.

In attempting to assess the long-term effects of any rapprochement between Peking and Washington, U.S. officials see no possibility that the President's trip will result in early establishment of full diplomatic relations.

At best they anticipate some form of de facto relations at the consular level. This would facilitate business between the two without committing either to the more formal step of diplomatic recognition until the future is clearer.

IN ASSESSING developments to date, the consensus here, both in and out of government, is that the Chinese have gained more than the United States so far.

The White House believes China decided to end 20 years of bitter estrangement from the United States because of two considerations:

—Mounting fear that Russia, with whom Peking has a bitter ideological and territorial dispute, might decide on a preemptive strike by conventional bombers against China's growing nuclear weapons system. Also involved is Chinese concern over the one million sgldiers and more than 1,000 planes Russia has massed along its 5,500-mile border with China.

—Peking's concern that Japan's growing industrial power, now second only to the United States in the non-Communist world, may lead to large-scale remilitarization, including nuclear weapons. Chou's oft-expressed theory, also held by Director Herman Kahn of the Hudson Institute, is that economic supremacy naturally leads to military resurgence to protect trade interests.

Chou already has made some gains in Japan by agreeing to meet Nixon. Premier Sato, who had greatly increased trade with Nationalist Taiwan, had for years resisted pressure to increase trade with mainland China and begin negotiations on diplomatic relations.

NIXON HAD pledged full consultations with Japan before making any major shift in U.S. China policy and his Peking announcement caught Sato out on a limb. As a result Japan's liberal Democrats undoubtedly now will elect a new, pro-Peking leader.

The announcement also greased the way for United Nations approval of Peking's membership this fall. That was already in the cards, but it became sure when Nixon decided to actively promote Peking's membership while drastically toning down efforts to prevent expulsion of the Nationalists.

While Nixon's gains so far appear less substantial than Peking's, he is playing for long as well as short-term gains.

Over the short haul, Nixon has strengthened himself at home politically for the moment at least. But he is very much aware that his decision could boomerang in next year's elections if he comes home without any concrete gains.

THE PRESIDENT also gained international leverage in the sense that Washington's firm anti-Peking stand made it difficult to work closely with nations that considered the former U.S. position unrealistic and outdated.

Looking five to 10 years down the road, it is possible to envisage relative stability in Asia if the major powers with interests in the area decide it is unwise to seek individual advantage which could lead to conflict.

Doak Barnett, a well-known China scholar who always gets a respectful hearing in Washington, says in a just-published book that he believes a quadrilateral balance of power involving the United States, China, Russia and Japan already has evolved.

He thinks it may prove to be basically rather stable because "there will probably be severe limits on the extent to which any of the four powers will be able to manipulate the balance to its own advantage." Barnett thinks each of the four will seek to avoid collusion with any of the others.

IT IS ANYBODY'S guess whether such a quadrilateral balance, operating somewhat like the "stalemate of nuclear terror" which has prevented war between Russia and the West for 20 years, will prove effective.

Barnett omits from his equation two major Asian powers, possibly for good reasons. His failure to include India, with its vast manpower and nuclear know-how, may reflect the belief that India's domestic problems are so great it cannot become a real power within the foreseeable future.

He also omits Indonesia, the wealthiest country in the area in natural resources. But it cannot be considered a major factor in big power politics until it somehow manages to organize itself industrially, something which the likeable and easy-going Indonesians find difficult to do.

Aside from theories of "quadrilateral balance" and regardless of just how far the Peking-Washington thaw goes, veteran diplomats foresee certain obvious developments over the next few years.

IN THE FIRST place, most observers assume that all of Vietnam, including the south, will be united under Hanoi within a couple of years, if not earlier. This was the intent of the 1954 Geneva agreement.

President Nixon is serious about complete withdrawal from Vietnam next year, insisting only on the release of U.S. prisoners. And while continued U.S. economic aid to Saigon is considered necessary to fill U.S. commitments, there is little real confidence it will enable Saigon to survive.

If Chinese-American amity increases even slightly, Thailand is expected to order the American Air Force off her territory and return to her traditional policy of playing major powers off against each other —a policy which kept her free from either French or British colonialism.

The assumption here is that Laos, which is a collection of 14 various tribes, and Cambodia will probably be "neutralized" under whatever form of government they want.

A UNITED VIETNAM might be tempted to move on Cambodia and Laos but probably could be easily dissuaded by a relatively gentle combination of American and Chinese pressure.

Indonesia, which drove the Communists underground after the abortive 1965 coup which spelled disaster for President Sukarno, is not going to rush to improve its present rather cool relations with Peking. But if there is Chinese-American accord of a general nature, Jakarta probably will want to get on as good terms with China as she is with the United States and Russia.

Other regimes in non-Communist Asia will be under pressure to move closer to Peking to minimize the threat of violence from their indigenous Communist parties, some of which have major nuisance value but little power.

All in all, a Peking Washington rapprochement — even though limited — would set in motion forces and accommodations which could alter the Asian scene considerably.

However, the consensus in top quarters here is that it will be an Asia in which Americans can trade, travel and work without the cost of maintaining major military forces in the area.

HANDSHAKE AND A SMILE — Henry A. Kissinger, special adviser to President Nixon, and Red China's Premier Chou En-lai exchange handshakes in their historic July meeting. Kissinger embarked today to Peking to work out details on Nixon's planned visit to Red China early next year. The Nixon visit will probably mark a new phase in the geopolitical makeup of Asia.

PRINCE JUAN CARLOS

Groomed To Be The Next King Of Spain

PRINCE JUAN CARLOS
Groomed to leadership

MADRID (UPI) — General Francisco Franco's steady voice trembled with emotion, and those sitting near him said they saw tears in his eyes. It was one of the rare moments of public emotion in the life of Europe's longest ruling head of state.

"Conscious of my responsibilities before God and history," the aging ruler of 33 millin Spaniards — He will be 79 in December — told his parliament, "I have decided to propose him as my successor."

"Him" is Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon y Borbon, a tall, athletic and often melancholy looking young man who was a few months past 31 on the day in 1969 when Franco announced that he had picked him as heir to the vacant Spanish throne and as his eventual successor as chief of state.

IN MADRID'S Cortes (Parliament) building, the decision surprised no one. For 20 years, Juan Carlos had been carefully groomed for the job under the tutelage of General Franco. If Spain needed a king, Juan Carlos was the tailor-made candidate.

On Oct. 1 at a Madrid rally celebrating Franco's 35th anniversary in power, Franco scotched recent rumors that he might be considering stepping aside at any early date in favor of Juan Carlos.

"I want to once again assure you that as long as God gives me life and clarity of judgment, I will continue to hold the helm of state," he told a cheering crowd from the palace balcony.

Franco's choice of Juan Carlos is seen in Madrid as the logical one. Of the various royal families claiming the Spanish throne, Juan Carlos' Borbons have the most solid credentials.

HIS GRANDFATHER, Alfonso XIII, was the last king of Spain. He abdicated in 1931 under the revolutionary pressures buffeting the country, made a vain bid to join Franco during the Spanish civil war and died in exile in Rome during World War II.

Juan Carlos' father, Count Juan of Barcelona, was the Borbon's official pretender to the throne, but Franco ruled him out as too outspoken, too liberal and too uncompromising in his insistence that Spain be democratized quickly.

This left Juan Carlos, who was young enough to be malleable.

In his long years of being groomed for what may be the most sensitive job in the monarchy business, Juan Carlos has been converted into a top civil servant who is rooted in the traditions of the present regime, but at the same time realizes the need for far-reaching political changes.

"I am Franco's heir, but I am Spain's heir as well," he has told foreign visitors. And he has repeatedly said that he sees his future role as the head of a "representative" monarchy, with the speed of democratization depending entirely on "how fast the Spanish people themselves wish to move." He is a member of the National Movement, the official and sole party allowed in Spain, but he has come out in favor of creating various political "associations" as the first step toward a multi-party system.

SUCH STATEMENTS have not remained unnoticed among opposition circles where, at first, Juan Carlos faced indifference or outright hostility as "Franco's blue-eyed boy" and where he was sometimes referred to as "Juan Carlos the Brief," reflecting the opposition's caustic estimate of the length of his reign.

But now the opposition, except for the extreme left, appears to be adopting a position of "let's wait and see how he treats us once he becomes king."

GENERAL FRANCO
To relinquich power

World's Longest Ruling Monarch

MBABANE, Swaziland (UPI) — "Your shadow is cast on the hills. It falls across the huts. And over the waterfalls . . ."

So goes the siSwati song of praise to "The Lion of the Mighty Claw," His Majesty King Sobhuza II, who this year has ruled Swaziland for 50 years.

He is one of the few monarchs to survive the last decade of turbulent nationalism in Africa, Sobhuza rules his minination — about the size of New Jersey — of half a million people with a balanced mixture of tradition and constitutional law.

"In our kingdom, the King both leads and is led by his people," Sobhuza once said. "I am my people's mouthpiece..."

Now 72, Sobhuza is one of the most married men of the century. No one knows how many wives he has but it is recorded the King married his 50th bride in 1933. Nobody has kept count since. On the rare state occasions when the wives appear en masse the count has topped 100 but nobody can say for sure if this constitutes the complete royal household.

CUSTOM HAS overcome any squabble over the position of First Lady. Usually, the Queen Mother rules beside her son but Sobhuza's own mother is dead. Thus, the position is filled by an aunt, known as Ndlovikazi — The Great She-Elephant — who is, in effect, the traditional Chief Justice.

King Sobhuza has left Swaziland only twice. In 1922, less than a year after his coronation, he led a delegation to London to fight for the repeal of British land concessions which had taken much of the Swazis' land rights out of their hands. He fialed. But he continued fighting and despite further losses in Swaziland courts and before the Privy Council, the King has managed to reduce white ownership of land to 42 per cent.

Sobhuza still champions Swazi aspirations to win back more of their land through legal purchase. But he is on record as having no wish to alienate the 9,000 odd whites who live in his kingdom.

"IT IS CLEAR to me that both the African and the European seek protection of their rights" he said in 1960. "It is therefore necessary, not only to assure the European that he will not be ousted from Africa, but also to assure the African that he is not to be kept forever as a subject person."

Sobhuza last went overseas in 1953 to attend the coronation of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II. It is unlikely he will again leave Swaziland. He refuses to travel by air and has declined invitations from a number of states to visit them.

The world's longest still-reigning monarch keeps himself well informed on world affairs, however. He reads local and foreign newspapers avidly, sometimes staying up until 3 o'clock in the morning marking items for the attention of his officials.

The King studies all government documents and can send back for reconsideration those with which he disagrees. But under the Swazi constitution, he must eventually accept the advice of his ministers.

But the shrewdness and good humor of Sobhuza disarms his critics. In Western dress, he talks confidently at state occasions with resident diplomats and distinguished visitors. Bare chested in tribal dress and bearing a Swazi battle-axe, he stands an impressive figure before his subjects as they roar the greeting "Bayethel" (hail).

The big headache for the royal advisory body —the Swazi National Council — still remains. When Sobhuza dies, it must decide which of his sons, again nobody knows how many he has, will become king.

Until that day, the praisesinoers raise their voices to their monarch: "Sobhuza, born of the Royal Shields, Master of the Spears. You have brought your people joy and pride. ALL HAIL!.."

This Week In The World

By United Press International

President Nixon announced he will make a trip to Moscow in May to confer with Soviet leaders on "all major issues" soon after he visits Peking. The journey to the Soviet Union, the President said, would be independent of the one to China and neither "is being taken for the purpose of exploiting what differences may exist between the two countries.

"The trips are being taken for the purpose of better relations between the United States and the Soviet Union and better relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China," Nixon said.

IN ANNOUNCING his trip, the President said he repeatedly had stated from the beginning of his tenure that he felt no Summit meeting should be held until it would yield useful results. Some agreements between the two nations at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, on the use of seabeds and biological weapons and indications of progress in Berlin have led both sides to believe "there were matters on which major progress could be made," Nixon said.

Meanwhile, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger was leaving for Peking Saturday to firm up arrangements for the Nixon visit.

LEADERS OF organized labor, who at first had indicated displeasure at Phase II of President Nixon's inflation fighting plan, agreed to support the measures after the President sent a note promising that the Cost of Living Council wouldnot have veto power over the decisions of the Pay Board.

The Supreme Court, in its first working session of the new term, displayed a continuing shift away from the "activist" tendencies of the Warren Court. It refused for a second time to rule on the constitutionality of the Vietnam War, upheld laws forbidding public employees to strike and refused to temporarily stop prison officials from questioning inmates of Attica about the September riot.

President Nixon sent to the American Bar Association a list of six potential nominees for the two vacancies on the Supreme Court. The list included two women and Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a former member of the Ku Klux Klan. All four men on the list are from the South.

IN CONGRESS, the House overwhelmingly passed a bill to bar sex discrimination. Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., who blocked Senate action on a similar measure last year, said he would try to block their one too.

The 1971 Nobel Prize for Physiology and Medicine was awarded to Dr. Earl W. Sutherland Jr., a professor at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn. Sutherland, the 43rd American to win the award, was cited for "his discoveries concerning the mechanisms of the action of hormones." It was believed Sutherland's work could help research into cancer and diabetes.

Dean Acheson, a chief architect of America's foreign policy in the Cold War era and Secretary of State to President Truman, died at his home in Sandy Springs, Md. Another prominent figure who died during the week was Lt. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, the most decorated Marine in the history of the Corps.

IN THE MIDDLE East, two Egyptian MIG23s, believed piloted by Soviet aviators, came to within 90 seconds of Tel Aviv, but quickly moved off without violating Israeli air space when Israeli jets came up to meet them. Diplomatic action centered in Moscow and New York. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat met with Kremlin leaders in Moscow and got a promise of more military aid, while in New York, Secretary of State Rogers tried — apparently unsuccessfully — to bring Israel and Egypt closer together on an interim peace settlement.

JIM KING, SAN RAFAEL'S EARL of SANDWICH

has a lot in common with the old Earl of Sandwich. (For you history buffs, he lived about the time our ancestors were tossing tea in Boston Harbor.) The Earl wanted to eat lunch on the run, so he wrapped a couple of slices of English bread around some hot sliced meat and was off to the hunt. We have taken the idea of casual dining and improved on it with great A & W foods . . . hamburgers with all the fixings, tangy Root Beer and a full menu of American favorites to satisfy any appetite . . . and for a lot less than the Earl used to throw his huntside picnics!

Come in and meet America's Earl of Sandwich . . . your own A & W man. Yours is the royal family he cares about . . . and his food is fit for a king!

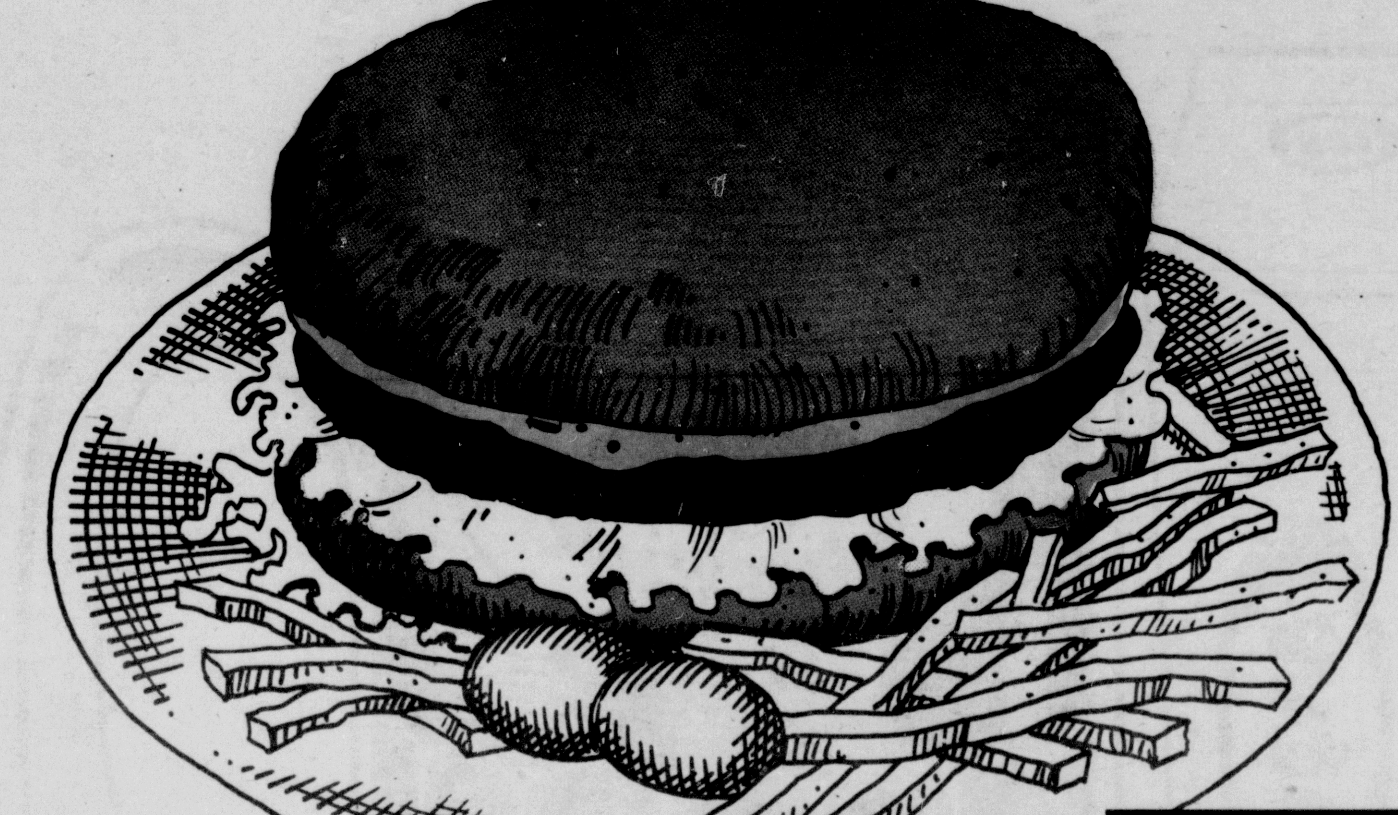
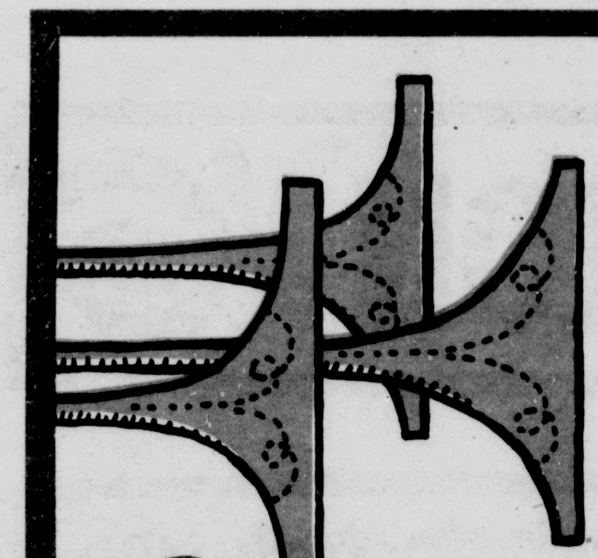
THE HISTORY OF THE HAMBURGER

When you bite into one of our luscious and juicy A & W hamburgers, you may not actually hear the far off sounds of a Bavarian Band . . . but the fact is . . . our hamburgers had their beginnings in Hamburg, Germany in the far off ages as finely minced beef, shaped into a pattie. It was first served in America to German sailors when they put into port in Seattle. Because many of the sailors were from Hamburg the pattie became known as Hamburg steak. Later it was served in a bun and known as a hamburger. A & W has added the quality and skill that is ours alone and that is why everyone likes A & W hamburgers.



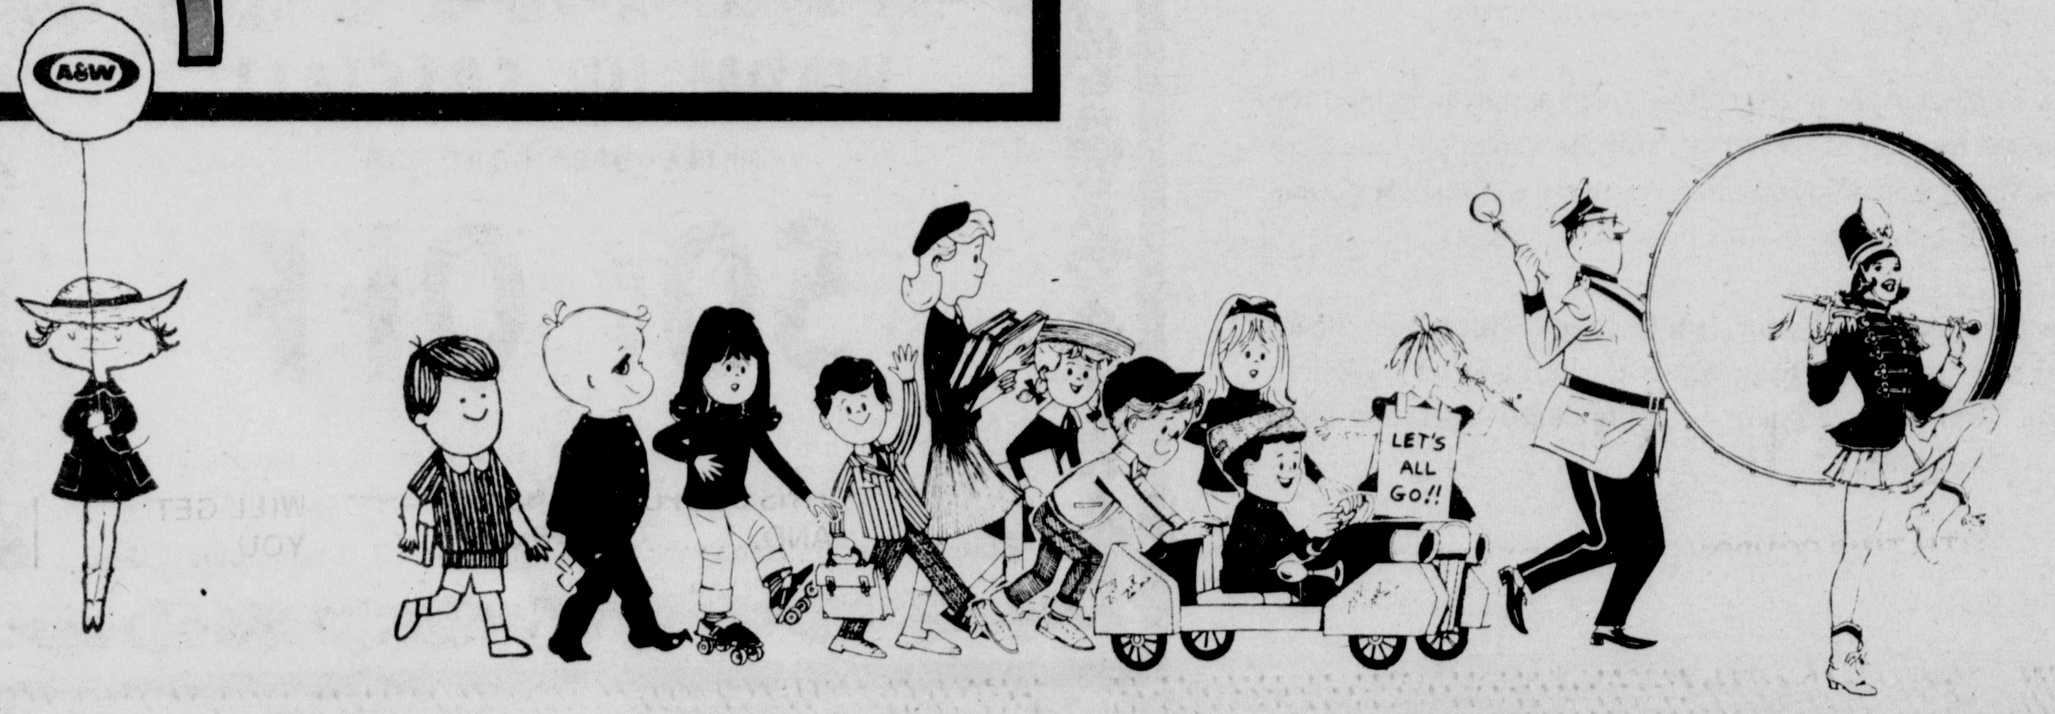
Next time you are hungry sail into our A & W for the greatest hamburger you ever ate. You'll say "Das ist Prima". We'll say "Dankechen", you'll say "Bittechen" und ve vill all be very happy ever after.



COME BLOW YOUR HORN

When you're on the go, you'll like our fast, friendly drive-in service. The food is great and the price is right. Tonight is a good time to give Mom the night off. Order it "Here" or "To Go".

So, Come Blow Your Horn, we'll understand, but it's even easier if you use our regular ordering system. If you like, you can "Ring Our Bell" too. We'll have your order waiting when you arrive.



THE LEGEND BEHIND THE HOTDOG

Barons of old Germany savored a special treat called Frankfort or Frankfurt sausage . . . A careful blending of spiced beef and pork. Years later, wrapping the sausage in a flavorful bun was an innovation of the early puritans, creating a truly American delicacy. So American in fact, that the frankfurter was first commercially served at the Polo Grounds, home of the New York Giants. It was named "Hot Dog" by T.A. Dorgan a New York Sports Cartoonist. The late President Franklin Roosevelt even served hot dogs on the White House lawn to the King and Queen of England. We just wish we could have been there to let the royal couple know how really good hot dogs can be when they are served with cold, foamy A & W Root Beer. Pity the poor puritans, No baseball, No A & W Root Beer, No Car Hops, in fact, No cars! . . . And the closest thing they had to Modern Music was Plymouth Rock. (Ugh!)

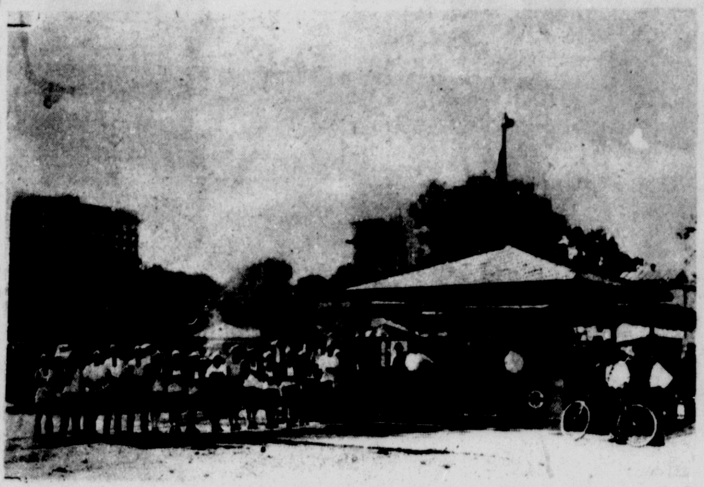
FINE FOOD - FAST SERVICE SINCE 1919



June 20, 1971, marked the 51st anniversary of A & W Root Beer. It was first sold commercially at a little stand in Lodi, California owned by the company's founder Roy W. Allen.

The internationally known trade name came about when Allen joined in partnership with an employee named Fred Wright. Thus the name A & W.

The A & W Root Beer outlet in Sacramento, which was opened in 1923, is considered to be the first "drive-in" in the United States. The Root Beer dispenser was mounted on a trailer and the ice cold beverage was served to customers in their cars.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

CBS has animated one-hour specials of three classic tales on tap. "Robin Hood" gets exposure on Nov. 14, "Treasure Island" is slated for Nov. 28 and "A Christmas Carol" will be aired Dec. 12, the latter a repeat of a Dec. 13, 1970, telecast.

Christmas anyone? NBC has Perry Como hosting a musical-variety salute to that season on Dec. 9, with Mitzi Gaynor, Art Carney and The Establishment appearing. Bing Crosby, who must have made the holiday scene at the same time as Santa Claus, will be doing his 36th Christmas show for the network on Dec. 14, starting back in the pre-video radio days.

For the 1972-73 season, ABC promises a series of hour-long programs for children that will be televised weekdays after school hours on a monthly basis. Education, not entertainment, will be stressed.

Bill Cosby's first special for CBS, to be broadcast Oct. 31, will be a half-hour combination live action and animation musical, "Aesop's Fables," with the comedian serving as storyteller Aesop.

Billy Kidd, first to win both amateur and professional world skiing titles in the same year, 1970, will be special commentator for NBC's coverage of the XI Olympic Winter Games in Sapporo, Japan, beginning Feb. 2, 1972.

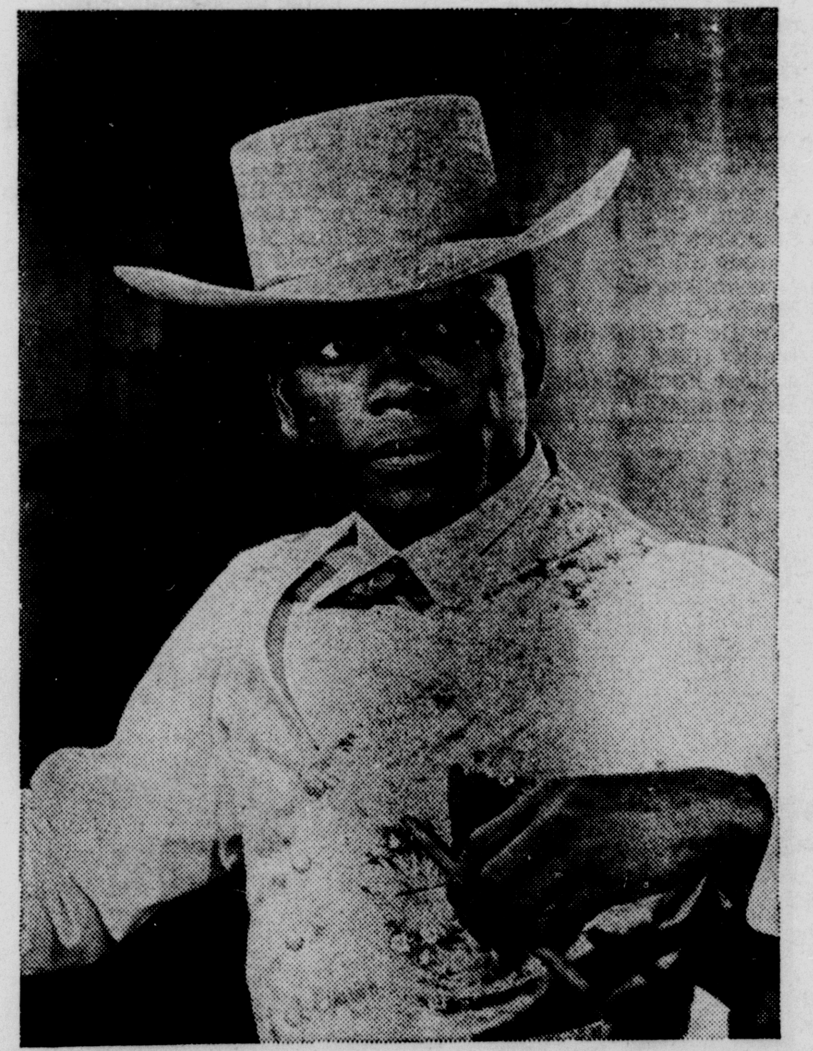
CBS will telecast finals of the Miss Teenage America contest from Fort Worth, Texas on Dec. 3.

Ray Bolger will be seen in a guest star role this season in "Nanny and the Professor."

Milton Berle and Phyllis Diller will co-star in an episode of television's "Love, American Style."

Barbara Eden, star of the defunct "I Dream of Jeanie" series, will star in the title role of "Shirley," an ABC-TV Movie of the Weekend.

BELA LUGOSI, starring as the vampire Count Dracula, tries to make David Manners, as Jonathan Harker, one of his victims in the movie version of Bram Stoker's horror classic, "Dracula," to be shown tonight at 9 o'clock on Channel 2.



SIDNEY POITIER portrays a horse wrangler in "Duel at Diablo," a Western movie to be colorcast tonight at 9 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. It is a repeat.

Jack Lord Finds Pacific Paradise

By VERNON SCOTT

HONOLULU (UPI) — Jack Lord has followed his star from the New York theater to Hollywood movies and finally what he considers paradise: a television series in Hawaii.

It is here Jack and his wife, Marie, live and work. Here they plan to spend the rest of their lives.

Lord's life style is different from any other actor in television.

HE LIVES IN twin condominium apartments a scant 60 feet from where the blue-green breakers roll up to the beach.

Each morning Jack is up and jogging before sunrise to the beat of the combers breaking out just beyond the reef.

"God picked us up and transplanted us down here," Lord says. "We're caressed by the trade winds and surrounded by exotic birds and beautiful flowers. I'll live here as long as I'm on this earth."

Lord's enthusiasm isn't blunted by the appalling demands of his work in "Hawaii Five-O" in which he plays a police detective.

DURING THE WEEK he arises at 4 a.m. to study his script and jog. Marie is up a half-hour earlier to fix his breakfast which often includes cornbread. Jack eats a longshoreman's breakfast for the long, arduous day ahead.

A limousine picks him up at 6:30 and he is driven to the first location site of the day's filming.

Because the entire show is photographed on the islands at various locations, the troupe must work from the first good sunlight until sunset.

Inasmuch as Hawaii is considered a permanent location, cast and crew work six days a week compared with the five-day week in Hollywood. Jack is home for dinner and falls into bed at 9 p.m.

CHILDLESS, THE Lords have converted one of the bedroom suites into an office where Jack (as part owner of the series) works on scripts, correspondence and other business matters relating to the show.

On Sunday, his only day off, Jack enjoys surfing to the snow white beach in front of his house.

Fortunately, the CBS series shoots only eight and a half months a year. The balance of the time Jack devotes to his avocation, photography.

He has written and illustrated a book which he describes as a love letter about Hawaii, describing it as a trip through the last Eden. He plans to have the book published later this year.

WHAT LITTLE social life the Lords enjoy is generally saved for the hiatus when they go to a few parties and entertain at home.

Marie is a gourmet cook, trained at a Cordon Bleu school in New York City which was home to the Lords for many years. Since moving to the islands, Marie has added Hawaiian specialities to her dinners.

After four years in the islands both Jack and Marie have adopted the casual, colorful clothes of the natives.

Later this year the Lords will come to Los Angeles to close their apartment, "so we won't have any reason to leave the islands in the future."

LORD PREFERS to spend his time painting landscapes, photographing flowers and birds and surfing.

"This is the life," he says. "The only life for me."

Three contestants match wits against each other daily in vying for cash and valuable merchandise prizes. And Cullen presides with quips and encouragement.

On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Please count Dick Jurgens and Woody Herman among those leaders of the big bands of yesteryear who refuse to say uncle to Father Time.

Jurgens' band produced a vibrant dance rhythm which sometimes sent less enduring couples to the sidelines. It had a lot of bounce and kept everybody happy.

Herman also painted a pretty dance scene, but Woody seemed to be able to foresee the future in musical trends and his band was, in those days, a little far out.

BOTH JURGENS and Herman have recorded new albums that are centainly worth listening to, even though the generation that is being weaned on current rock styles may find the music father tame.

"Here's That Band Again Today" by Dick Jurgens and His Orchestra (Amsterdam AM-12011) is updated in some respects, especially on such compositions of recent vintage as "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" and "Love Story." But when Jurgens goes into a lilting medley consisting of "Marie," "Them There Eyes," "Do You Ever Think of Me" and "Goody Goody," he is bound to recall fond memories from the old timers.

"Brand New" by Woody Herman (Fantasy 8414) is more in tune with the present times than the Dick Jurgens disc. Herman, a truly great clarinetist, keeps himself in the background generally and lets Mike Bloomfield enact the role of star. Herman also plays alto and soprano sax.

One of the better numbers, Ivory Joe Hunter's "I Almost Lost My Mind," allows Herman to step forth as a vocalist with some support from Tony Klatka on trumpet.

HERB ALPERT, who would have been a sensation among the big bands of the World War II years, has never turned out a bad album. Alpert's music is almost hypnotic, so it's generally not associated with dance tempos. But on "Summertime" by Herb Alpert & The Tijuana Brass (A&M SP 4314), Herb offers a lively arrangement of "Strike Up the Band" that would be ideal for dancers who once were known as jitterbugs. However, the arrangement for the title tune, "Summertime," bears absolutely no resemblance to George Gershwin's great blues number no matter how far you stretch your imagination.

Like Herb Alpert, Danny Davis has kept the spirit of the big band alive. Most of the time Danny's music is country-flavored, which is great for those who enjoy to dance in slow tempo. On "Super Country" by Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass (RCA LSP-4571) there are several good tunes.

And there is a notable version of a march evergreen, "Under the Double Eagle."

AUTUMN IS UPON US

Fly on, fly on, you south-bound birds,
Fly from the marshes, the woods, the bushes,
Limitless out of the dusk, out of the cedars and pines.
Fly on through the smoke-blue evening sky,
Wise birds, fly south.

Autumn is upon us,
Yesterday it was summer, but the ducks know.
Wise birds, fly south,
Autumn is upon us.

POINT REYES — LOUISA M. BURGER

STINSON BEACH

What man knows of tides' ebb
Where sea-rocks show darkest skirts?
Of sunsets' flight and stilled cypress
Bent in salute. These shore weathered trees
Reached out to greet moistures for green tops.
Of grey fogs horizon cover pierced by
Farallones' sharp light
Though never bright as Master Suns'
Crimson path over water to His feet.
Shore-bound to stand when His golden path
Is gone and He can not walk the sun's way
When all light is turned on grey.

Sea Captain Turned Pilot

Archibald Simenstad Now Has Ships By Thousands

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Capt. Archibald M. Simenstad of San Rafael first went to sea from his native Seattle when he dropped out of high school at the age of 15.

Now 60, he is the president of the San Francisco Bar Pilots, an historical elite of 25 former sea captains with 900 years of experience.

In his long career, Simenstad went from a green deckhand on a freighter to Yokahama to captain of a half dozen ships, ranging from a Navy attack transport in World War II to luxury passenger cruise ships in later years.

NOW, AS ONE of the pilots handling more than 8,700 ships a year through the treacherous bar outside the Golden Gate, he skippers about 340 ships a year. Only now he lives at home, no longer undertaking those long voyages at sea that were required of him when he was captain of a ship.

Returning from his first voyage, Simenstad finished high school, then shipped out again on his lifelong career.

Ambition to be the captain of a ship struck early:

"I saw the captain always had the best food. He had his own servant who, when it was foggy, brought him toast and coffee up on the bridge. I'd see him down associating with all the good-looking lady passengers and eating in the dining salon in what I considered great splendor.

HE'D GO ASHORE in every port in a limousine and all dressed up fit to kill. And sometimes he'd carry his golf clubs ashore and his boy carried the clubs out to the car.

"And, gee, I thought that was a great life."

"But," he conceded, "by the time I became captain, a lot of that was gone."

Attending natuical school in port at Seattle, and studying at sea, he got his third mate's license and became a junior officer on the President Hoover when he was 21.

SIMENSTAD entered the Navy in 1941 as a lieutenant junior grade, coming out six years later as a commander. He saw combat as captain of an attack transport at Saipan, Leyte, Lingayen Gulf and Okinawa.

He returned to American President Lines as a captain in 1947, then served as the company's port captain in San Francisco, Manila and Singapore, living abroad with his family for nearly six years.

Returning from Asia in 1954, he moved to San Rafael, settling down for the past 17 years at 67 Forbes Avenue.

SIMENSTAD and his wife, Dorothy (Teddy), were married three months before Pearl Harbor separated them temporarily for the duration of the war. They have twins, Michael, also of San Rafael, and Geraldine, of Oregon, and four grandchildren.

With evident pride, the captain said his son is second in command on a container ship running between the West Coast and Vietnam. Michael graduated from the California Maritime Academy at Vallejo, his father noted, adding it was "one of the finest schools on the West Coast."

As for proposals by state officials to close the academy, Simenstad said this would "be doing the gravest disservice to the United States and the people of California that they ever could do. It's absolutely ridiculous to close that academy."

TO ILLUSTRATE his argument, he pointed to the worldwide shortage of skippers and ship officers, a shortage reflected in rapidly rising salaries. Simenstad said he was making $16,000 a year as a captain when he became a pilot 11 years ago, and last year made about $18,500 as a pilot.

But the man who took over his ship made over $30,000 last year, "and before 1972 is finished he'll be up to $38,000."

The pilots got a 22 per cent rate hike approved last year by the state, a hike he said would have pushed his annual income to $30,000 "if it wasn't for the strike" that hit West Coast shipping in July. An additional 5 per cent rate hike has been recommended to the governor by the State Pilotage Rate Committee.

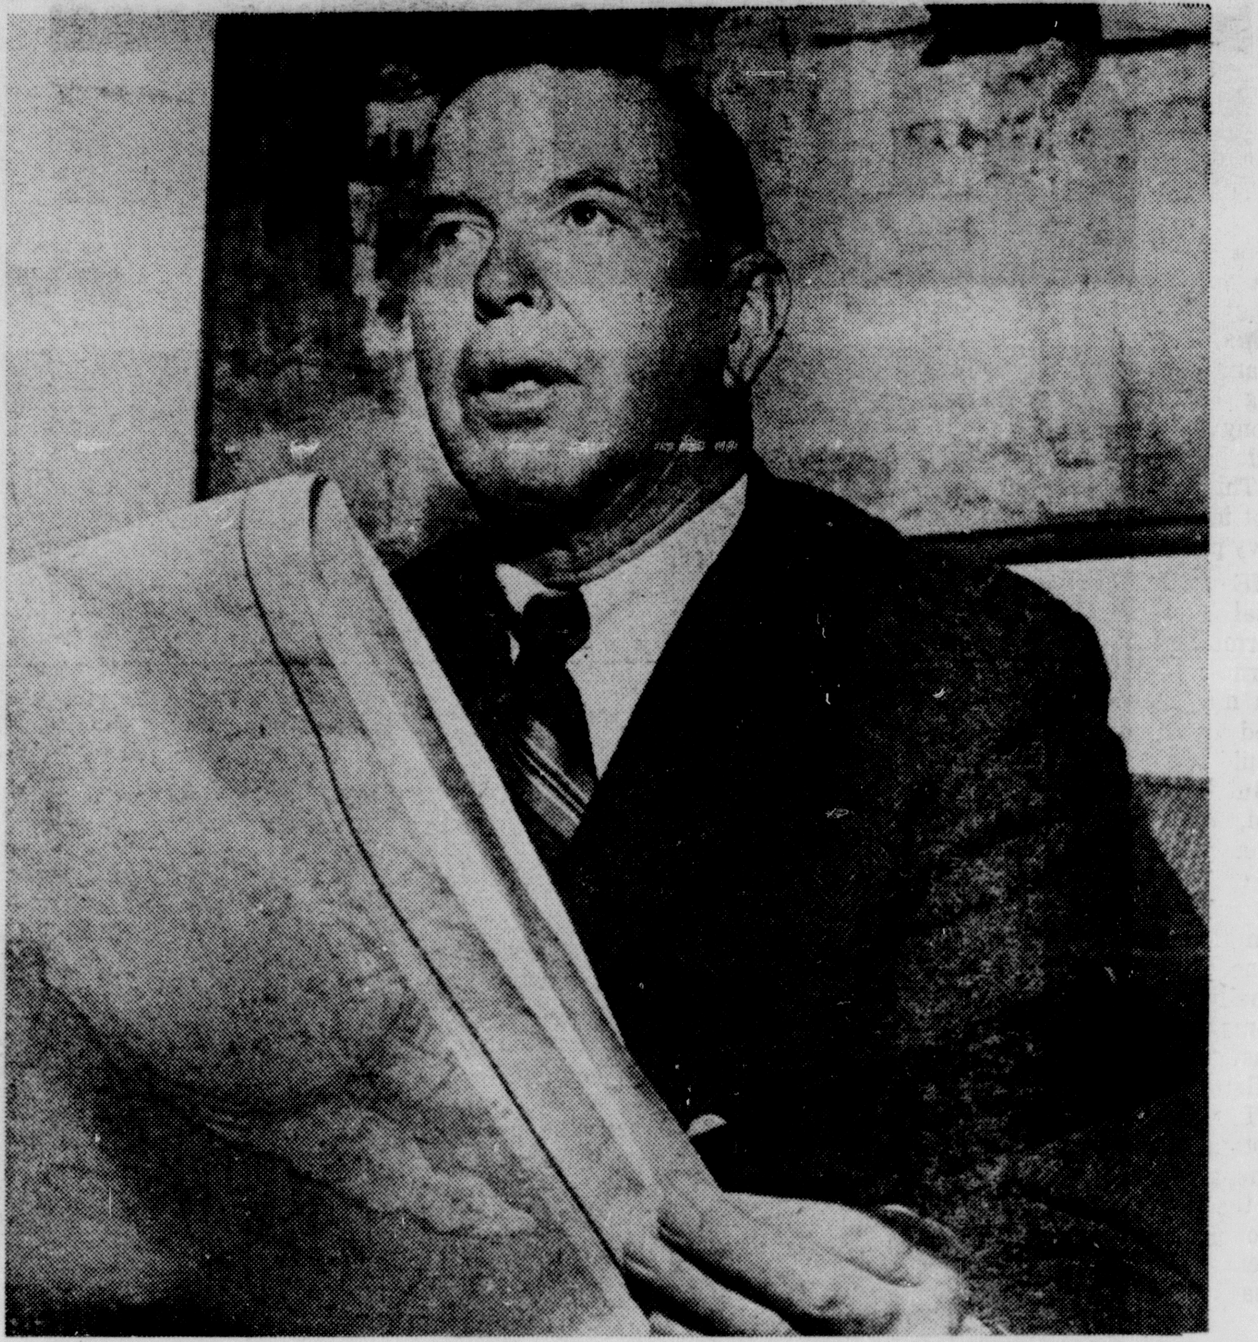
SIMENSTAD stressed that the best qualified captains no longer will be interested in being pilots unless pay keeps pace with the rest of the maritime industry.

It's not only risky and responsible work, but the hours are long. Each pilot works almost 10 hours a day three months steady, then takes a month's vacation. That works out to 90 days off a year, well below the average workingman's 102 weekend days plus vacations and holidays.

Three-quarters of the pilots' working hours are after 6 p.m. and before 8 a.m., and fog engulfs the gate an average of 1,721 hours a year — twice the average on the East Coast.

SIMENSTAD also pointed to the dangers pilots face as they leap between their small boats and the ships they pilot. The dangers are becoming "extremely difficult" as ships grow larger, he added.

"It's not like the older ships, when they had a few rungs on the ladder. Now they have tall, long ladders." Because of their size, the new giants often are unable to hold a position broadside to the wind so the pilot can use the calm side to board or debark.



CAPT. ARCHIBALD M. SIMENSTAD of San Rafael uses a chart to illustrate a point as he discusses the treacheries of the entrance to San Francisco Bay. He and a handful of other former sea captains are the bar pilots who guide almost 9,000 ships a year through the Golden Gate. (Independent-Journal photo)

"You get off an automobile ship, 10 decks high, 10 stories high, and you get on an automated ladder that's run by a crewman and he doesn't know which way he's lowering it, and you go down there and you're way down here 60-70 feet down here on the water, and if anything happened . . ."

SIMENSTAD recalled "two very hairy incidents last winter. I was getting off a high-sided Japanese automobile ship, and I walked down an accommodation ladder to about 30 feet above the water where they had a pilot's ladder hanging down the ship's side.

"The ship was rolling and the accommodation ladder would swing way out about 15 feet and come back against the side of the ship with a terrific crash. I waited until I could make a flying leap to the pilot ladder and dropped about five feet so I wouldn't be hit by the accommodation ladder, and I was able to get into the yawl to the pilot boat."

The other time he had to squeeze himself aboard a container ship through a side port "a midget would have difficulty getting through." At six feet, four inches and 215 pounds, Simenstad is not a midget.

ON THE RARE occasions when the sea is too heavy to get aboard incoming ships, "we just tell them the bar is closed, and usually they heave to outside until the weather moderates." This happened for only about 12 hours last year.

But pilots also get stuck aboard outgoing ships when the weather is too rough to transfer to the yawl. Most of the time he lands in another West Coast port.

"One pilot was on his way to Tokyo, but as the weather moderated enough off Humboldt Bay they sent a tugboat out to take him off," Simenstad said.

BUT THE MAJOR problems confronted by the pilots are inadequate navigation aids and regulations. Surprisingly, ships still are not required to have radar, even passenger ships.

Most modern ships do, but none is required. Its cost installed is only about $20,000.

Also there is no requirement that ships monitor common radio channels so they can communicate with one another.

And no one has the power to regulate ship traffic, even in crowded quarters like San Francisco Bay. It's like running an airport on a foggy night without a control tower.

THE RESULT can be a collision, such as the one between two oil tankers under the Golden Gate Bridge last January. If pilots had been aboard, he declared, "it wouldn't have happened."

Oil companies don't like the extra cost for pilots, he noted.

Simenstad brands the unregulated system as outdated. Every ship should have a working radar, monitor common radio channels and carry a pilot going through the gate, he said. And instead of merely advisory radar information through the Coast Guard, traffic should be regulated — but by pilots working with the Coast Guard, he insisted.

THE COAST Guard's Harbor Advisory Radar system now is manned by enlisted men. "I've got nothing against enlisted men," he said, "but they're not experienced."

Simenstad has other complaints and proposals for improvements. He especially scored the Coast Guard for replacing old, reliable diaphones at the gate with "far inferior" foghorns that "lack the power for directional guidance.

"You don't hear them early enough, and when you do hear them, you can't pinpoint them."

THE DISPUTED horns on the gate were installed about five years ago without consultation with the pilots, Simenstad noted. "We objected and the Coast Guard said they were temporary, but all of a sudden we find that the 'temporary' horns became the permanent horns.

"As a result, we have foghorns that actually, with the new type of ships, would make it very difficult to bring a ship into the port now without radar."

He insisted, however, that "our association with the Coast Guard is excellent. They don't always go by our recommendations, but at least now they have public hearings."

HE ALSO FAULTED the diaphone on the south tower of the Golden Gate Bridge. It should be turned more to the south so it could be heard in time to prevent navigation into the middle of the channel.

Mariners, with the notable exception of Navy captains, steer to the right of midchannel to avoid collision. Navy theory, however, assumes the middle of the channel is reserved for warships. Any miscalculation means Navy ships end up running against the traffic on the wrong side of the channel, he said.

"This is not a port to learn to pilot in," Simenstad said of the Navy practice.

HE DISCOUNTED the proposal by some that automatic alarms be installed on ships to warn of impending collision. "In most cases, if you keep a good watch on the radar, there should be no difficulty."

But one improvement, he said, that is coming is the redesign of ship bridges so that the captain will have simultaneous surveillance, control and communication, as in an airplane cockpit. Bridges traditionally still are vast elongated rooms, with the captain on a constant prowl almost certain to flatten his feet.

"I remember when I was captain, I sure walked plenty," Simenstad said. "Many times on the China coast, and going through the Straits of Malacca, when you were having rain squalls, I was up for hours. And the Sumatra Coast, and going through the Java Sea and the Mediterranean."

CAPTAINS usually have flat feet, however, by the time they get to command a ship, he said. "Usually their metatarsal arch is pretty well gone by the time theyare captain from the hours when they were the chief mate and walking those hot steel decks."

Updating archaic laws and practices, he said, has been stymied by the steamship and oil companies. "They have us boxed up. They go to our state Legislature and say, 'Let the federal government take care of it.' Yet in Washington they tell them, 'Let the state take care of it.' "

As a result, danger at sea is "increasing every day," he said. The January oil spill, he warned, was "just a taste. It could happen much more. It was just a blessing this was a minor spill."

THE OIL companies, he said, even plan to cut port costs by building offshore oil facilities in Drake's Bay. "I know they're considering it," he said, predicting the public would oppose an oil terminal off Point Reyes National Seashore.

"I think they have it all planned, but whether they can get away with it is problematical," he said.

HE ALSO suggested a buoy west of the south tower or a radar reflector on the tower "so you can figure out where the south tower is." He made the same proposal before bridge and Coast Guard officials shortly after the January collision, but nothing has been done.

Locating the north tower presents no problem on radar because it is on the Marin shoreline. The south tower, however, is well off the San Francisco shoreline.

Not surprisingly, the improvement stressed most by Simenstad was to require pilots on all ships navigating the gate. About 80 per cent use pilots, he said, the exceptions being largely oil tankers and smaller Navy ships.

PILOTAGE IS compulsory for all foreign vessels and vessels from or to a foreign port.

Most domestic traffic to and from other U.S. ports is exempt from the requirement to have a pilot.

But only the bar pilots can keep abreast of changes of the harbor floor and its peculiarities in all types of weather, swells, tides and currents, Simenstad said.

Ships are charged a minimum of $185 for a pilot, and the average fee is $250. The fee is based on the depth of a ship, a disputed system now that ships have triples in length without corresponding increases in depth. (The minimum would go to $200 under the hike submitted to the governor.

SIMENSTAD said the pilots again have been frustrated by opposition from steamship companies in their campaign to base their fees on the length and width as well as depth of the ships. This would eliminate the inequity for smaller vessels, which may carry only one-twelfth the cargo tonnage the newer "longitudinal skyscrapers" carry, the pilots argue.

Contrary to some lore about the pilots, a captain never relinquishes command of his ship to a pilot, except in the Panama Canal. The captain remains legally responsible for safe operation of his ship, even if he turns its operation over to the pilot.

The bar pilots also are pressing the state to allow them four additional pilots to cut down on the workload. "But they haven't seen fit for their own reasons to approve it," Simenstad said.

THE PILOTS, incidentally, turn about $35,000 a year into the state's general fund. In a unique arrangement, each is a partner in the business, and pilot boats, crews and other expenses are paid from the pilots' fees.

But the pilots are in the same inflationary squeeze as landlubbers. It cost $35 to put a pilot aborad a ship 17 years ago, but $127 today.

Do pilots ever run into language problems on the bridge of a foreign ship? "No, most have someone who speaks English. But if they don't, you use your hands and just watch them a little closer."

Pilot boats have been stationed 12 miles outside the Golden Gate ever since the organization was formed in 1850 by the first California Legislature. The organization long has been so exclusive that a decade may pass before death or retirement create a vacancy.

SIMENSTAD still is 11 years away from mandatory retirement, and plans to work "as long as I feel well. I just like the job, regardless of the fact it isn't as good as it used to be. I'm going to stay here and just try and improve the conditions as much as I possibly can."

Now he has the best of both worlds in many ways, he says — the sea and a home ashore he can return to at the end of the work day.

A Church Has Cause For A Celebration

Redwoods Presbyterians Can Trace A 75-Year History Of Congregation

By MIRIAM AUSTIN

As Redwoods Presbyterian Church prepares to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding, thoughts turn back to a very young Marin County.

On Rancho Corte Madera del Presidio, a mill having been erected in 1849, wood was being cut to supply the army garrison in San Francisco.

In 1886 the townsite of Larkspur was laid out with lots large enough to pasture horses and raise chickens, at prices ranging from $125 to $300.

IN 1890 THE Northwestern Pacific railway was built and the rail and ferry transportation spurred the building of summer homes by San Francisco residents.

With increasing population, the need for a church was felt in what was to become Marin's "Twin Cities" of Larkspur and Corte Madera. On Oct. 4, 1896, 36 local residents plus two San Francisco Theological Seminary students met in the Corte Madera Grammar School, which had been built in 1872, to form the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera. Alexander Bouick of San Anselmo was the first elder.

Mrs. Mary Eastman, the last living charter member, was active in the church until her death in 1957 at 97 years of age.

Mrs. Lula Horne, still a member of the church, joined as a teen-ager soon after its formation.

Mrs. Horne recalls that the new congregation met in the school for four years, then briefly in a cottage owned by Mrs. Eastman, before returning to the school until its own church building was erected.

On Nov. 30, 1902, the new church, built on a lot on Corte Madera Road donated by Will Pixley, was ready for occupancy. Rev. Charles G. Patterson preached to an audience of 26.

In 1904, because of the problem of distance in horse and buggy and "shanks' mare" times, it was decided to build a second church in Larkspur on the slope above Madrone Avenue not far from the town hall. Dr. James S. MacDonald served both places with services at different times.

Because of small attendance, this building was sold in 1912, becoming a private home, while its members rejoined with the Corte Madera congregation.

For years Belle Brown had rented ground space in Baltimore Canyon for tent campers from San Francisco each summer. When the 1906 earthquake

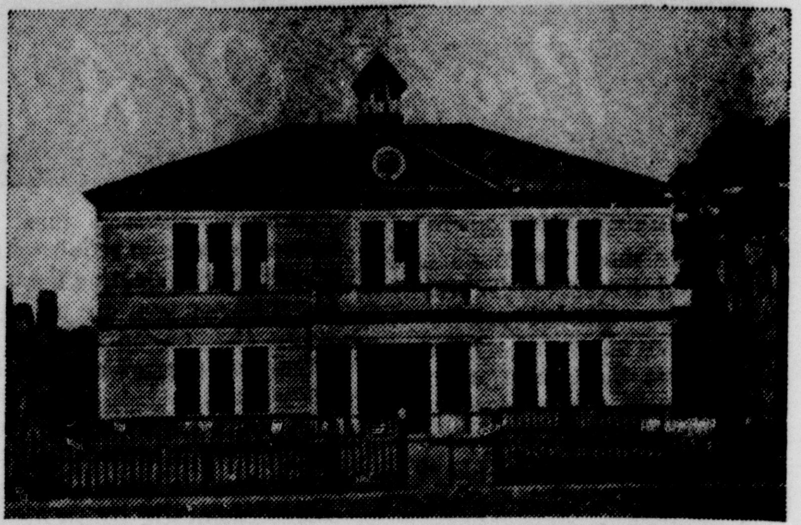
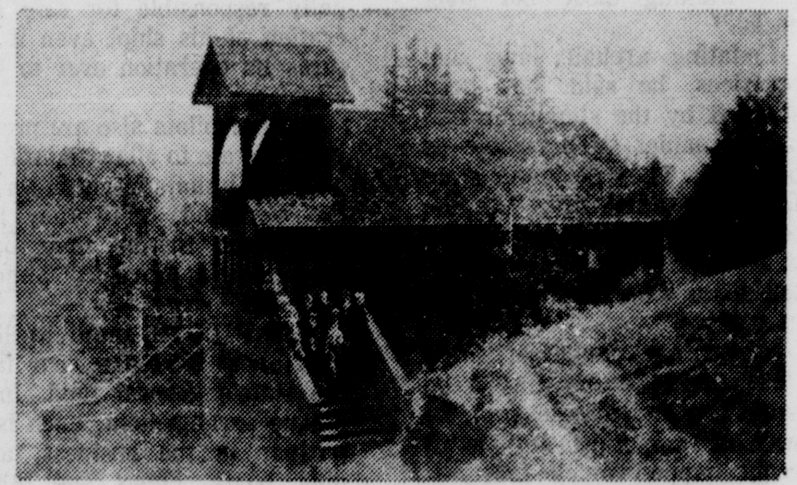
PIONEER PASTOR of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera, now the Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur, from 1904 to 1910 was Dr. James S. MacDonald. He conducted services at both the main church on Corte Madera Road in Corte Madera and the branch church above Madrone Avenue in Larkspur.

FOR MANY YEARS the women belonging to the service and social organization, the Thimble Club, were a primary source of financial support for the struggling Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera, now the Redwoods Church. Badly-needed monies were raised by a variety of activities. And when the Thimble Club built a clubhouse in 1930, it became the new home for the Presbyterian Sunday school and worship services. Later the Thimble Club building was renamed Eastman Hall and continued to serve the community well for many years.



THE CHURCH that was to become the Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur was organized Oct. 4, 1896, in the Corte Madera Grammar School shown here, when 36 residents and two seminary students met for that purpose. The earliest religious services for the new congregation were also held in the school building, built in 1872.

THIS FADED old photograph shows the church building erected in 1902 by the Corte Madera and Larkspur Presbyterians on a Corte Madera Road lot donated by Will Pixley. It was the congregations' first edifice of its own and continued in use until into the 1930s when it was sold for use as a private home.



BECAUSE OF THE difficult transportation situation of the turn-of-the-century, the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera constructed this branch church in Larkspur above Madrone Avenue in 1904. It was sold in 1912, to become a private home, and the Larkspur continent rejoined the Corte Madera worshipers.

THE THIMBLE CLUB, a social and service organization, raised money through the years for the struggling Presbyterian church. And in the 1930s built the clubhouse shown here which was used for a time by the church for its services and Sunday school. Later the clubhouse was renamed Eastman Hall, and eventually it was presented to the City of Larkspur which used it as a youth center.

Redwoods Presbyterian Church: Its History And Its Future

hit, many burned out families fled to Marin. Almost overnight Baltimore Canyon changed from a campground to a community of residences and Larkspur incorporated as a town in 1908. Nevertheless, in 1910 it was still a village with unpaved streets and white frame structures facing on dirt sidewalks or board walks.

In 1915 Larkspur was described as a "charming town of summer homes, a couple of farms, well patronized taverns, and a few San Francisco commuters." In 1916 Corte Madera incorporated with a population of 500.

Looking to the future, the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera bought land on the corner of Magnolia and Alexander Avenue in 1917 and 1922.

Organized in 1907, the Thimble Club, a social and service club, many of whose members were also members of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera, made the church its chief beneficiary. The women held bazaars, food sales, made rag rugs, gave luncheons, etc., contributing over $6,500 during some 42 years to the struggling church.

However, the women were unhappy at having no place for social functions except the church. There were no pews but the stiff, straight chairs were a problem to shift around.

In 1930, in cooperation with the trustees of the church, the women erected a clubhouse on the Magnolia Avenue church property, permitting the use of the building for Sunday school and church services.

With a social hall available, more comfortable chairs were installed in the church. These were fastened to the floor, each member buying his own for $2.

During many of the early years Mrs. Eastman and her gardener raised flowers to decorate the church.

Mrs. Lula Horne recalls how she and Mrs. Eastman regularly carried bouquets to the church on Saturday evenings to decorate for the two Sunday services.

On the completion of the Golden Gate Bridge in 1937, all of Marin County changed to a rapidly growing commuter community.

In that year, after much discussion, the church building on Corte Madera Road was sold for $750, and converted into a private residence. The trustees then took over the Thimble Club building, making it available for club meetings.

The bank loan of $2,800 on the $3,600 building had been largely repaid from rental receipts. As a tax-free church building it could no longer be rented, but the Board of National Missions and two members assumed the remaining $600 bank loan.

For the next two years the church met in the Thimble Club building but was again faced with inadequate space for Sunday School and social functions. Trying to solve some of its problems, the congregation joined forces with the Corte Madera Episcopal Church as the United Protestant Church.

After two years of joint worship, the Presbyterian group returned to the Thimble Club building until its new church was built.

Intermittently, through the years, Board of National Missions funds had been provided to supplement local funds. During the depression the small congregation found it very difficult to pay its pastor's salary of $50 a month.

In 1940, Rev. Vernon Brown became full time pastor and hopes were high that a church building would soon be a reality. However, World War II intervened and many members as well as the pastor were soon involved in shipyard and other war work and service. Reverend Brown conducted worship services and Mrs. Brown managed the Sunday School and did calling.

Through the years many seminary students served in pastoral capacities. Alan Philp did so from 1944-46; then, on his ordination, served as pastor in 1946 and 1947. During his pastorate,

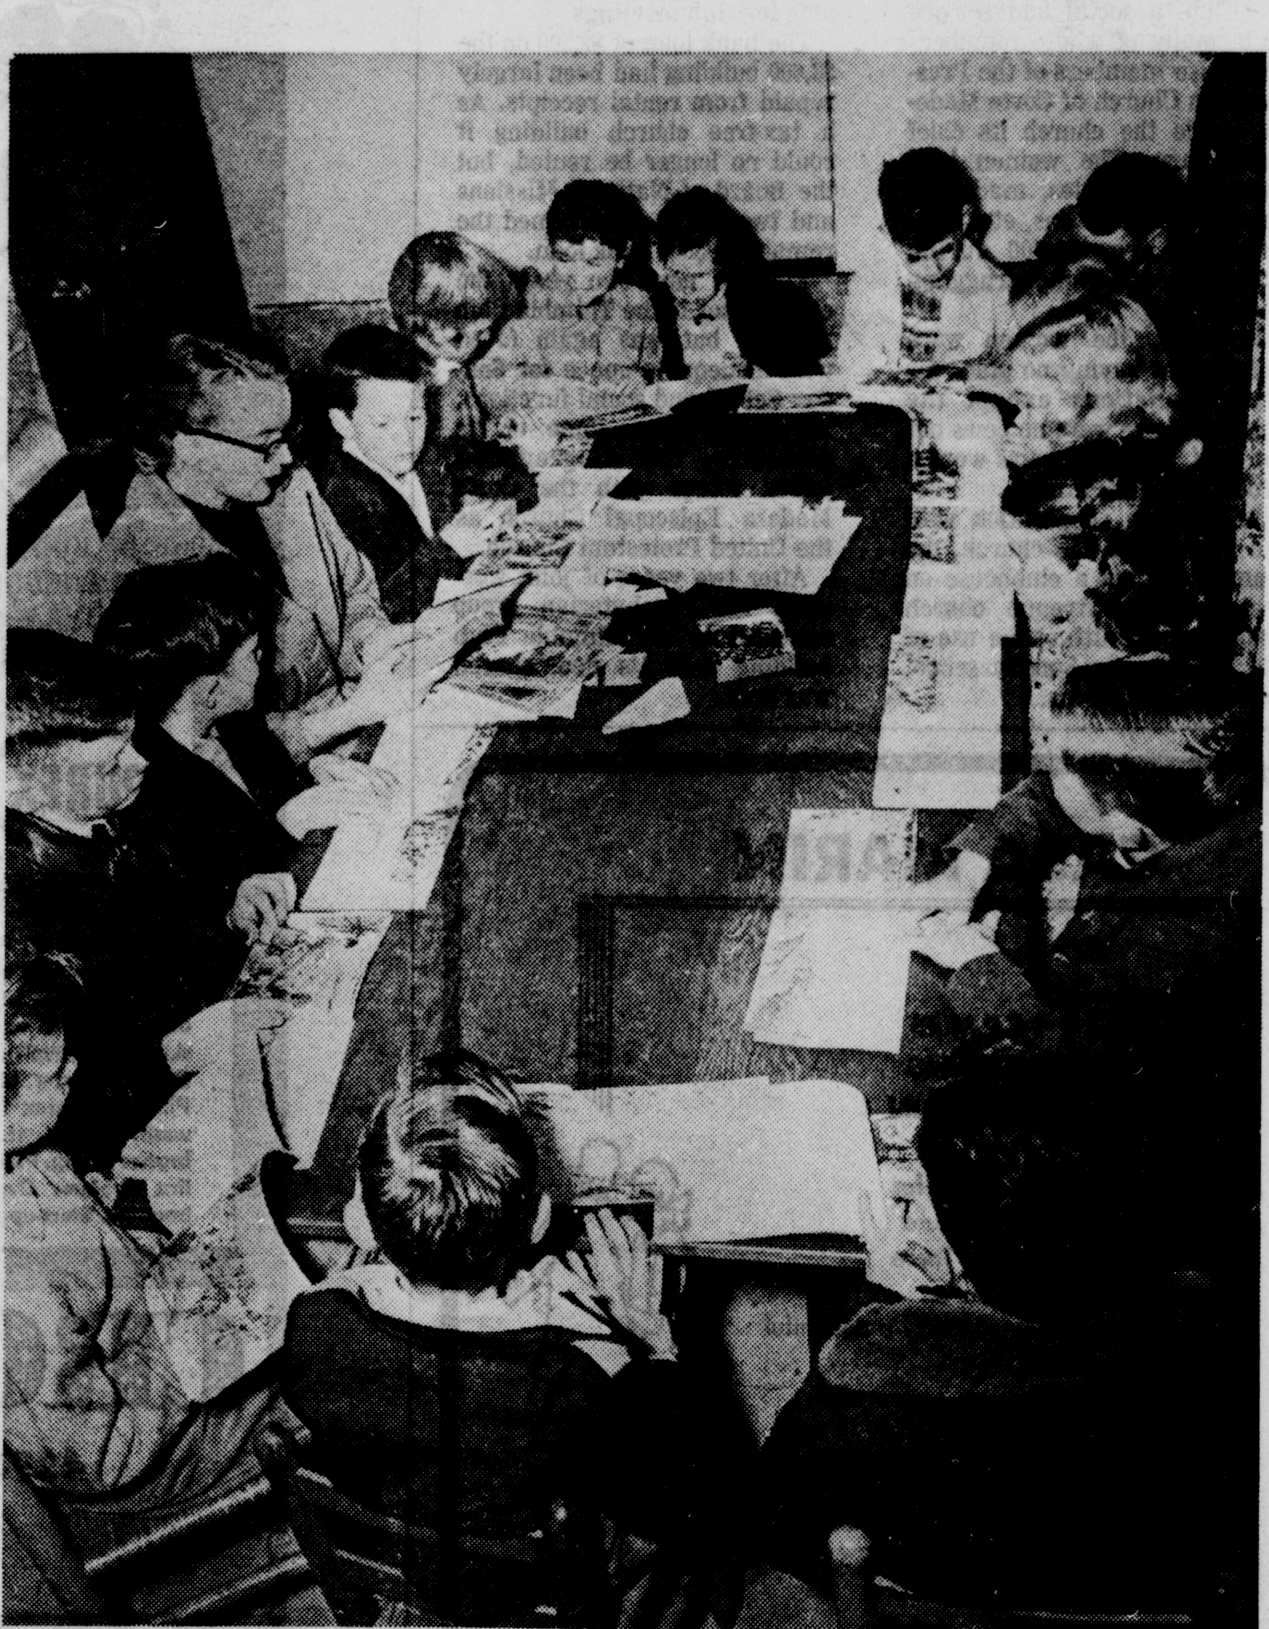
REV. ALLAN PHILP, then the pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera which was later to become the Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur, posed in 1946 with three of the senior members of his congregation. The women are, left to right, Miss Sally Daingerfield, the late Mrs. Mary Eastman and Mrs. Lula E. Horne. Mrs. Eastman died in 1957 at the age of 97, the last surviving member of the church organized in 1896. Mrs. Horne, who joined soon after the formation, is now the church's senior member and has been a source for much of its history.



THE REDWOODS Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur has always prided itself in its very active program of Christian education for its youngsters. This photograph was taken in 1956 and shows a Sunday school class of second grade boys and girls following a lesson. They are now young adults and a number of them are still active with the church. Rev. Wayne Hansen was then the pastor and the Sunday school membership stood at around the 300 figure and was growing.

History Of A Church

Redwoods Marks An Anniversary

active plans were started for the first unit of a church building although membership was only 82.

Dr. Earl W. Haney's pastorate, 1947-51, saw the membership increase to 150 with a Sunday School enrollment of 200. In 1950 the church was reincorporated in perpetuity under the name Redwoods Presbyterian Church of Corte Madera and Larkspur in recognition of the grove of redwoods beautifying its Magnolia Avenue site. The new building was dedicated in February, 1951.

At that time the Thimble Club building was officially renamed Eastman Hall.

Both communities were growing rapidly as was the church. Rev. Wayne Hansen served as pastro from 1952 to 1961 as the membership grew to 260 and the Sunday School to 350, and the church became entirely self supporting.

The second unit of the new church, an attractive sanctuary, was dedicated on June 14, 1959, with the first unit becoming known henceforth as Fellowship Hall.

To make way for the new building, the old Thimble Club was given to the City of Larkspur. It was moved across the railroad tracks on William Street and served as a youth center for several years. Finally termites and other problems got the best of it and the Larkspur Fire Department burned it in a practice session.

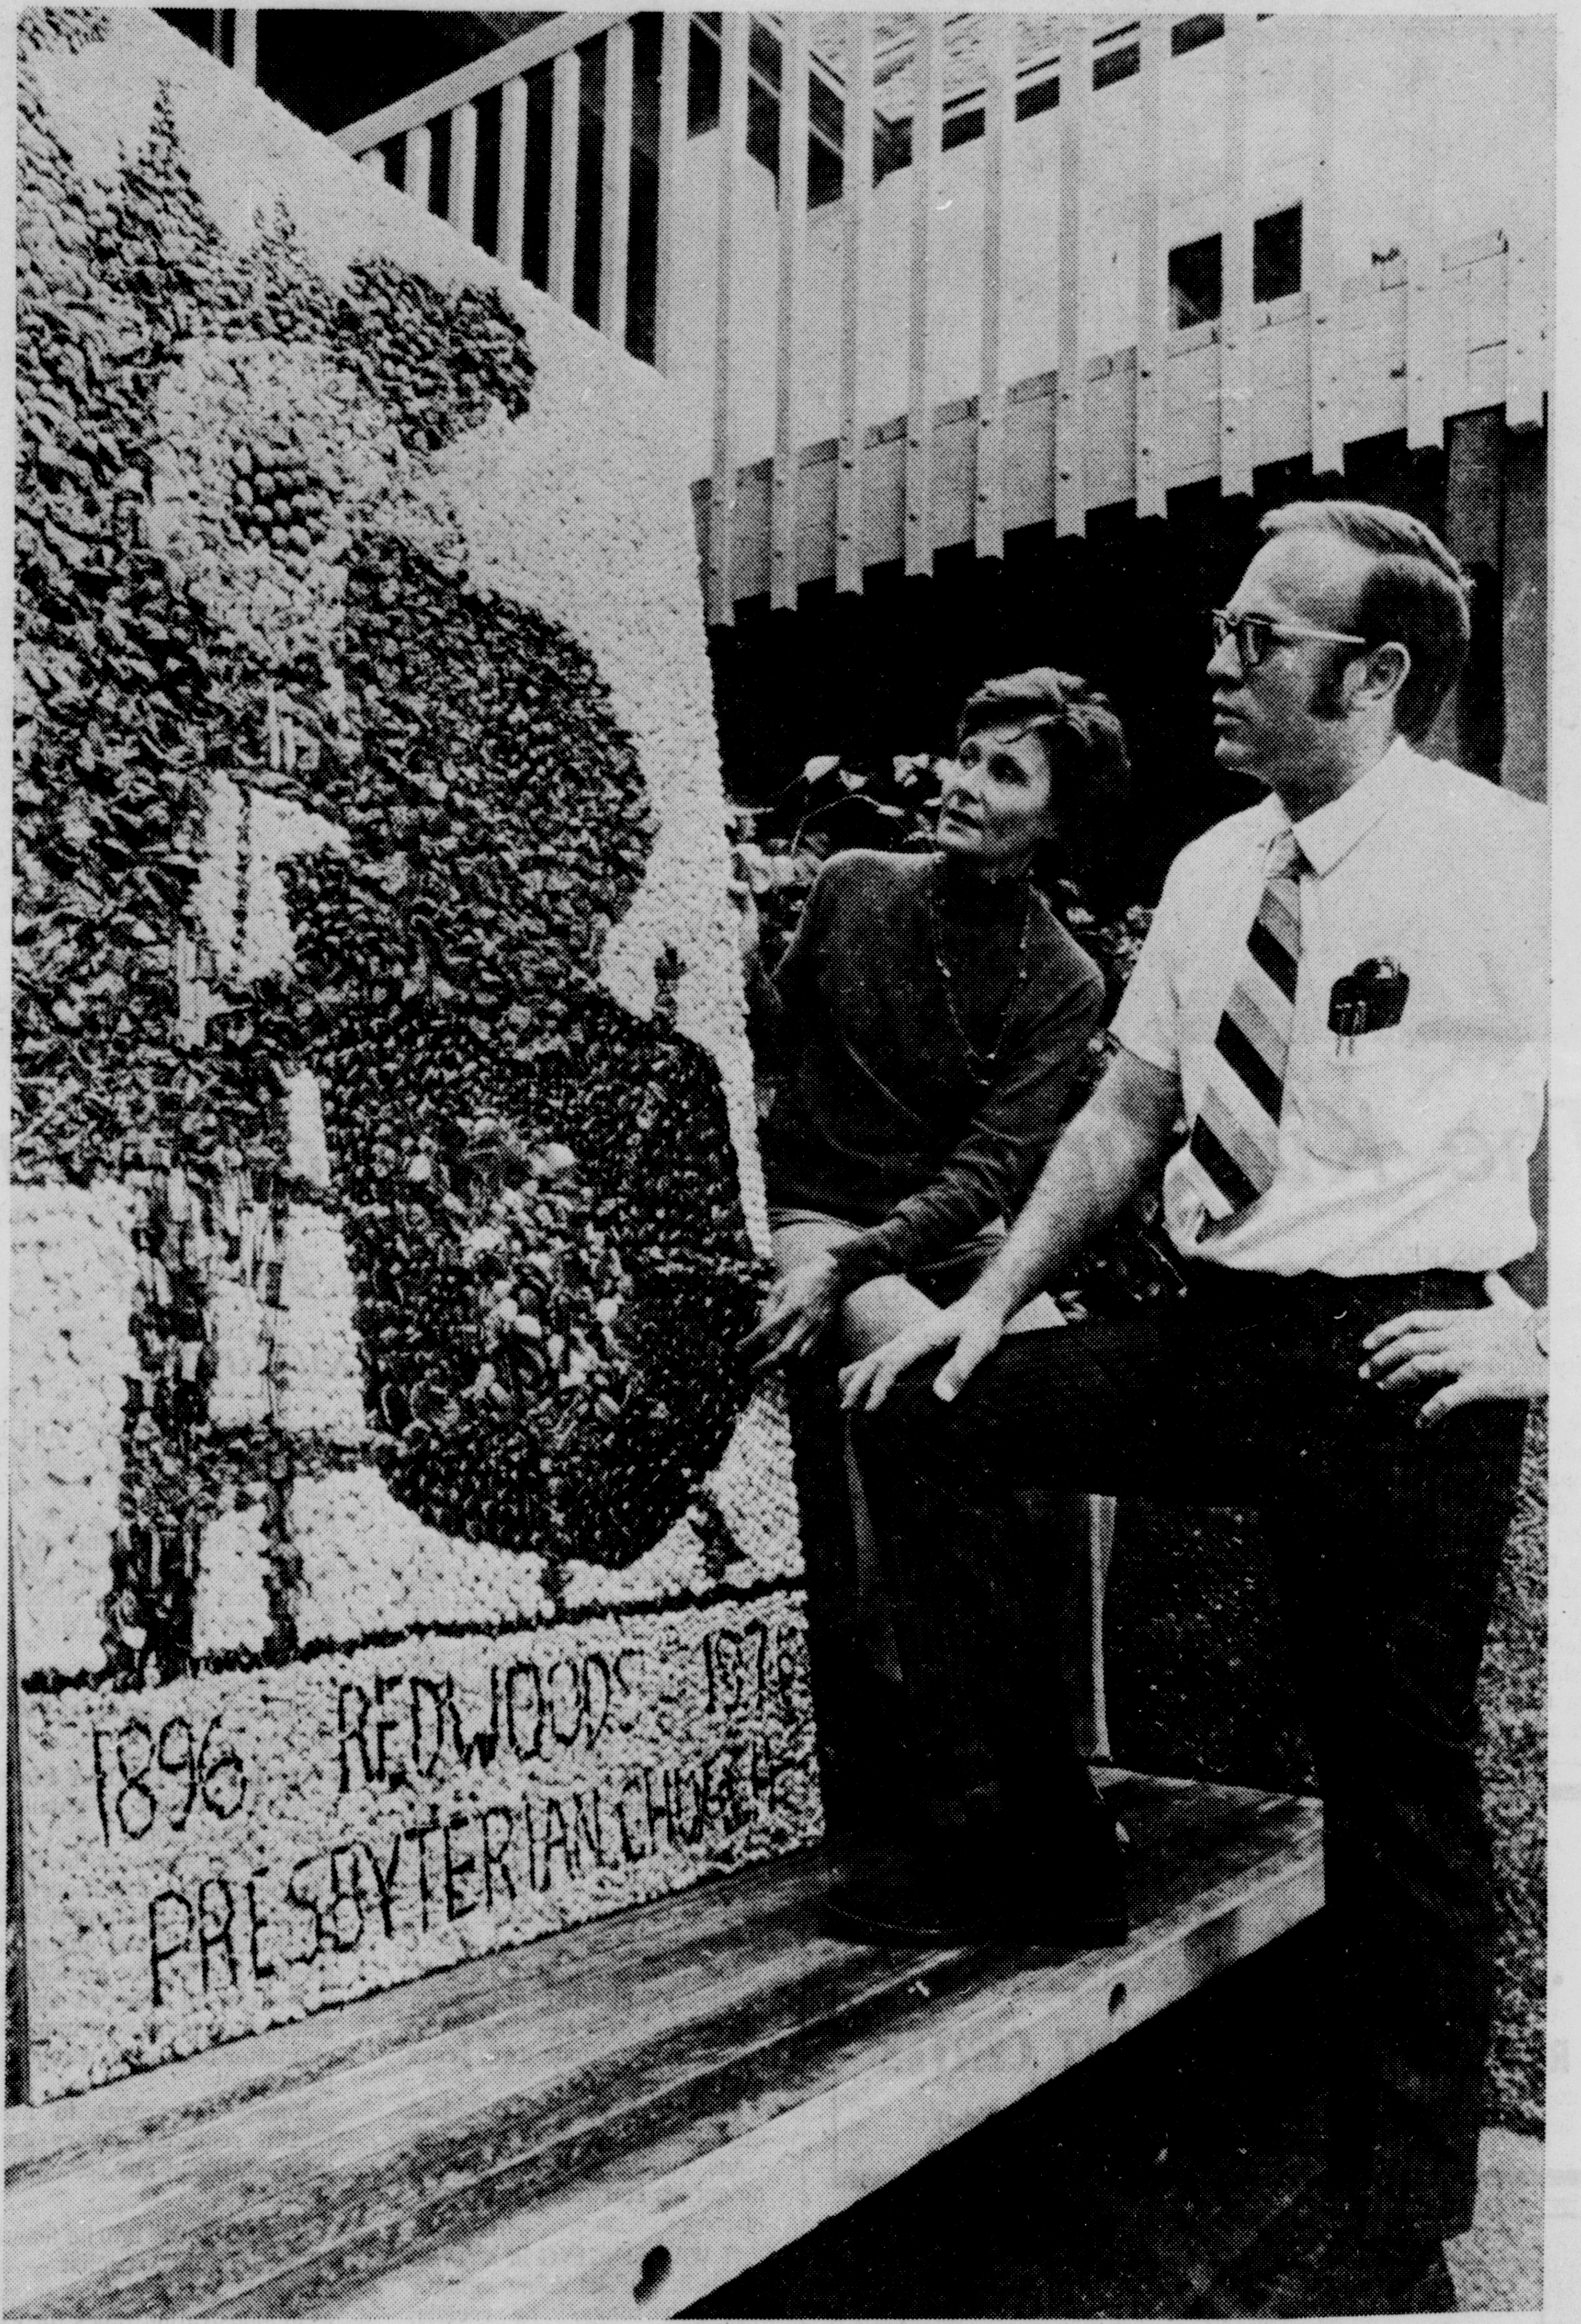
Rev. Frank Hamilton, installed on Feb. 4, 1962, served as pastor until June, 1970. Under his leadership church membership grew to [illegible]68 and the third, connecting unit, patio, and deck were added to the church in 1965.

Rev. William N. Johnson, the present pastor, was installed December 13, 1970.

Through the years a broad and varied program of worship, fellowship and service has been developed at Redwood Presbyterian for all ages from toddlers to the elderly. There are Sunday and week-day classes, discussion groups and special acitivities with a strong emphasis on youth.

The informal 9 a.m. "celebrative" service has special appeal to young people while the 11 o'clock "contemplative" service is more traditional. The coffee hour between the two services fosters friendships.

Plans for the ongoing life of the church involve a balanced program of worship, education, mission and community services. The church facilities are in almost constant use and its members participate in widely varied activities from youth groups to street ministry to hospital visiting.



THE PASTOR OF the Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Rev. William N. Thompson, admires the large mosaic created by the church school students and shown to him here by Mrs. Albert Clark, the church's director of Christian education. As designed by Guy Joy, the mosaic depicts in stone donated by congregation members the 75-year history of one of Marin's oldest churches.

In preparation for the church's 75th anniversary, the children and young people, under the direction of Mrs. Irene Clark, director of Christian education, have created a large and unique mosaic symbolizing the history of Redwoods Presbyterian Church. Members of the church have contributed small rocks from all over the world.

The mosaic was presented and unveiled Oct. 3.

On Oct. 7 the Women's Association luncheon meeting featured an historical fashion show tied in with a review of the events of the church's 75 years of history.

On Oct. 22 an Anniversary Dinner will be held at the San Francisco Theological Seminary. Several former pastors plan to be present.

An official representative of the San Francisco Theological seminary will attend, for ties between the Church and Seminary have been very close all through the years. There are always one or more seminary students in practical training for the ministry assisting at the church.

The chancel choir will present a musical sketch of the church's history. Brief speeches and an eight minute slide presentation of the "Church at Work Around the World" will complete the evening's program.

It will be a time for the membership of the little church that in its earliest years survived some hard going as it met in the schoolhouse or the Thimble Clubhouse to recollect its past, to assess its present, and to contemplate the future, hopeful that the next 75 years will be as filled with progress, service and devout dedication as has the last three-quarters of a century.

THE KINSHIP, one of the Bay Area's newest and most promising electric folk-rock groups, was at full strength when this photograph was taken. The members are, left to right, guitarist David O'Connor of Santa Cruz, guitarist David Sultzer of Santa Cruz, lead singer and co-writer Carole Musengo of San Francisco, and principal writer-singer-instrumentalist Bob Jones of Larkspur. The two guitarists join Jones and Miss Musengo only for their concert and recording appearances. The photograph is the one being used by Capitol Records to promote the Kinship's first recording, a single, featuring two of the Jones-written songs, "Love and Nothing More" and "Weep." A Kinship album is to be released next March.

The Kinship: Dedicated To Their Music

Young Group Already Has Enjoyed The Thrill Of A First Recording

By DON KEOWN

"It is nice," says young Bob Jones of Larkspur, "to live in a time when it is easy to do pretty much what one wants to do."

He acknowledges that it is a freedom that the generations of his parents and his grandparents did not enjoy.

And what Bob Jones wants to do is to immerse himself totally in his music.

He is doing that as one-half of a electric folk team called The Kinship which has just begin to taste the first fruits of success with a record out on the prestigious Capitol lable and with an increasing demand for their appearances in clubs.

Jones' partner is Carole Musengo of San Francisco, lead singer and co-writer.

SOMETIMES Jones and Miss Musengo are joined by two instrumentalists, guitarists David Sultzer and David O'Connor, both of Santa Cruz, to complete the group.

"We haven't made a whole lot of money out of our music as yet," Jones admits.

And he adds: "I have never met anyone in the business who was making a comfortable living. They are either stone broke, or making loads of money. Right now we are in the first category, and hoping to move into the second."

THEN HE smiles. "Sure, it's pretty tough getting by, full-time in music. And I could wake up at 90 years old, a songwriter still trying to make it. But then, I will be able to look back and say that I enjoyed what I did with my life."

Jones, now 23, was born in Southern California, but moved to Oakland as a 15-year-old. He came to Larkspur two years ago.

Folk and rock music had intrigued Jones since his early teens, but it was in Eureka that he got his start as a professional.

"I WAS SINGING in a coffee house in Eureka doing some of my own songs," he recalls, "when Gary Hart heard me. He liked what he heard, and he became my manager. And he sent me down to Los Angeles to try to get some of my songs published."

In Los Angeles, Jones ripped the yellow pages listing music publishers out of a telephone book and began making the rounds.

"It was a hot spring day, and I was on foot," he says. "But I kept at it.

"AND EVENTUALLY I found some one willing to publish a couple of my songs.

"I thought that was the end of the world — an incredible thing. It was the biggest event in my life until we made our record. And I came back to San Francisco all charged up and determined to make it in music, no matter how much it required from me."

Young Jones was to learn that it required a very great deal — without any certainty of success.

IN APRIL OF 1970 he teamed up with a girl vocalist — not Carole — and they did a session of demonstration tapes for Fillmore Records in San Francisco.

"And we were extremely terrible," says Jones frankly. "They liked the music, but they didn't like the vocalizing."

So Jones and his first partner separated. "It was a congenial parting," he says. "She wanted to sing blues instead of folk rock anyway."

HOWEVER, their efforts had attracted the attention of Billy Delbert of Lettermen Inc., the production company of the singing Lettermen. And it was through the Lettermen affiliation with Capitol Records that the way was to be paved for a Kinship record almost a year later.

Heartened by Delbert's interest, Jones began looking for another partner and found her in Carole Musengo 25, through an advertisement in the Berkeley Musicians' Switchboard.

"We went up to her apartment and auditioned her in a couple of songs," Jones says. "And we were just stunned at what we heard.

"HER VOICE is soft, and yet with a kind of easy bite to it. It sort of sneaks up on you."

Carole's distinctive voice determined the course of the new partnership — away from hard rock music in the direction of folk rock.

Jones' new partner was from Chicago where in the mid-1960s, before the "hard electric" craze, she had been very much a part of the folk singing scene.

"BOTH OF us brought to our new arrangement a great deal more experience and professionalism than would have been possible if we had been raw beginners," Jones comments. That professionalism has shown itself in a devotion to their music and a willingness to work long hours in a reach for long

BOB JONES, left, and Carole Musengo, the principal members of The Kinship electric folk group, rehearse their music in Jones' apartment in Larkspur. The two are preparing for college and coffee house concert dates in the Eureka area next month, after which they will return to Southern California to complete an album for Capitol for which some of the music has already been recorded. The two feature songs they have written themselves.

LISTENING intently to a playback of their first single record, "Love and Nothing More," by The Kinship is Bob Jones, member and spokesman for the musical group. He seems to like what he is hearing. And he hopes the first record is only the forerunner of many yet to come for the group.

Bob Jones Has Made His Career Choice

range, perhaps very distant goals.

Carole and Bob formed their new duo in May of 1970, and in July the name — the Kinship — was selected.

"We wanted something that had the connotation of a family and its close ties," Joney says. "And yet we didn't want to use the word 'family' itself because we felt it had been overused by other groups.

"CAROLE picked up a sociology book from the floor, and there at the top of a page was the chapter heading — 'Kinship.' We all liked it. So we kept it."

In September of 1970 the Lettermen were appearing at San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel, and so Delbert arranged for a Kinship audition one afternoon before Tony Butala of the Lettermen.

"How many groups at our stage can they have played and sung in the Venetian Room?" Jones asks with a smile. "But that is where we auditioned, a little awed by all those murals."

BUTALA liked what was played and sung, and he agreed that Lettermen Inc. would act as the Kinship's production company.

Shortly thereafter Bob, Carole and guitarists Sultzer and O'Connor began recording at the Mercury studios on Mission in San Francisco, but that proved a brief arrangement. Attorneys were negotiating contracts, and when hang-ups developed, the recording was suspended until these could be ironed out.

"It seemed to be taking forever," says Jones, "and all we wanted to do was to get on with the recording, on almost any terms."

FINALLY, last November, the Kiship signed formally with the Lettermen. In January of this year they did a demonstration session recording some of their songs for distribution to other artists, hopeful that these musicians would be tempted into using them.

Then in April, in Los Angeles, the Kinship with guitarists present made their own first record with the backing of studio musicians.

"We put up at Howard's Weekly Apartments while we were down there," relates Jones, "and we did four sides."

ONLY TWO of those sides have been issued to date on a single record. Both are Jones' written — "Love and Nothing More," dedicated to the Larkspur Police Department, and "Weep."

There is no sarcasm or ridicule implied in the dedication of "Love and Nothing More" to the Larkspur police, Jones stresses.

The song begins with the narrator uptight because he is driving and he sights in his rear mirror a police car — "black and white intimidator" — coming up from behind him "and it's pushin' me to insane."

BUT JONES resists the "race-on, run away" impulse. And the driver in the police car smiles, tips his hat and pulls on past "against the evening rain."

"I got the idea for the song and the dedication from the feelings I actually experienced when I sighted a Larkspur police car in my rear view mirror," Jones explains.

He laughs as he tells of a more recent incident in which a Larkspur police officer called at his aprtment to serve an old traffic warrant. "He wanted to know if he might not be the one mentioned in my song," says Jones. "He was very understanding, so that I have a very good impression of the Larkspur police. I paid the traffic fine, and all is well."

BOB JONES says his songs are about everything and everyone. Often, he adds, the are topical, "because you can't help but be effected and write about the things that are going on. Love can be as topical as protest or revolt."

And a Jones' song is always rich imagery.

His "Her Lighthouse/Their Fire" (Kinship Music, ASCAP) begins:

WILD BIRDS like sailors, ride the tossing weather vanes,/ Kidnapped by the changes and the rain./Who knows how long the sky continues south against the sun,/When the frozen storms will finally come.

"I don't know why when the darkness falls,/It hits so heavy and so fast./And I don't know why when the morning falls,/ Every dream seems like the last."

The Kinship has played the Troubador in San Francisco, the Lion's Share in San Anselmo "and some free Marin County high school and benefits gigs." Next month they will travel north to Eureka for some college and club dates.

"BUT MOST of this year is being spent on getting our material together and on arranging for our album," Jones says.

The album, to consist entirely of their own songs, is to be finished in December and to be released in March of 1972.

After that will probably come a road tour in the spring to promote the album.

"But Carole and I are very much interested in playing the smaller clubs," Jones says. "We like the intimate atmosphere that is crucial to our music."

BOTH PLAY the guitar, but they leave the instruments largely to others when they are performing. "Carole especially likes to concentrate upon her singing."

He describes her as "a small girl, brown-haired, blue-eyed, the quiet and mellow type, with the most soulful voice imaginable."

Her mother, Jones reports, lives in Chicago and is thrilled by her daughter's new career. "She is the Bohemian, artistic type herself, " he says, "and she is hard at work pushing our record in the Chicago area."

JONES' parents live at Grass Valley. "They were not too pleased when I quit San Francisco City College where I was studying psychology to go into music full-time," Bob admits. "But they have always encouraged me to do what I want to do. And now they are quite excited about our plans."

Jones was wearing his dark hair long before he took the plunge into professional music "because I consider it becoming."

It doesn't seem either to help or hinder him as a musician, he says. "I think television has done a lot to break down the antagonism of even the older people toward long hair. People are able now to make distinctions between the long-hair types."

JONES SAYS he has involved himself in some social movements — "the Mexican-American farm workers had my total sympathy and support" — , but adds: "I try to pick and choose my causes. I don't just jump in blindly. I don't like to be used."

Jones adds that he has no regrets over his decision to drop out of college and abandon his psychology studies.

"I'm doing exactly what I want to do, " he says. "And we are full of hope."

And he has only laughter for those who regard the long-haired rock musician as an idler.

"BELIEVE ME," he says, "it is hard work. It is no hobby with us. It is a profession. And we are going after it with everything we've got.

"If we don't make it, it won't be because we didn't try."

But the signs are that Marin County, whose sunshine and country atmosphere have already spawned some of the country's biggest names in the pop music field, will soon be laying claim to yet another successful group — a group that goes by the friendly name of The Kinship.

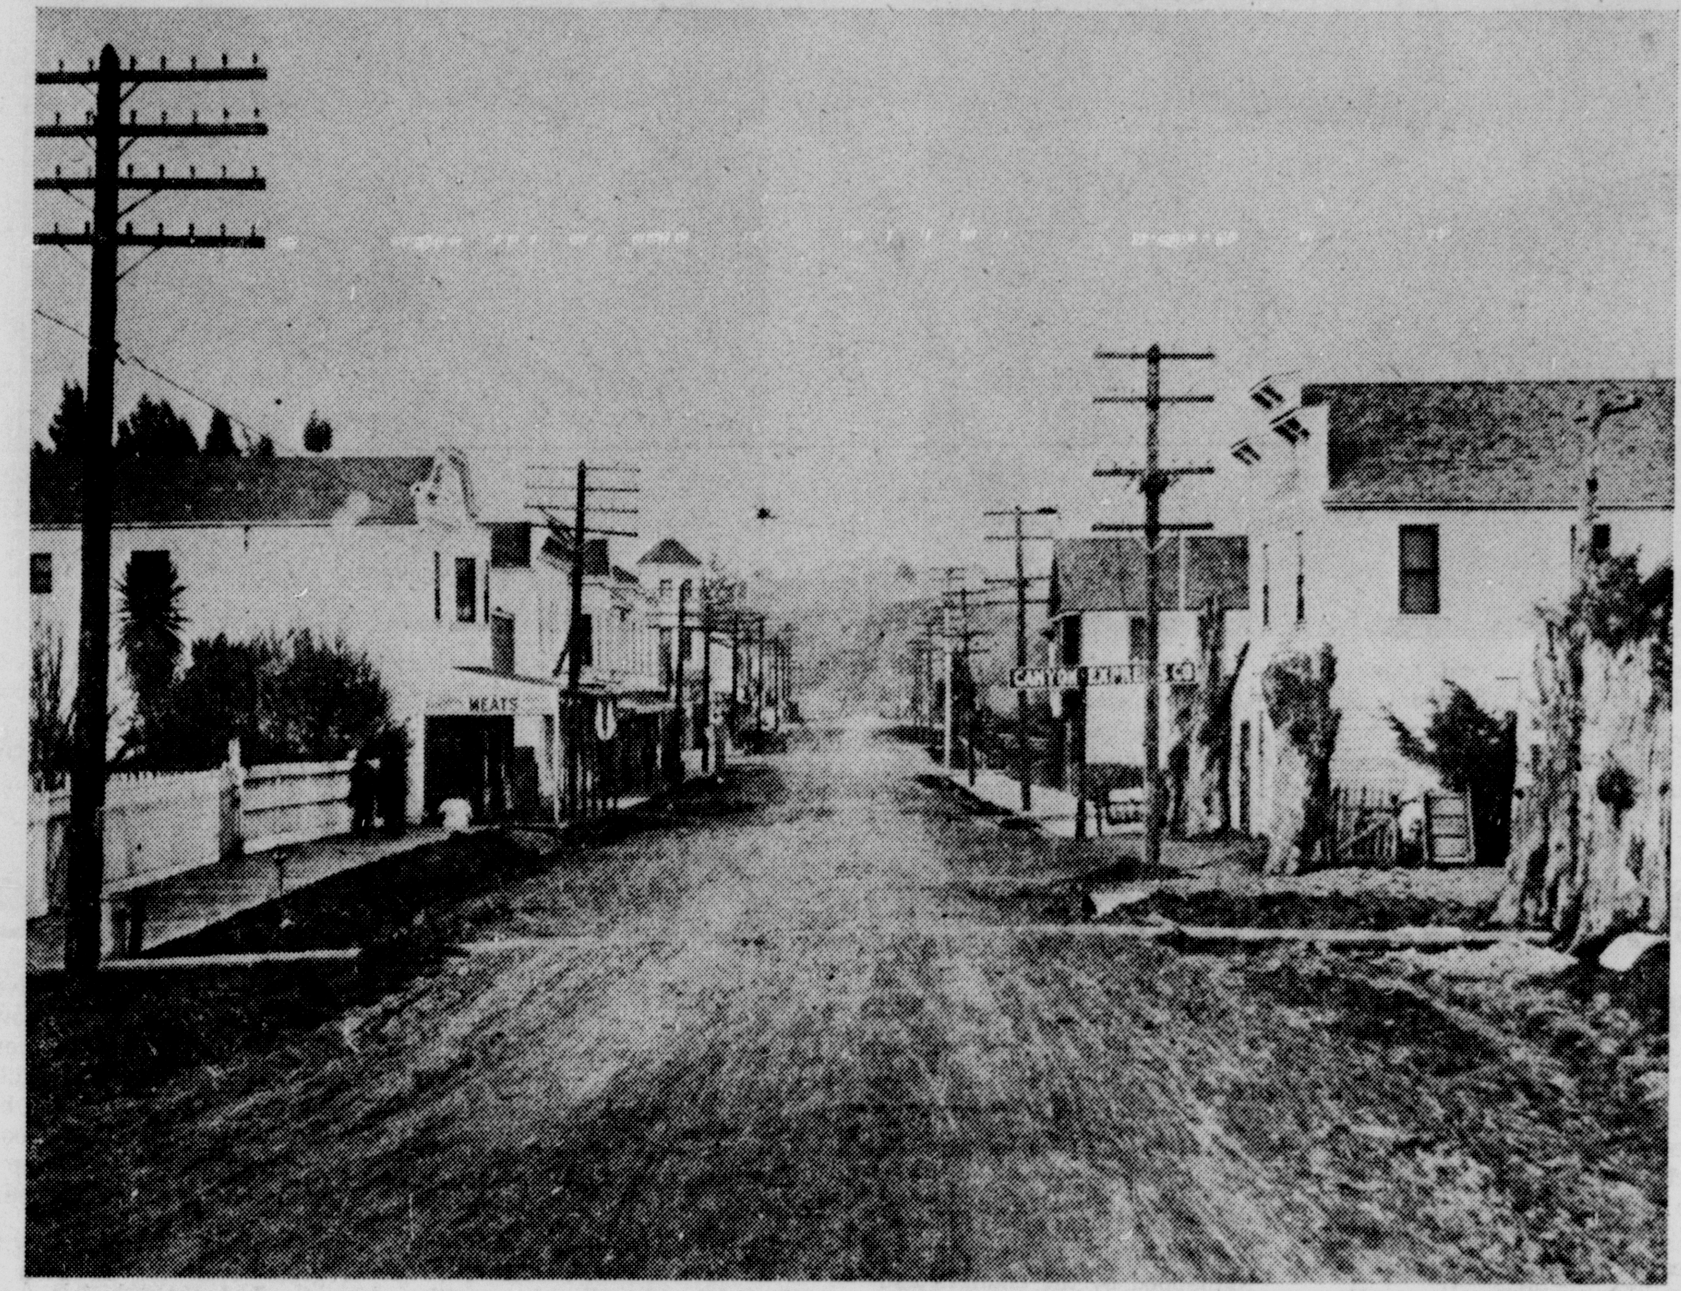
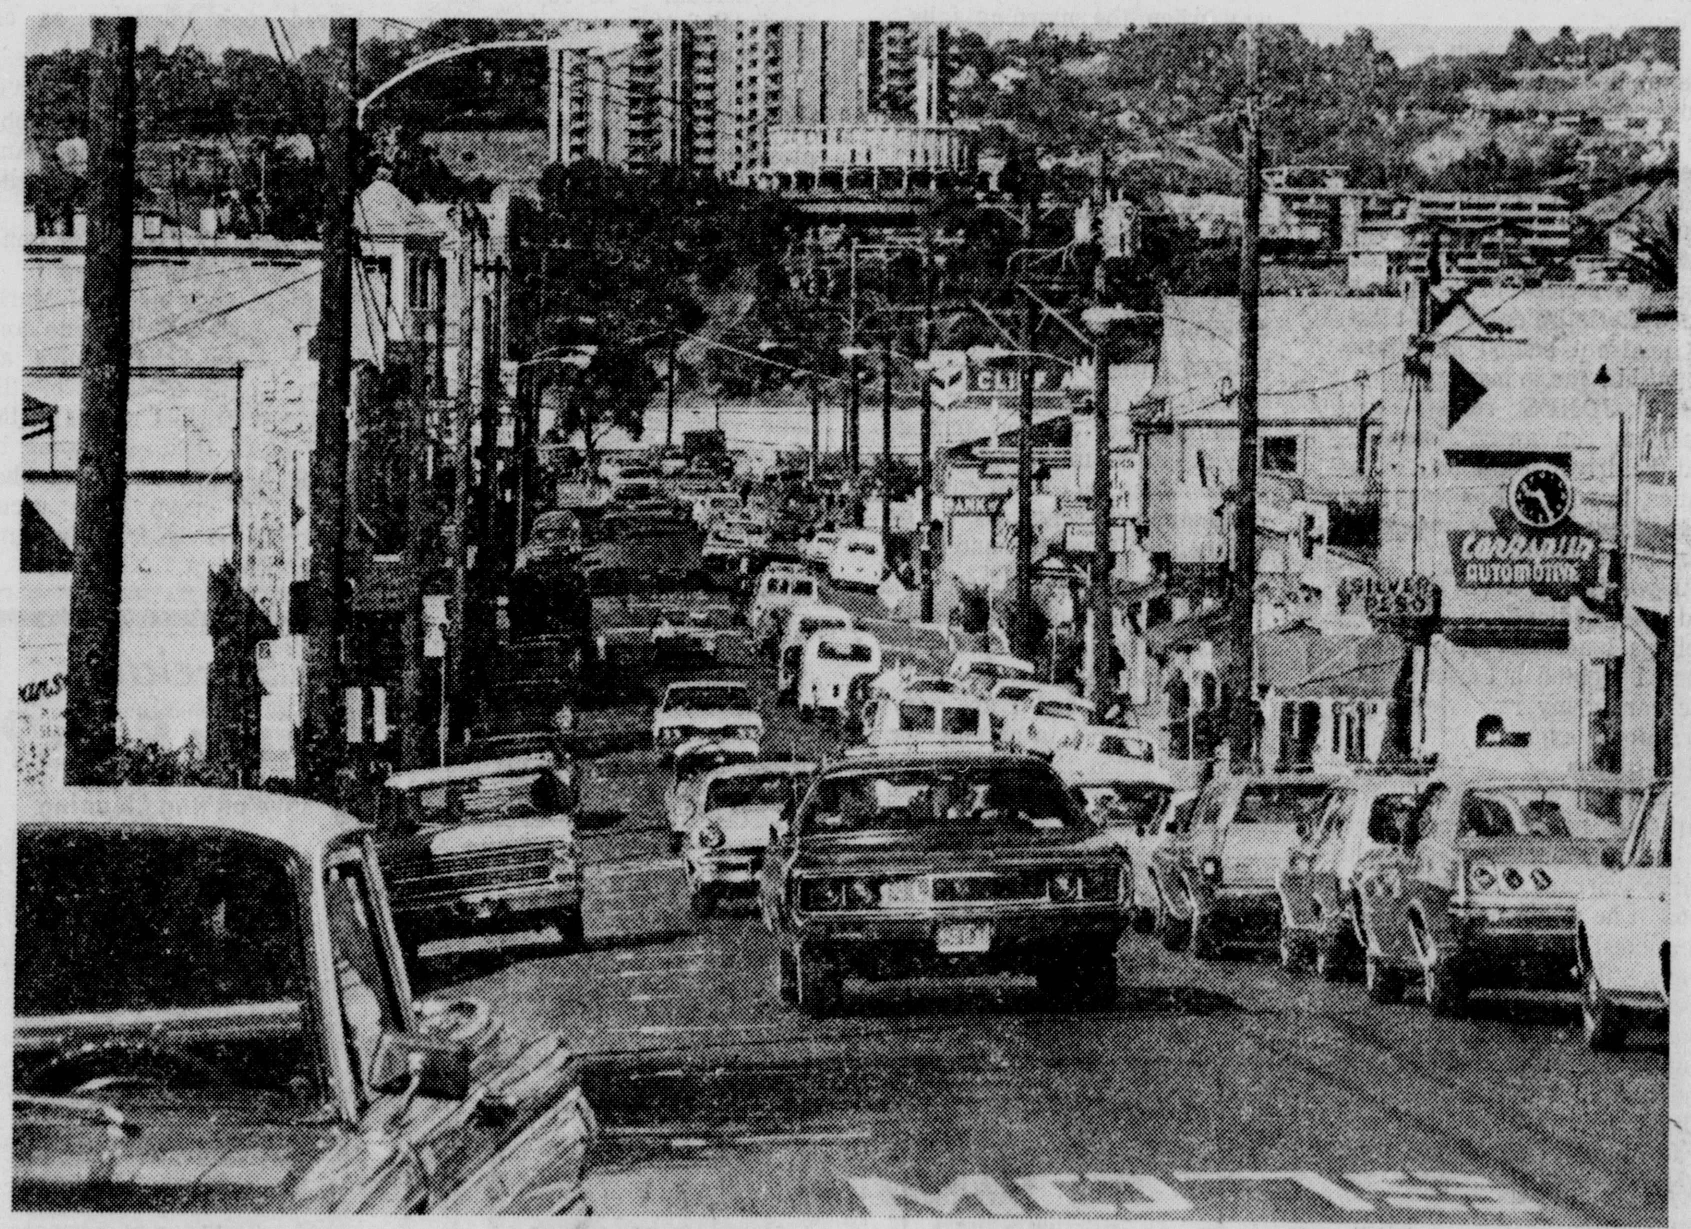
The Mayor's 'State Of The City' Report On Larkspur



LARKSPUR WAS STILL a sleepy little village of about 1,000 population in 1910 when this photograph was taken of its main business street, Magnolia Avenue. The roadway was dirt and the street bare of traffic, except for one horsedrawn buggy "parked" at the distant corner. Sidewalks were wooden. And shoppers were protected by overhead wood marquees.



DOWNTOWN LARKSPUR today has a far different look from what it had six decades ago. Independent-Journal photographer Bob Hax took this photograph of busy traffic moving over a paved roadway. In the background on the hilltop can be seen the Tamalpais Retirement Residence, regarded as one of the finest homes for senior citizens in the country.

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report is on Larkspur, and was submitted by its mayor, Earl J. O'Grady.)

By EARL J. O'GRADY

This year the City of Larkspur will observe its 63rd year of incorporation as a city in Marin County.

From a small summer resort that attracted the residents of San Francisco to the present time, Larkspur has experienced steady growth and has established itself as a city with desirable living conditions through the establishment of excellent municipal services and facilities.

The Blue Rock Inn, a stagecoach stop, and Escalle Winery, the site of the original Dinah's Shack, are among Larkspur's many contributions to the history of Marin County. In prior years Larkspur was linked to the rest of Marin and San Francisco by electric trains that covered the entire area.

TODAY LARKSPUR sits at the hub of the intersection of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Highway 101. East of Highway 101 on the banks of Corte Madera Creek is the site of the Golden Gate Bridge Highway and Transportation District's Larkspur ferry terminal, which in 1973 will initiate ferry service to San Francisco.

Larkspur has grown from a village of approximately 800 people in 1908 to the present population of 10,850. It is anticipated that growth within the next 10 to 20 years will decelerate and that the ultimate population within the corporate limits of Larkspur might reach 16,000 to 18,000 people.

The city is undergoing a change in its master planning to accomplish proper usage of land with abundant open space with the necessary public facilities to insure orderly growth, maintaining the country atmosphere so dear to all of us. Over the past five years some $300,000 has been spent to improve sewer facilities within the city and an additional $500,000 has been spent in reconstruction of Magnolia Avenue.

THE CITY IS now looking forward to working with its neighboring towns of Corte Madera and Mill Valley towards establishing open space on the area known as North Ridge, which, when completed, will provide 1,200 acres of open space. Residents of the entire Ross Valley and the neighboring valleys to the south will have the advantages of hills and open area that will remain in perpetuity and enhance the desirability of living in this section of Marin County.

During the past five years the City of Larkspur, participating in the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control project, has enhanced water recreation facilities by providing a deep water channel up to Bon Air Bridge. This channel will ultimately be extended easterly to deep water in San Francisco Bay as the dredging is completed for the Larkspur ferry terminal.

EARL J. O'GRADY
The mayor reports

Larkspur is proud of its schools. Redwood High School and Henry C. Hall, Larkspur-Corte Madera, and St. Patrick's grammar schools are among the finest in the county. They contribute significantly to the quality of life in our community.

A MAJOR contribution to Larkspur has been made by the Tamalpais Retirement Residence. This facility provides senior citizens with an unparalleled living experience. The Tamalpais is among the finest of its type in the country.

Many Marin County and Bay Area residents will long remember the Rose Bowl, a famous open air dance hall located in the redwoods adjacent to the old downtown area in Larkspur. The revenues derived from this operation allowed the Larkspur Volunteer Fire Department to provide excellent fire protection for the residents of the city. In later years, the City of Larkspur took over the volunteer department and has continued to provide excellent fire protection.

Two fire facilities for the city are provided by headquarters station at 420 Magnolia Avenue and a substation located at 15 South Eliseo Drive. The services are headed by Chief Craig Shurtz, who has been with the department for 11 years, and under his direction the city has maintained a favorable fire insurance rating below that of many cities in Marin County.

POLICE CHIEF Howard Clark heads a 15-man police department that provides the protection services for the City. Chief Clark has been a member of the Larkspur Police Department for 30 years, and under his direction the city has maintained an enviable position in controlling crime and the protection of public property and citizens.

Both police and fire departments undergo constant training and schooling so as to be abreast of current techniques in the protection of the citizens of this city.

The City Council of the City of Larkspur is the policy making body for the city and is composed of five members elected in staggered terms. The present Council members are Neil R. Brixon, Vice-Mayor William G. Fleckles, Alfred J. Malvino, Benton A. Sifford, Jr., and Mayor Earl J. O'Grady. In addition, three other boards and commissions operate under the directorship of the City Council. They are the Planning Commission, the Park and Recreation Commission and the Board of Library Trustees.

THE PLANNING Commission hears and considers all matters of zoning, use permits, and architectural review of new construction. The commission is actively supported by an appointed architectural review committee, which evaluates the aesthetic design and architectural characteristics of new construction and makes appropriate recommendations to the Planning Commission.

The Park and Recreation Commission is concerned with the open space and recreation facilities and programs for the youth and adults of the community.

Presently, the Park and Recreation Commission is working with a consultant in designing a master plan for open space, parks and recreation facilities for the future of Larkspur. This plan will be incorporated into the Larkspur General Plan and become a part of the future of the city.

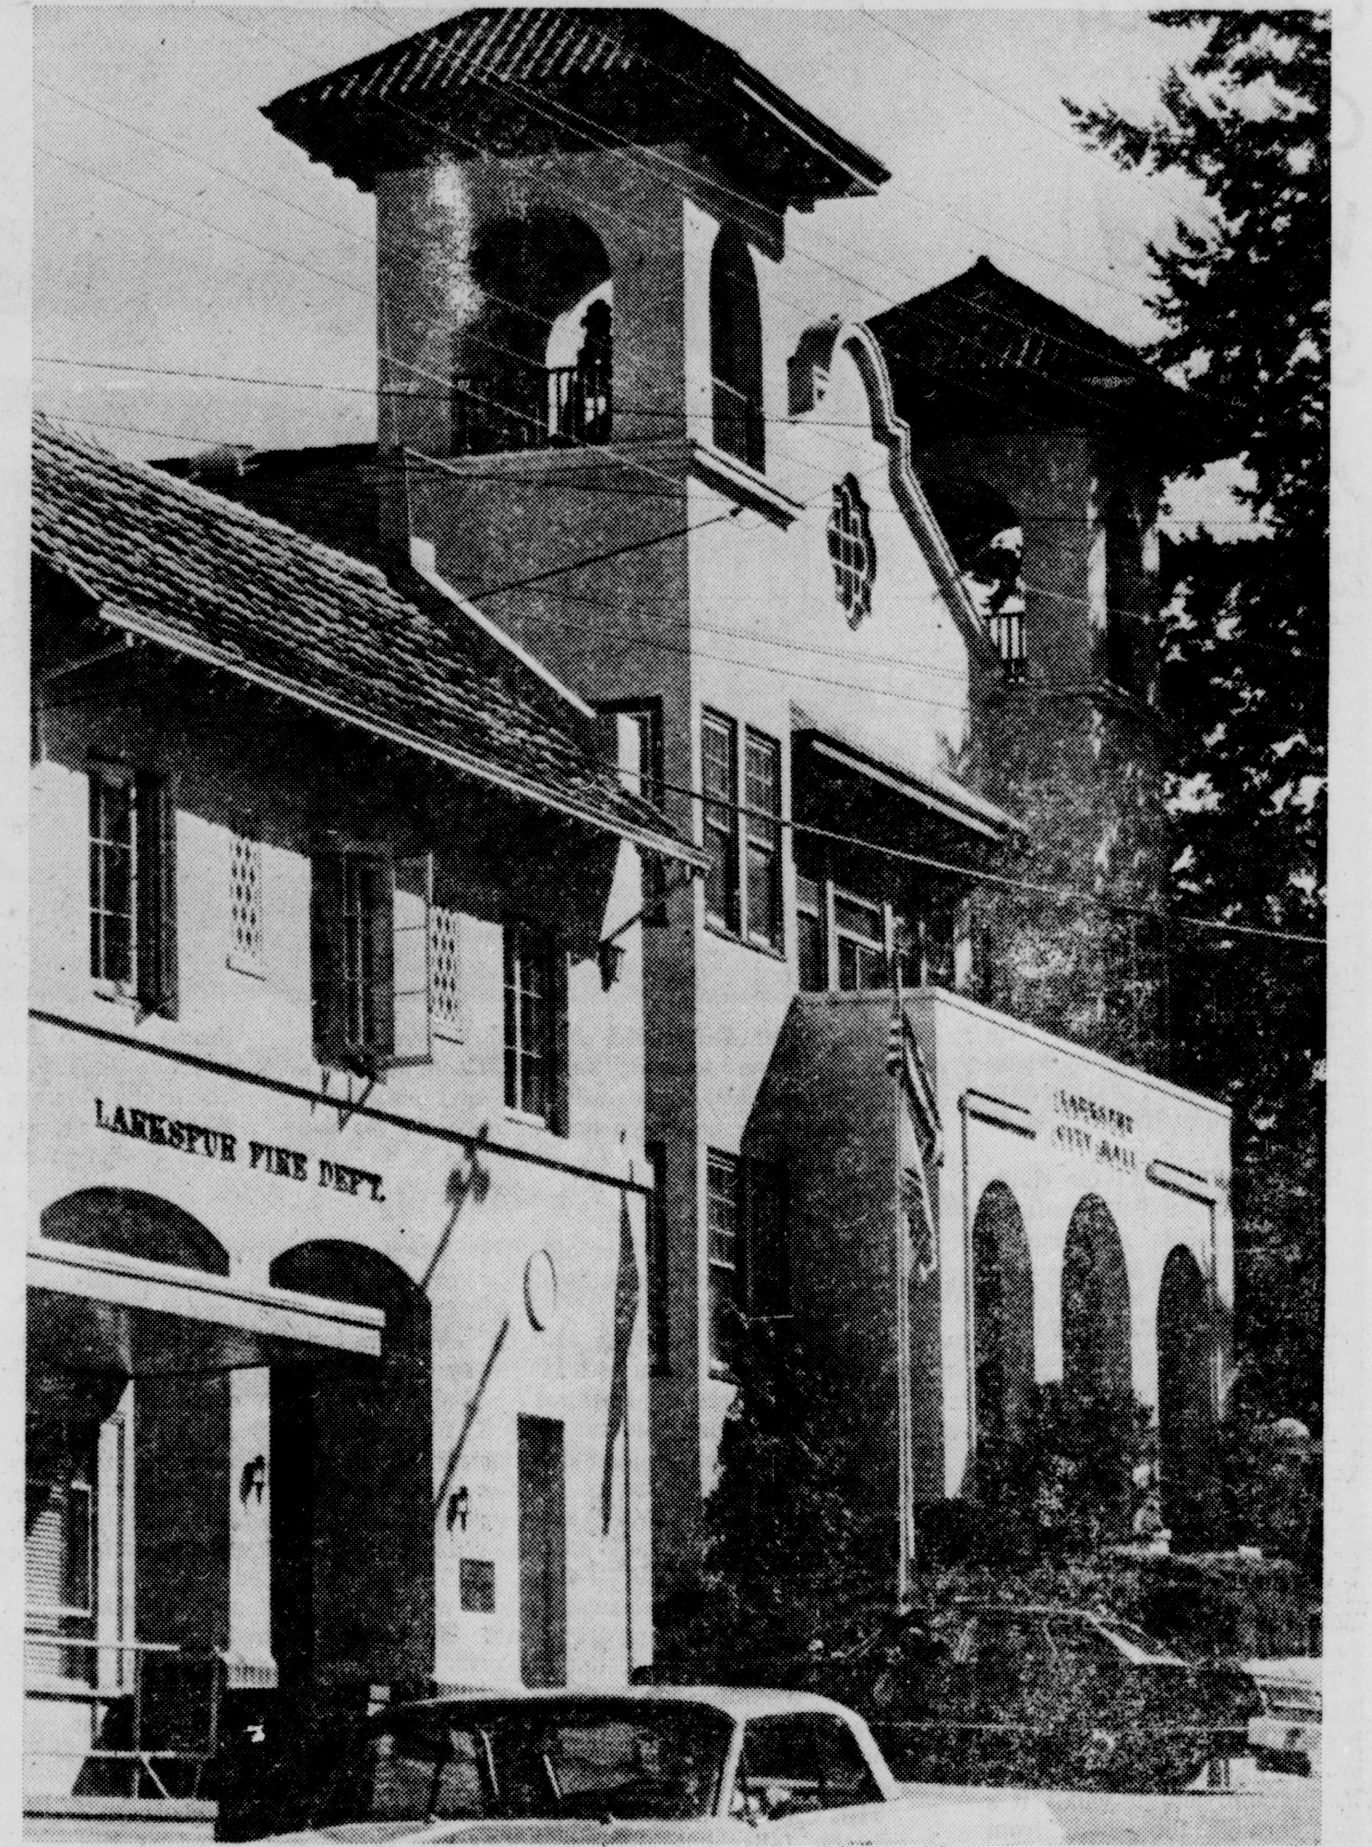
THE LARKSPUR Library, operated under the direction of the Board of Trustees, has been in existence since 1914, and is under the administration of Richard Kilbourne as head librarian. Circulation continually increases the use of the 29,438 volumes of books contained in the library. The Larkspur Library provides a well rounded and diversified range of books for all Larkspur citizens. Although the library facilities are in small quarters, the services provided have met with enthusiastic reception by the many readers who use it on a daily basis.

Thus, in 63 years the City of Larkspur has grown from a village to being the fifth largest city in Marin County.

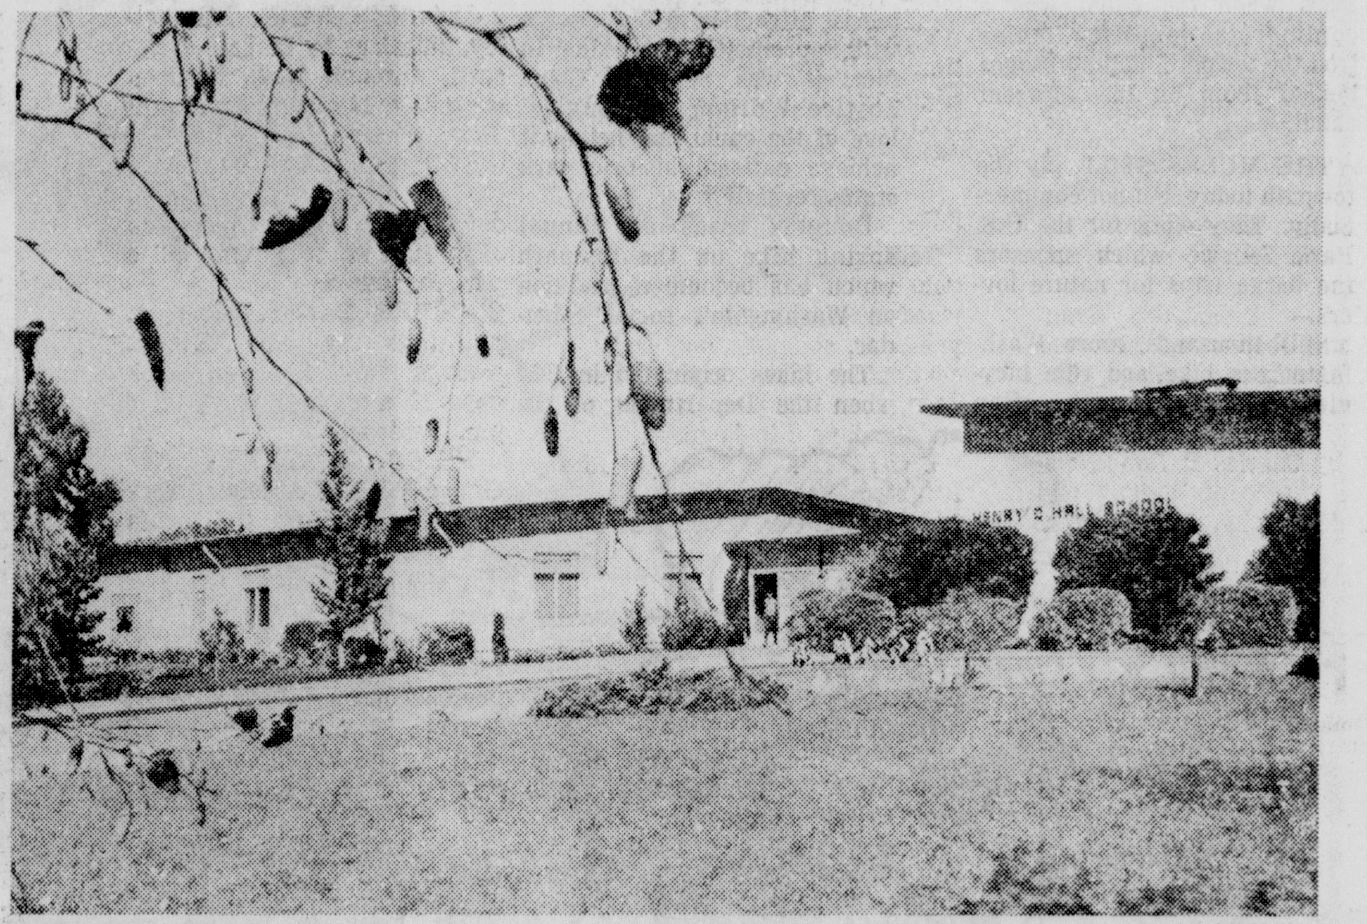
LARKSPUR IS debt-free. The City Council has constantly striven to embark upon programs that are economically sound and still provide the high level of services that our citizens deserve. Leadership has been displayed in the field of flood control, sanitary facilities and street and highway improvement.

Many of the local citizens have taken a prominent part in the cultural improvement of Marin County, and the historical background of the community itself has given foundation to the development of all Marin County.

(Editor's Note: Additional "state of the city" reports on other Marin municipalities will appear in subsequent issues of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine.)



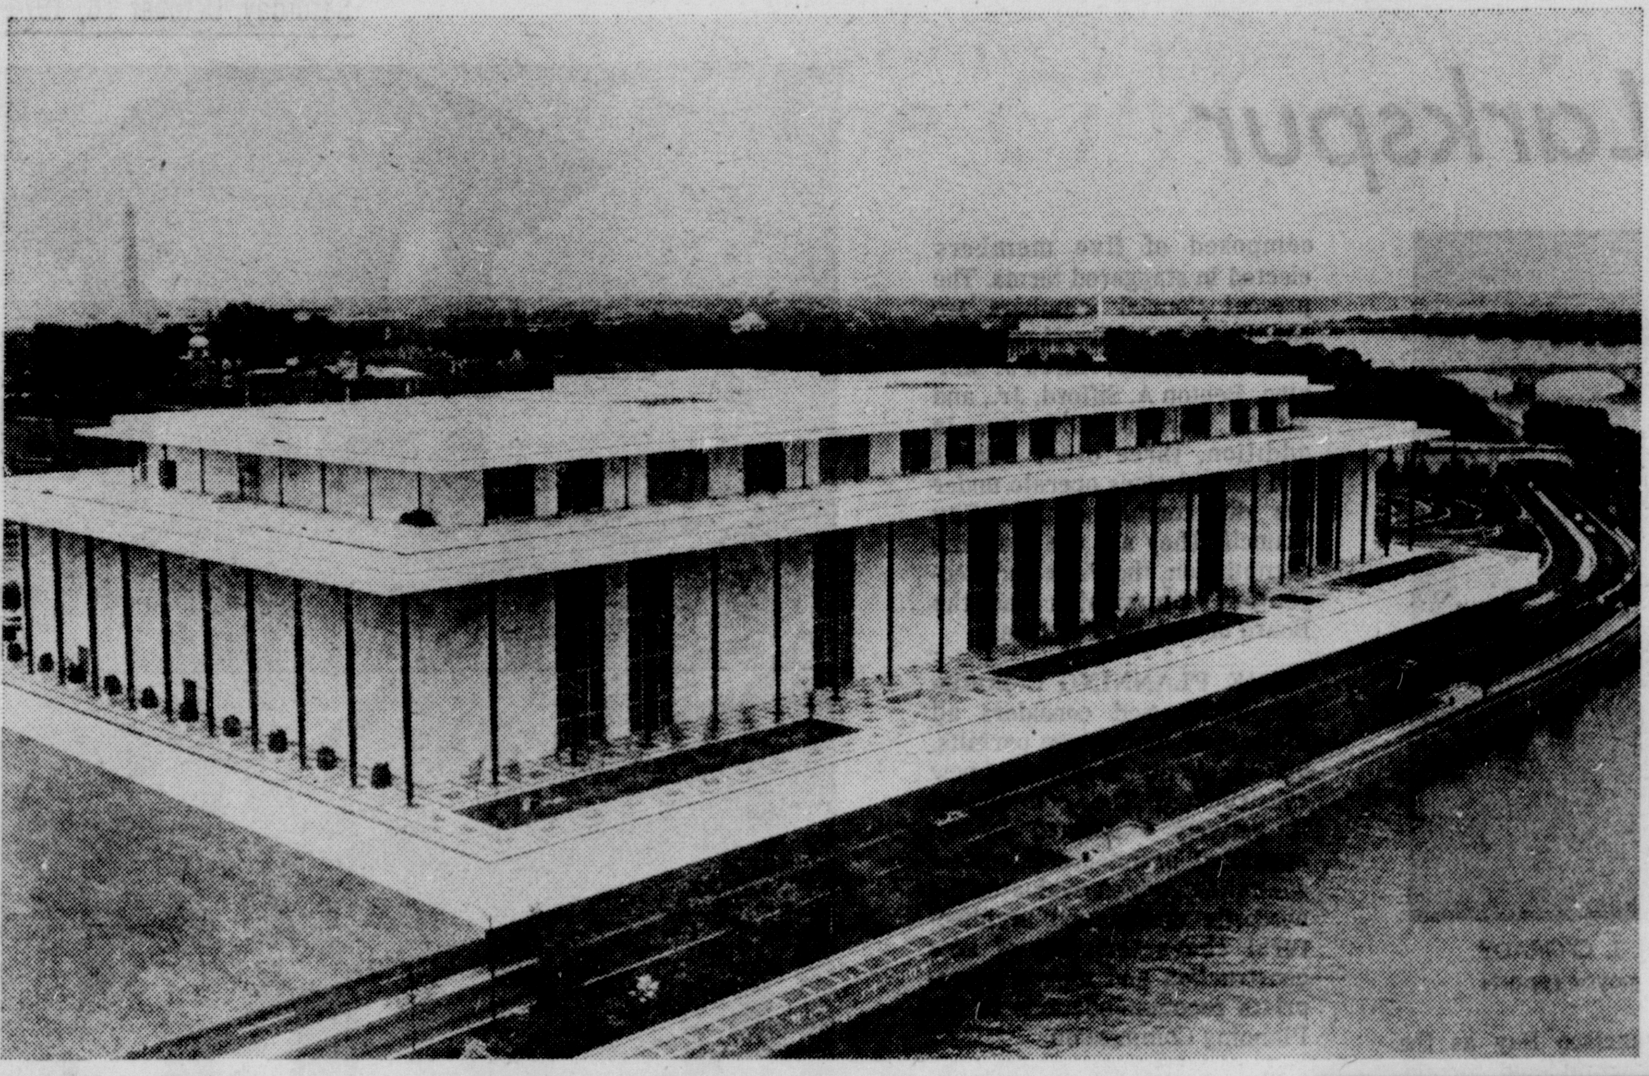
THE CITY GOVERNMENT of Larkspur functions from this attractive City Hall, with a five-member city council setting municipal policies. Next door is the Larkspur Fire Station from whence Chief Craig Shurtz and his men operate. The city also maintains a South Eliseo Drive substation.



ITS SCHOOLS ARE quite rightly a point of pride for Larkspur and its citizens. Pictured here is the Henry C. Hall School. Also rated among the finest schools in the county are Redwood High School, part of the Tamalpais Union High School District, and the Larkspur-Corte Madera and St. Patrick's elementary schools.

The Travel Pages

Capital Offers Varied Sights



THE NEWEST TOURIST attraction in Washington D.C. is the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, opened Sept. 8, and featuring a concert hall, an opera house, a theater for the drama and a film theater. The white marble structure is 600 feet long and soars 135 feet above the Potomac River. It was built at a cost of 68 million dollars, not including extensive gifts from foreign governments.

In the political hinterlands, a "man who knows his way about Washington D.C." is worthy of respect. Among other things, he knows a dozen off-beat "recreational" attractions, those sightseeing delights which serve as Sunday afternoon haunts for Washingtonians.

Chances are, the native Washington has never ventured to the top of the Washington obelisk, or toured the Capitol. He's used to ducking the tourist traffic.

But he's probably hiked the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, picnicked at Fort Washington and driven his kids to Great Falls. He's seen plays at the Olney Playhouse and the Hartke Theater, dined in Washington's gourmet restaurants and partaken of the nightlife in Georgetown.

HE KNOWS THAT the glamor of the Capital isn't confined to is monuments and federal buildings. Washingtonians live apart from that seen by the tourist, and judging from local sentiment, it's a good life, and worthy of scrutiny by the slightly jaded tourist who's seen too many monuments and stood in too many lines.

Just a little information, a map and a tiny nudge, that's all an experienced tourist needs to discover the delights of Washington as seen by the Washingtonian.

The C & O is probably Washington's number 1 playground. It's an historic canal surveyed by — who else? — George Washington, and it winds it s way through the woods from Georgetown to Cumberland, Md., 185 miles as the crow flies.

A towpath parallels the canal the entire distance. Back in the 1800s when the canal was a commercial operation, mules trod the towpath, pulling barges behind them on the adjacent canal.

THE MULES STILL ply the towpath today, but not commercially. They work for the U.S. Park Service which sponsors the barge trips for nature lovers.

Still thousands more Washingtonians hike and ride bicycles on the towpath, often carrying picnic lunches or dinners to their favorite woodland hideaways.

The canal and towpath also parallel another area attraction, the picturesque Potomac River. The wide Potomac is seldom more than a silver dollar's throw from the canal.

Seventeen miles above Washington is the canal's most spectacular setting, Great Falls. Tourists usually are amazed that such an outstanding attraction is so little known, but in reality, Washington residents have known about the river's white-water cascades since they were children.

THE CANAL naturally bypasses the falls, but the canoe enthusiasts who dot the canal every weekend often try shooting the rapids near the falls.

The C & O is probably the one tourist attraction in Washington with Supreme Court backing. In fact, it was Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas' love of the canal that helped it achieve national historic park status recently.

Douglas leads an annual spring hike on the towpath which has become a tradition on Washington's social calendar.

The hikes originated in 1954 when the Department of the Interior proposed a Georgetown-Cumberland Freeway adjacent to the canal. The Washington Post newspaper supported the proposal editorially, drawing a counterattack from Douglas.

THE JUSTICE challenged the Post's editorial writer to a hike up the towpath, promising that he'd fall in love with the canal. The Post accepted, the freeway was never built and the hikes are now traditional.

Fort Washington is situated on the Potomac south of Washington and across from Mount Vernon. It's a medieval-like relic of the 18th Century, complete with a drawbridge and moat.

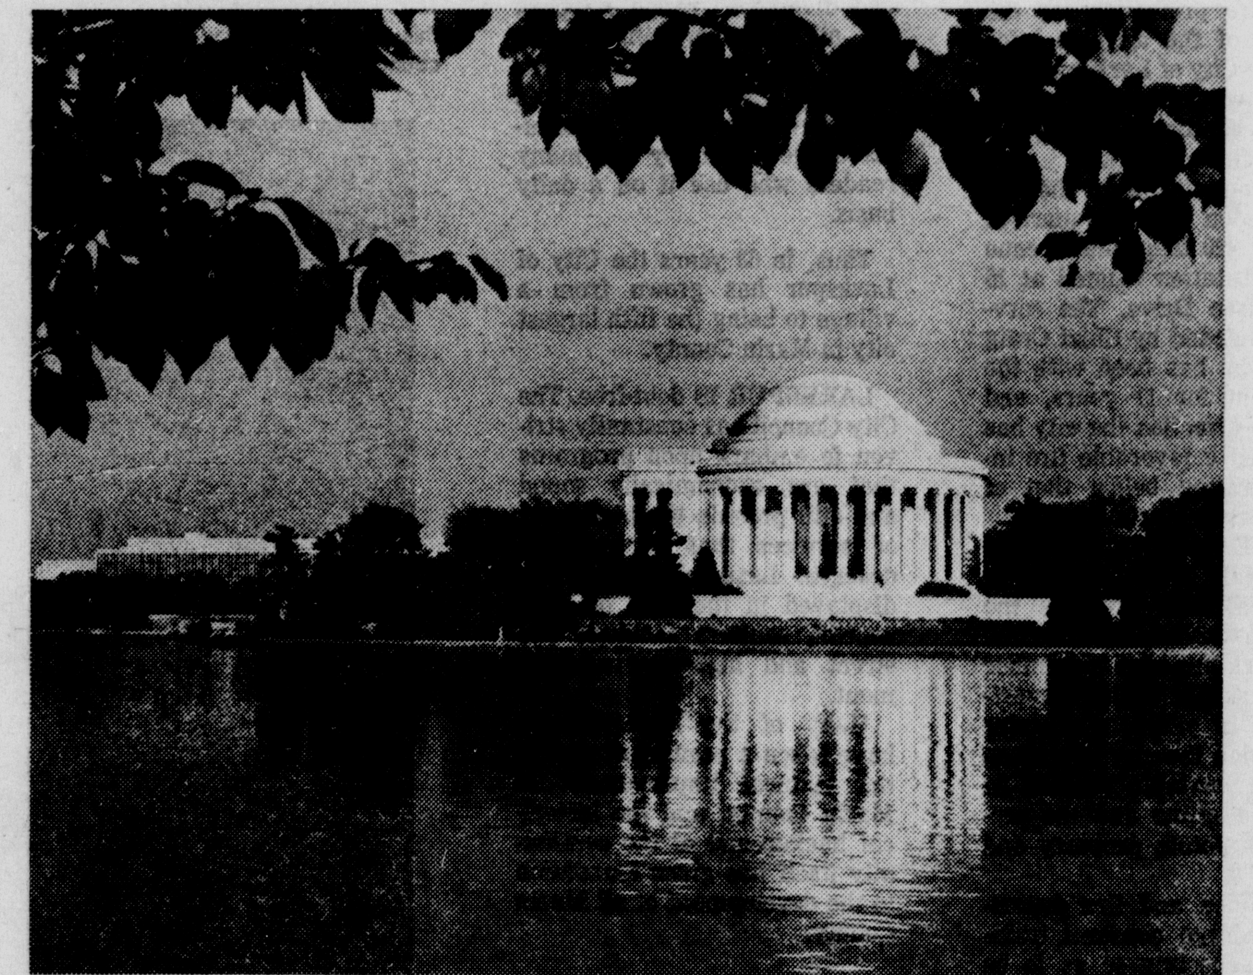
It was the Capital's primary defense in 1814 when the British sailed up the Potomac intent on capturing Washington. Although the fort sits on a bluff affording a commanding position of the wide river, the commander ordered the fortress abandoned to the British without firing a shot.

The invaders subsequently burned the Capitol Building and White House.

WHEN THE invasion jitters gripped Washington at the outset of the Civil War, the old fort was reactivated and for a time once again served as Washington's primary defense. It, however, was never beseiged.

A failure in its purpose, the old fort has lived on to become a 20th Century recreation area, perhaps Washington's most popular picnic and softball spot.

The fort itself remains in reasonably good condition and is especially popular with children. And the panoramic view is enjoyed by adults and children alike.



THE JEFFERSON MEMORIAL is considered by many to be the most beautiful building in Washington D.C. Dedicated in 1943 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the edifice incorporates many of the personal design ideas of President Thomas Jefferson who was an architect. It sits on Washington's famed tidal basin and is the focal point for the annual Cherry Blossom Festival.

Is New Breed Camper A Threat To Ecology?

By GARY KALE

There is a good deal of concern among the ecology-minded segment of "Save America" that the new breed of camper will turn this country into a huge litter basket.

At least two states, Colorado and Pennsylvania, have declared some areas off limits because of sloppy tenancy in state parks by the desultory weekend camper. The veteran camper, in constrast, usually is careful not to sully the property where he set up temporary residence.

MANY OF today's machine-minded novices take to the road in self-contained campers, auto-drawn trailers or tent-carrying vehicles. The late fall, winter and early spring will bring out family snow-fun equipment in some sections, making outdoor living a year-round activity.

This adds up to some 40 billion people wandering around the United States in search of recreational areas where they can park for a day, week or month. They are anxious to soak up a maximum of outdoor entertainment with a minimum of effort.

Many simply zero in on a designated section and never leave until it's time to return home. Others desire a base where they can drop their camper-trailers and spend their time sightseeing.

STATE PARKS, which either are free or charge a nominal fee for overnight camping, suffer the most from the untidy segment of the camping population. Conversely, the more people pay for their camping privileges, the less they are inclined toward messiness.

The private campgrounds, charging for electric, water and waste disposal hookups, cover less territory than the public recreational areas, and, as a rule, are easier to police.

"When there's a minimum of campers, each person seems to take pride in leaving his campsite the way he found it," says John May, who once traveled the entertainment circuit with a million dollar invertebrate collection and now runs a 350-acre camping ground near Colorado Springs, Colo.

THE TOP executive of a franchised camp group maintains that his company is "ecology-oriented" and even urges campground owners to stock nothing but non-polluting detergents in their stores.

"This may not seem like much on the surface, but it's a start," offered James R. Estes, president of Safari Camps of America. "It's also our policy to preserve the natural beauty of the wooded camp areas so that people who camp to get away from the concrete canyons can stay in touch with a nature they see dwindling rapidly."

There are some people, however, who couldn't care less about preserving our natural environments.

THE CAMPING motorcyclist has discovered his vehicle can range far on a small capacity gasoline tank and many are determined to explore the rarely visited parts of the U.S.

The crisscross of tire tracks proclaim an army of adventurers bent on reconnoitering an area for its recreation potential and the esthetic value of the property be hanged. The litter many leave represents a "Kilroy Was Here" attitude and serves as an invitation for other cyclists to follow the newly-discovered paths of nature.

Preserving and protecting the natural beauty of the landscape apparently escapes many dune-buggy drivers and snowmobile riders, too. Conservationists say these vehicles don't belong in the woods and city dwellers complain they are hazards to traffic.

What's a sportsman to do when people argue about his method of transportation? Conservationists say he can establish a nationwide code of environmental ethics that would attract the fair minded segment of riders. Others may swing into line to be part of the crowd.

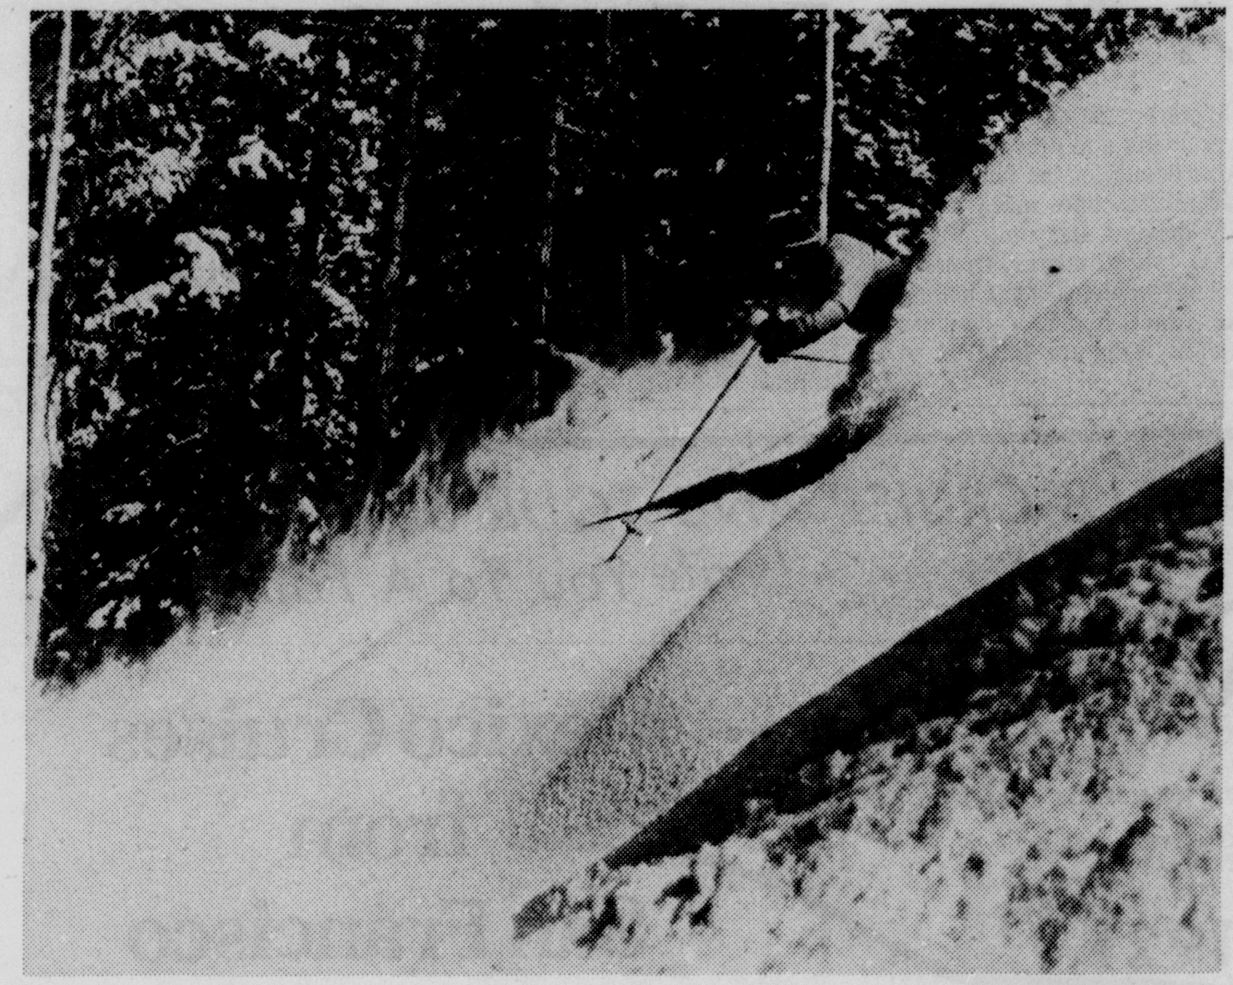
Taos Beckons Visitor With Skiing, History



KNEE-DEEP IN the beautifully white and dry powdered snow for which the ski runs of the Taos Ski Valley in New Mexico are famous, these skiers enjoy the exhilaration of a fast and challenging run. But winter sports is only one of several attractions of this New Mexico area that is fast gaining in popularity with tourists of all seasons and many interests.

The atom is New Mexico's biggest industry and there are more Ph.D's in the state per each thousand of population than anywhere else in the nation. It is the past, however, that lives in Taos, located in a sheltered valley 70 miles north of Santa Fe.

"Civilization has flourished in and around Taos for several centuries," reports Continental Airline's travel experts, "and modernization is still resisted today.

"There are two main Indian communities on the outskirts of Taos, separated by a small stream, and the pueblos there, some standing five stories high with their only openings on the ground floor, have been occupied continuously for over 800 years. Women still sweep the dirt plaza with crude straw brooms, bake their bread in beehive ovens, and tribal laws forbid such improvements as electricity, running water, television or even radios."

TAOS OFFERS a unique and colorful combination of Indian and Spanish character along with its history. It was an Indian medicine man named Naranjo from Taos, in fact, who incited the bloody revolt of the Pueblo Indians in 1680 — nearly a century before the American Revolution —that first drove Spanish rule from New Mexico.

Today, the Anglo-Spanish-Indian atmosphere of Taos is further shared by an internationally sophisticated group of winter sports experts who dominate the nearby Taos Ski Valley, which claims the driest snow anywhere in the United States or Europe.

All of the many lodges in the Taos Ski Valley are run by the area's European ski instructors, and the chefs —representing such countries as Switzerland, France, Denmark, Austria, West Germany and Italy — serve superb family-style meals from do-it-yourself fondue to Finnish fruit soup.

"TAOS HAS SOME of the toughest ski runs in America," reports Continental, "but there is also a perfectly-groomed beginner's area and 12 miles of intermediate slopes. Skiing here is at its best in February and the early spring months."

The activity in Taos, though, is year-round, and the Indian pueblos and their residents are among the most photographed subjects in America. The height of the season for visitors to the Indian ruins and communities is in the summer and fall.

"Taos Indians allow you to bring your camera into the pueblos for a fee of $1.50," reports Continental. "This entitles you to take all the pictures you want. However, if you want the Indians themselves to pose you're expected to pay them something extra — usually 25 cents a picture."

ANOTHER POPULAR spot for visitors to Taos, which is the permanent home for a large colony of writers and artists, is the fully restored Kit Carson House and Museum in the heart of town.

A Coffee Festival In Hawaii With Tours, Parade, A Queen

By LINDY BOYES

Does the aroma of fresh-brewed coffee put thoughts of Hawaii into your mind?

Why should it, you wonder? Because some of the world's most aromatic and flavorful coffee comes from Kona, Hawaii.

To help broaden general knowledge of Kona coffee by encouraging visitors to the area, the Kona Coffee Festival will be held Nov. 11, 12 and 13 with the Kona Chamber of Commerce acting as coordinator for the various sponsoring organizations which include the Hawaii Visitors Bureau.

CONSIDERED by many a gourmet product, the only coffee raised in the United States is grown in the Kona coastal area of the "Big Island" of Hawaii.

Coffee has been grown in the Kona district for nearly a century and a half and has been an important crop since the middle of the 19th Century.

For decades, Hawaiian planters dreamed of coffee as a great potential export crop and experimented with the plant on several islands. Now, however, only the Kona district grows coffee commercially.

The coffee plant, a cousin ot the gardenia, is grown occasionally as an ornamental because of its fragrant white flower.

THE KONA district produces the best coffee in Hawaii for several reasons. Ample rainfall and volcanic soil that provides good drainage is found on the slopes of Mauna Loa from the 1,200 to 2,000-foot elevation.

Coffee needs partial shade. The nearly twin 13,000-foot tops of Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea catch the trade wind-blown clouds in the morning, leaving Kona sunny and bright. By midday the clouds break free and move to cover Kona until late afternoon, shading the coffee plants.

The mountains also protect the plants from wind and storm damage. The coffee cherries start ripening in early autumn, with November usually the peak of the harvest season. And this is the time of the three-day Kona Coffee Festival.

VISITORS TO this first annual event will tour coffee farms, see parades, a Coffee-Picking Queen contest, art show, food sales, coffee recipe contest, a pageant and many attend a Coronation Dance.

For more information of the festival write to the Kona Chamber of Commerce, Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, 96740. For more information of Kona coffee, write to the Kona Coffee Association, Post Office Box 766, Captain Cook, Hawaii, 96704.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

Pan American World Airway, American President Lines and Daman Nelson Travel have joined forces to sponsor two plans — one a sail there, jet back, and the other a fly both ways package — by which visitors can stay on board the SS President Cleveland while taking in the Winter Olympics at Sapporo, Japan, this winter . . . Highlighting the 1972 Club Universe travel program Thursday through Oct. 25 at San Francisco's Palace of Fine Arts Theater will be a preview of the new multi-media travel musical, "People," that will be open to the general public Nov. 2 through Nov. 12 in the same theater.

P&O Lines' Oriana will depart San Francisco in mid-January for Vancouver, B.C., with a special attraction for skiers — five days and nights of schussing and slaloming on Whistle Mountain . . . "How to Brave Disney's New World" in the October issue of Mechanix Illustrated offers detailed information on the new 27,400-acre Walt Disney World amusement complex in central Florida . . . A Travel Guide For 'Man In The Middle'

The big gap in the travel guide field has been in the medium-price range.

There are a number of really fine guides for the economy and budget travelers. And a few for those who prefer and can afford first class and deluxe accommodations.

But relatively little has been written for the many who travel comfortably but not lavishly.

FRANCE IS A country that can present special problems to tourists in this category.

Thus Arthur Frommer's "Dollar Wise Guide to France" authored by Stanley Haggart and Darwin Porter for Air France is an especially welcomed addition to the travel guide field.

With the same thoroughness and care demonstrated in the Frommer books for budget travelers, this new book provides information on hotels, restaurants, nightsports, tours, etc., that fit the needs and means of "the man in the middle."

BUT TO MAKE the book still more valuable, Haggart and Porter have also included both upper bracket and budget recommendations while emphasizing restaurants, hotels, etc., in-between. And they tell you not only where to go, but why, and what you can expect to find there, in tempting and helpful detail.

The book sells for $2.95. And, quite frankly, the traveler visiting France, and particularly Paris, and unfamiliar with the country, is foolish not to first arm himself with a guide such as this one. Otherwise he is going to miss out on a lot of opportunities. And the price of this thick, fact-packed book is a bargain $2.95. D.K.

A Look At The Irish

By DON KEOWN

MORE THAN ANY other land, Ireland today, Richard O'Connor points out in his book, "The Irish," is a country where the old — pony carts and thatched roofs — has succeeded in surviving the onslaught of the new — automobiles and central heating. Of the people of Ireland, O'Connor writes: "They have proved it is possible to survive in the modern world through powers as insubstantial as thought and as valuable as an idea."

Although millions of Americans have their ancestral roots in its green sod and still other millions feel a sentimental attachment to its land, Ireland remains a mist-shrouded enigma to its admirers in this country.

A way of life that has resisted supposedly irresistible progress almost as determinedly as it has resisted British domination is beyond the comprehension of most progress-minded, comfort-oriented Americans.

One Irish-American who does understand his ancestral land and who can interpret it for us is the writer Richard O'Connor. And he does so with wit and insight in his marvelous book "The Irish: Portrait of a People."

"The Irish are a whirlwind of contradictions," begins O'Connor, who divides his own time between homes in Maine and County Cork, and then proceeds to plunge into the center of the turmoil to dissect its currents.

He gives us pieces on Ireland's ancient history, on its devout Catholicism, on the Anglo-Irish Ascendancy and aristocracy, on national hero Michael Collins, on Eamon De Valera so devoid of charisma and yet so unquestionably the leading figure of the Republic, on the Irish Republican Army, on Dubliners, on Connemarans, on poets and playwrights, on Ireland's marriage-resisting bachelors, on the newly rich and upon the religious hatred in the North that has now exploded so tragically.

THE IRISH by Richard O'Connor; Putnam, 384 pages, $7.95.

Sometimes O'Connor writes with broad humor and sometimes with the utmost seriousness. He is at his best when he is witty. But it is fair to say that in either mood, he is very, very good and always entertaining.

And through all the book runs one thread — the dilemma that confronts Ireland and the Irish today: Shall they exchange their isolation and independence to claim their slice of the pie of progress? And if they do make the change, how much must it cost them of the purity of their environment and the quiet of their way of life that they enjoy today?

O'Connor makes it clear that Ireland is already moving in the direction of progress. Ireland, he tells us, has clung determinedly to her childhood, but now there is a "creeping Rotarianism" afoot in that land. Smoke-belching factories, motor cars and tall buildings are appearing in what were once gorse spotted green landscapes.

"With the flush of prosperity that began about 10 years ago, he (the Irishman) discovered the formerly scarce uses and pleasures of materialism" O'Connor writes. "The Irish today, whatever the degree of their past infatuation with decay and procrastination, are beginning to hustle. There are signs of impatience with quaintness, with charming eccentricity, with mooning over or in the 'Celtic twilight'."

Only the overly-sentimental will regard this trend as all-bad for the Irish, O'Connor makes clear, especially when he writes so movingly of the poverty and hard life endured for generations by the people of Ireland's rock-strewn West.

But later on O'Connor tells us: "Within a few years Ireland's celebrated 'backwardness' may be her greatest asset. As smog, urban congestion, strangulated traffic, and all the other evils attendant on total industrialization multiply, Ireland will relatively be an oasis of pure air and water, of an uncluttered countryside and cities with a controlled growth . . . if she is careful.

"And in many ways she is a cautious old lady. From the tales of her sons and daughters who have emigrated she knows that 'progress' can entail more than high wages and easy access to consumer goods."

Thus O'Connor reassures us of his confidence that Ireland will not go overboard in its movement toward progress. "It seems likely that the Irish, with their innate resistance to change, will retain their special qualities longer than most people."

O'Connor's splendid book is also a probe for the elements that make up these special qualities of the Irish people.

"Perhaps the most valuable thing about Irishness," he concludes, "is its dogged defense of individualism, its tolerance of the individual no matter how far he may stray from conventional norms."

And: "What the Irish and their fellow Celts have to offer a world which has largely absorbed and deracinated them is the spiritual and cultural qualities which have allowed them — Scots, Welsh, Bretons, Cornish, Irish — to make an impact on Western civilization greatly out of proportion to their numbers. They have a deep sense of humanity which has never desiccated into an automatic or dogmatic humanitarianism. That is what makes living among the Irish a vivid and reviving experience for refugees from a more standardized outside world . . .

"There is considerable virtue in a society that refuses to judge you solely on such criteria as the kind of car you drive, the size of your income, the scope of your business or social accomplishments."

One winds up this book hoping prayfully that the Irish do, indeed, succeed in their delicate task of adopting enough of the new ways to lift their land beyond the cruel clutches of want and poverty, while at the same time retaining enough of the old ways to keep Ireland the island of sanity it is today — despite the terror in the North — in a world that seems to be becoming increasingly irrational. One ends the reading of "The Irish," too, looking forward eagerly to his own next visit to that enchanted land. And agreeing with Richard O'Connor that:

"It is only fair to add that the Irish are as fascinating as their reputation and their country as beautiful as its propaganda makes it out to be."

BALLANTINE'S Western Division continues its project of reprinting the best about the West in both fiction and nonfiction in paperback with a new list topped by Oscar Lewis' classic "The Big Four" about the founders of the Central Pacific Railroad, plus George R. Stewart's epic novel "Sheep Rock" and Theodora Stanwell-Flutcher's award-winning nature study "Driftwood Valley."

BEAGLE BOOKS has marked P. G. Wodehouse's 90th birthday with the republication in paperback of three of his titles — "Brinkley Manor," "Leave It to Psmith" and "The Small Bachelor."

SEAFIRE by Bill Knox, Doubleday, 182 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Bill Knox, the Scottish journalist and author who alternates in his mystery novels between the Glasgow police and the Fishery Protection Service, is back with the latter and its Chief Officer Webb Carrick in "Seafire."

This time Carrick's adventures revolve around a research vessel investigating an underseas menace to sealife and the fishing industry, and from which two men have died.

Knox writes again with the controlled competence that he has demonstrated consistently in all his books, making "Seafire" a pleasure to read. As always, both the Scottish and the nautical backgrounds are first-rate. And yet another minor, unpretentious triumph can be chalked up for this very capable writer.

Justice Department Inside Story During The Kennedy Years

KENNEDY JUSTICE by: Victor S. Navasky; Atheneum, 465 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Robert F. Kennedy as an activist U.S. attorney-general ran up against J. Edgar Hoover as an entrenched top bureaucrat. The encounter gave off sparks, and despite various public pronouncements praising the cooperation on both sides, few were deceived into thinking that all was happy togetherness in the Justice Department 1961-1964.

Victor S. Navaskay in "Kennedy Justice" more than reviews the situation between attorney-general and FBI chief; he dissects it, re-dissects it, analyzes and re-analyzes it.

Navasky's meticulous approach to telling the inner workings of the Justice Department in the Kennedy years is highly reminiscent of Gay Talese's in his story of the New York Times, "The Kingdom and the Power."

Kennedy admirers may not like it, for Navasky depicts Robert Kennedy as somewhat less the dedicated idealist than they like to believe. But Hoover admirers won't like it either, for the long-time FBI boss comes off with an image more for his resistance to change than for anything else. But anyone interested in reading 465 pages of the inside story of Robert Kennedy's years as attorney-general will find "Kennedy Justice" informative and perhaps even intriguing.

THIS BUST of Robert F. Kennedy stands in the courtyard of the Department of Justice in Washington D.C. RFK's attorney-generalship is the subject of Victor S. Navasky's book, "Kennedy Justice."

The Biography Of A Free Spirit

THE REAL ISADORA by Victor Seroff; Dial, 441 pages, $10. Reviewed by Dee Dinsmore.

With no attempt to gloss her life and with an honest appraisal of her faults, Victor Seroff has written what is probably the first truthful biography of Isadora Duncan.

Moving quickly through Isadora's early years in San Francisco, where she was born in 1878, Seroff delves deeply into her life, her triumphs and her despairs.

A legend in her own time and a free spirit in the truest sense, Isadora Duncan brought a new concept of dancing to a generation that never really understood her.

Seroff, who knew her only in the final years of her life, perhaps knew her better than the people who were closest to her from the beginning of her career. It was to him that she told the truth of her love affairs, her total despair at the tragic death of her two illigitimate children, her only marriage at a late age to a man young enough to be her son.

He tears apart the biographies written after her death as figments of imagination and written for nothing more than financial gain and personal publicity. He dismisses Isadora's autobiography as pure fiction.

Isadora's fondest dream was to have schools throughout the United States and Europe and although she did manage to open one or two in Europe, there was never enough money and she was constantly exploited by "friends." The only time in her life when she was completely free from money worries were the years she spent with Paris Singer, a millionaire who worshipped and indulged her. But, even this, did not last for Isadora's penchant for exhibitionism soon drove him from her.

Seroff is unable to explain the genius of this woman with little formal education and no musical training. Her ability to sit quietly, listen to a musical composition, form the dance in her head and, with no rehearsal, give a beautiful performance, mystified the theatrical world.

In the final chapters of her life, Isadora lived what came to be known as her "Russian Years." Driven from the United States because of her curtain speeches in defense of the Russian form of government following the revolution, it was to Russia that she fled. It was here she married for the only time.

She was never to return to the United States. With her husband and with the aid of the Russian government, she went on tour to France with the hope of regaining her position in the theater. The dream was never realized, for in 1927, at the age of 49, in the south of France, Isadora Duncan, indulging her passion for speeding automobiles, was killed in a tragic accident.

Seroff's book is a moving tribute to an incredible woman, perhaps born too soon but who, nevertheless, left a lasting mark on modern dancing as it is done today.

ISADORA DUNCAN was photographed in Nice, France, in 1926 in this never-before-published illustration from Victor Seroff's "The Real Isadora."

A Stevenson Novel Encore

VITTORIA COTTAGE by D. E. Stevenson; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 250 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

A D. E. Stevenson novel in hand is an unfailing guarantee of an evening of quiet, relaxing reading pleasure.

It has been that way now for decades with this Scottish lady. And the unfading charm of her stories is demonstrated by the reprinting of "Vittoria Cottage," first published 22 years ago.

In truth, "Vittoria Cottage" is not one of her best books. But it remains an entertaining and warm story of romance in a rural English town, centered around young widow Caroline Dering who is involved not only in her own affairs of the heart, but those of her grown children as well.

Miss Stevenson is as always the calm, controlled, level-headed narrator who does not need crises and catastrophies to win your interest, but who can hold your attention with more commonplace events, skillfully, incisively related.

Chatty Introduction To Australia — Its People And Politics

LAND OF FORTUNE, A Study of the New Australia, by Jonathan Aitken; Atheneum, 267 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Jonathan Aitken has written a chatty, readable introduction to Australia.

Fortunately for the American reader he makes no assumptions about the depth of our prior knowledge. Starting from scratch we are introduced to the people, prejudices, opportunities, drawbacks, economy, politics and social structure of this predominantly white country.

Aitken is well-equipped to be our guide. He, too, is an outsider — a British journalist who originally visited Australia in 1965 as private secretary to Selwyn Lloyd, who was then Opposition spokesman for Commonwealth Affairs. Subsequently, Aitken made four additional visits, each of six or seven weeks duration and conducted over 500 interviews, making full use of his reporter's obervational skills.

A Conservative politician himself, his dissection of the politics and politicians of Australia is gossipy and enlightening.

Speaking of Gough Whitlam, Labor leader of the Opposition, he relates: ". . . when he (Whitlam) was asked what were the major Socialist reforms he would introduce (if he were elected) Prime Minister. His reply was a dreary recitation of the drainage statistics in Australia, which he said proved that Perth and Brisbane were the least sewered cities in the world. After more of this sanitary inspector's lament, the Leader of the Opposition declared: 'We are the only Party in Australia that will ever reform this situation. Sewers are usually Socialist.' "

Aitken can be catty, but he works hard at being fair-minded. He analyzes the forces bringing about modification of the White Australia policy and the resistance to those changes. He is sympathetic to the late Prime Minister Holt's desire to make Australia an integral part of Asia rather than continue the image of a European Caucasian island in an Oriental sea.

His discussion of the stock market and the migrants sounds like turn-of-the-century American — melting pot and all. On the other hand, the discovery of minerals, the vastness of the area and the underpopulation sound chords reminiscent of an even earlier America. There is still much of frontier values and attitudes in a country the size of the continental U.S. that holds only 13 million people.

On the dustjacket the publisher calls "Land of Fortune" a "love letter," while on the title page Aitken calls it a study. The truth lies in between. It is too critical and perceptive to be a love letter. It requires an index to be usable as a study. In fact, an index would make it a more re-readable love letter. On the plus side of the end paper maps are clear and helpful.

Read "Land of Fortune." Australia deserves a more knowing public in the U.S. and Aitken has sugar-coated the informational pill neatly. And for historical perspective, take a look at "The Tireless Traveler" and see what another chatty reporter from the Mother Country, Anthony Trollope, saw down under a hundred years ago.

It's like using a stereopticon — parallel views in depth. Great fun!

The Human Dimension Of An Earlier Kind Of War

LONDON WAR NOTES 1939-1945 by Mollie Panter-Downes; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 378 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce Anderson.

It is so long ago now — the Second World War. And it was so far, far different from the wars of more recent memory — Korea, and the seemingly unending Indochina involvement with its aura of "1984."

"London War Notes" will bring back much of the almost-forgotten feeling of those years for those who can remember. It may even give some sense of what it was like to the many born since that greatest of all armed conflicts.

Mollie Panter-Downes wrote a series of letters for the New Yorker from the time the invasion of Poland by Germany plunged Europe into the war until the surrender of Hitler's armies nearly six years later. During much of that time, the London from which she wrote was either under attack from the air or in fearful expectation of attack by both air and sea.

The pluck of the British comes through in every one of the letters, collected in this volume. The petty annoyances are there, too — sometimes overriding the greater issues and the real dangers, just as they always do for human beings.

This is the human dimension of war for a non-combatant — war in which everyone was involved, not just those sent abroad to fight and die.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Disbud camellias this month or next, before the plants come into bloom and waste their energies on too many buds. Avoid leaving two buds together — thin them out to some three or four inches apart along the branches. When forced to choose between buds, pinch off the one that faces into the disfiguring elements of sun and rain.

✓ Shop for chrysanthemums in bloom. Use them for indoor decoration, or sink the containers into the garden soil where quick splashes of color are needed.

✓ Hurry to plant those annuals for winter bloom. Calendulas, violas, pansies, snapdragons, Iceland poppies, stocks and fairy primroses all provide splendid cool season cheer.

THE HOST who can serve his guests wine from a bottle bearing his own personal label, and who can mention casually that the wine was made from grapes grown in his own backyard, is entitled to a flush of pride. But before the wine can be made, the grapes must be planted and nurtured to maturity. It is not as difficult as it sounds.

Home-Made Wine? First The Grapes

Imagine the envious glances and comments you will receive if, at your next party, you serve a wine made from grapes grown in your own backyard.

A good many Californians will be harvesting grapes from their gardens and making like winemakers this month.

IT IS NOT a difficult hobby, particularly here in California. And it affords you a great deal of pride and satisfaction when you can gaze upon and taste the final product made from your own grapes and poured from a bottle embellished by your own private label.

But if October is the month for harvesting the grapes and making the wine, it is not the month for planting the grapes. If you did not take care of that at some earlier date, you will have to wait until January to plant, and until some future autumn for your first harvest and your first winemaking with the produce from your own yard.

So make a note right now to include among your New Year's resolutions for 1972 a January planting of a grape variety suited to the making of wine.

IN MARIN County, where cool temperatures rule out many varieties, the Thompson Seedless Grape is the best bet for a white wine.

For a red wine, the Concord and the Muscat grapes do well in Marin.

There are other varieties that can be grown in Marin County, especially in our warmer, more protected sectors. But generally the larger grapes, such as Toquay and the Ladyfinger, will not ripen satisfactorily in our climate.

BEFORE harvesting your grapes, visit any of the numerous shops that will provide you with all the necessary equipment from fermenting barrels to corks.

And detailed instructions on making wine are available in

AS A GENERAL rule, red wine is made more easily and more successful than white wine by the amateur, since the latter is more delicate.

Grapes take to most soils. Some of the best wine grapes of both California and France are grown in poor gravelly soils.

Depending on the variety, 12 vines should produce sufficient grapes for approximately 12 gallons of wine, or about 60 of the regular-size fifth bottles.

WHEN PLANTING time arrives this winter, prepare the soil before planting the vines in good-sized holes four to five feet apart. Grape vines are hardy when it comes to withstanding climatic changes, but they are weaklings when it comes to standing by themselves. They need the support of redwood stakes or trellises to which they must be tied.

The grapes should be fertilized with a 12-6-6 preparation such as Ortho Gro Liquid Plant Food. To prevent mildew, the vine leaves should be dusted with garden sulfur, especially after rains. And each year the dormant vines be pruned.

Patience is a necessity for the would-be home winemaker. It depends upon how large the vines are when you buy them as to when you will reap your first harvest. A wait of three or four years is likely. But after the fourth year you should get a good crop.

these shops, as well as in bookstores and libraries.

It is ironical that France, most famous of all countries for its wines, has areas where grapes simply will not grow. But some kind of grape suited to the making of wine can be grown in every region of the United States, providing they are given a little tender care.

BUT KEEP in mind that before you make that wine, you must register with the Internal Revenue Service by filling out its Form 1541, "Tax Free Wine for Family Use," and turning it in to the nearest office of the service's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division.

Registration must be completed five days before you begin your winemaking. And the registration entitles the head of a household and his family to make up to 200 gallons of wine tax free.

Floss Flower Aptly Named

Floss Flower is the name gardeners have given to Ageratum, and you have only to see its puff-like blue flowers to understand why.

Too many gardeners fail to take advantage of the hard-to-match, clear blue which this compact little annual offers. It makes a handsome edging for semi-shaded areas, a sea of blue when massed in a bed by itself.

A Guide For Rosarians That Rates The Varieties

In the compact, easy-to-read 1972 edition of "The Handbook for Selecting Roses" is a listing of horticultural and color classifications of all the most popular roses.

Each rose is rated by the American Rose Society to help people select roses for their gardens. The beginner will find the rating feature most useful as a guide for purchasing new varieties.

The new grower would be well advised to stick to the more highly rated kinds — those that have proven easy to grow under a wide variety of conditions. Any rose rated over 8.0 will do well in almost any garden and there are enough roses in this rating range to plant an entire backyard.

The convenient size (three and a half by six and a half inches) of the Handbook fits neatly into pocket or purse. American Rose Society members make it a practice to carry this handy reference with them at all times.

There are more than 1,000 roses listed in their horticultural classes, plus a section of high-rated roses by color.

This rose reference guide is available by sending 10 cents plus a self-addressed stamped envelope to The American Rose Society, 4048 Roselea Place, Columbus, Ohio, 43214.

National Flowers

Among the national flowers are:

Argentina, wattle, acacia; Canada, sugar maple leaf; Chile, bellflower; China, narcissus; Costa Rica, cattleya orchid; Ecuador, chinohona tree; Egypt, lotus; England, red rose; France, fleur-de-lis (iris); Germany, cornflower, Kaiserblume, centaurea cyanus.

Greece, violet and olive; Guatemala, lycasts (orchid); Holland, tulip; India, lotus; Ireland, shamrock; Italy, lily, violet, daisy; Japan, chrysanthemum and cherry; Lithuania, rue; Luxembourg, Honduras, Persia, rose; Mexico, prickly pear; Newfoundland, pitcher-plant; Norway, heather; Nova Scotia, trailing arbutus.

YOUR HOME: Headboard Doesn't Have To Match

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

We've come so far from the matched furniture look that it still amazes me to find young couples purchasing coordinated groups of furniture for bedroom use.

The bedroom is probably the last place we allow the American eclectic look to take hold. Yet it's probably the easiest place to practice a simple form of eclecticism.

WHAT DO YOU need to accomplish a good night's sleep? A pad of foam? A box spring and mattress? A wooden slab with latex cushions? A hammock? What about a bunk bed?

Really there are minimal needs for body support. All the other things we add to the bedroom are for extra luxury, comfort and appearance.

We don't want to strip those luxury items away, but we should think anew about how to achieve them in a fresh way.

All a headboard is expected to do is provide a backstop for the bed, right? So it can actually be a piece of wrought iron, a panel of fabric, a great rug or tapestry or even a wall-hung bookcase. We seldom expect that headboard to tilt out as a pillow rest, although some manufacturers have so designed their furniture.

READING LIGHTS usually are on a wall or table adjacent to the bed, so that function needn't be fulfilled in a headboard.

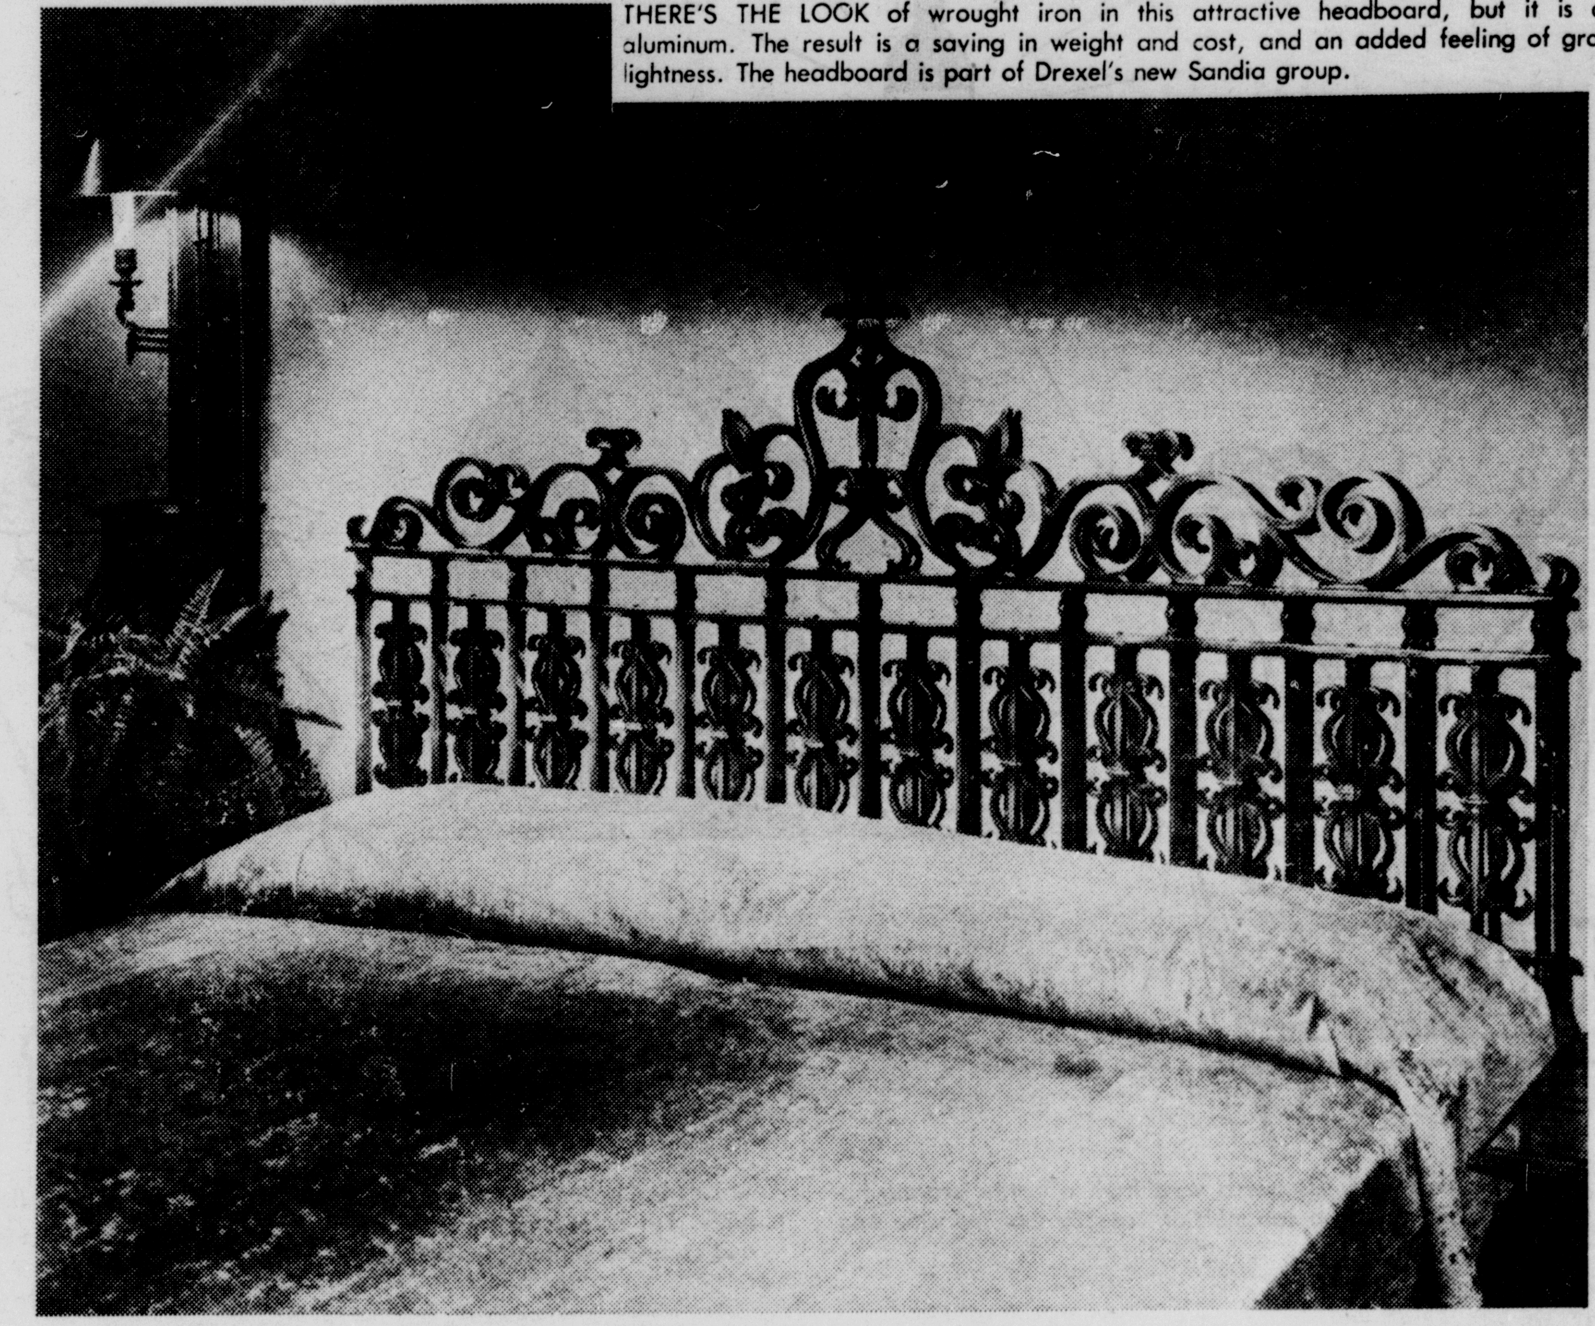
So, truthfully, we use the headboard more for a decorative element than for any real purpose.

The bed shown here is an example of an idea that started as an interior designer's trick and became so popular it wound up being manufactured.

Here a beautiful wrought-iron gate was reinterpreted in lighter weight aluminum in order to function in back of that sleeping pad. Wrought-iron fences have been widely used by decorators for this purpose, but not everyone happens to have a little old iron monger in his backyard. So the fences became scarce and expensive.

Now Drexel achieves that Old World look, but by interpreting it in aluminum they make it easier to move and less expensive than the iron kind. Naturally, you don't have to buy one of these, perhaps you can find your own original concept, an old window grille or a garden wall bracket.

There's always the old wagon wheel. Maybe you can think of a groovy way to turn that old relic into an item for your early eclectic or early Goodwill decorating job.



THERE'S THE LOOK of wrought iron in this attractive headboard, but it is actually aluminum. The result is a saving in weight and cost, and an added feeling of grace and lightness. The headboard is part of Drexel's new Sandia group.

How To Keep Your Winter Fuel Cost Down

If you want to play it smart, some "cool" fall preparations will lead to a warm winter.

The American Gas Association offers these simple, money-saving hints to help you conserve fuel and keep a check on your fuel bills during the coming winter season.

Use nature to its best advantage. Sunshine is free, and it's warm — so, when the sun is shining, open up window blinds, shades and curtains, and "let the sun shine in." When the sun goes down or doesn't shine, keep windows coverings closed, and let them form an insulation against the cold air outside.

IF YOU HAVE a fireplace, be sure the damper is closed when it isn't in use.

Try to keep the opening and closing of outside doors at a minimum. Each time one is opened, heat escapes, and your furnace has to work extra to replace the lost heat.

Keep heaters free from obstructions. If you cover a radiator or block off a heat duct, the heat from that source is cut off and the room temperature will drop.

A GREAT WAY to waste money is to get into the habit of constantly adjusting the thermostat. Contrary to popular belief, turning up the thermostat doesn't make the furnace produce any more heat — what it does is keep the furnace operating longer, and use up more fuel.

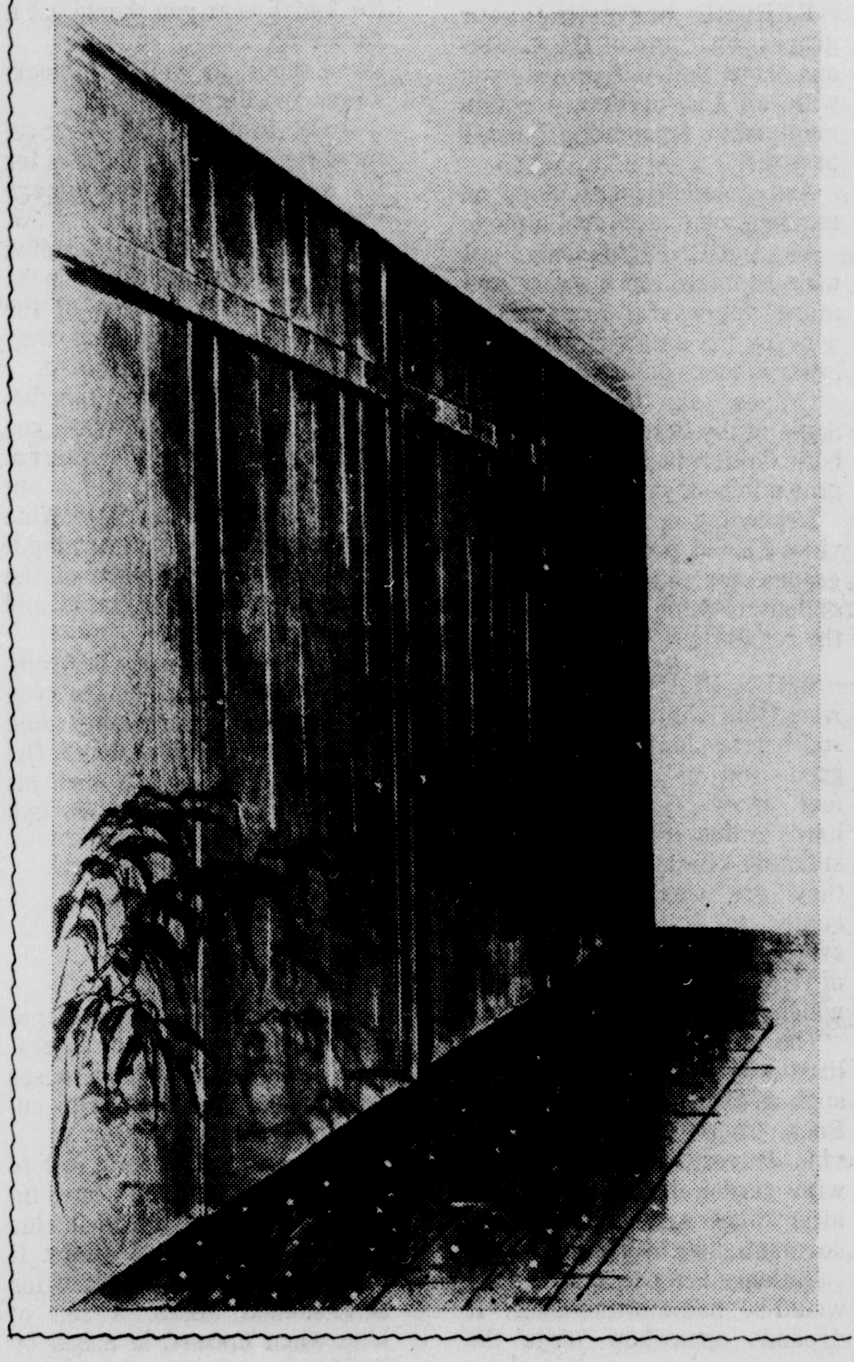
Experiment during the first few cold days to find the lowest Indoor temperature at which your home is comfortable. Then, set the thermostat at that temperature and leave it. The thermostat will automatically do the rest to maintain the desired temperature.

Change your furnace filter several times during the winter. If the filter is clogged, the furnace may operate all day long, especially during very cold weather, and still not be able to work efficiently.

IF THERE ARE some rooms in your home that are not used regularly in winter, turn off the registers and radiators in those rooms and keep the door closed. There's no need to heat an unused room.

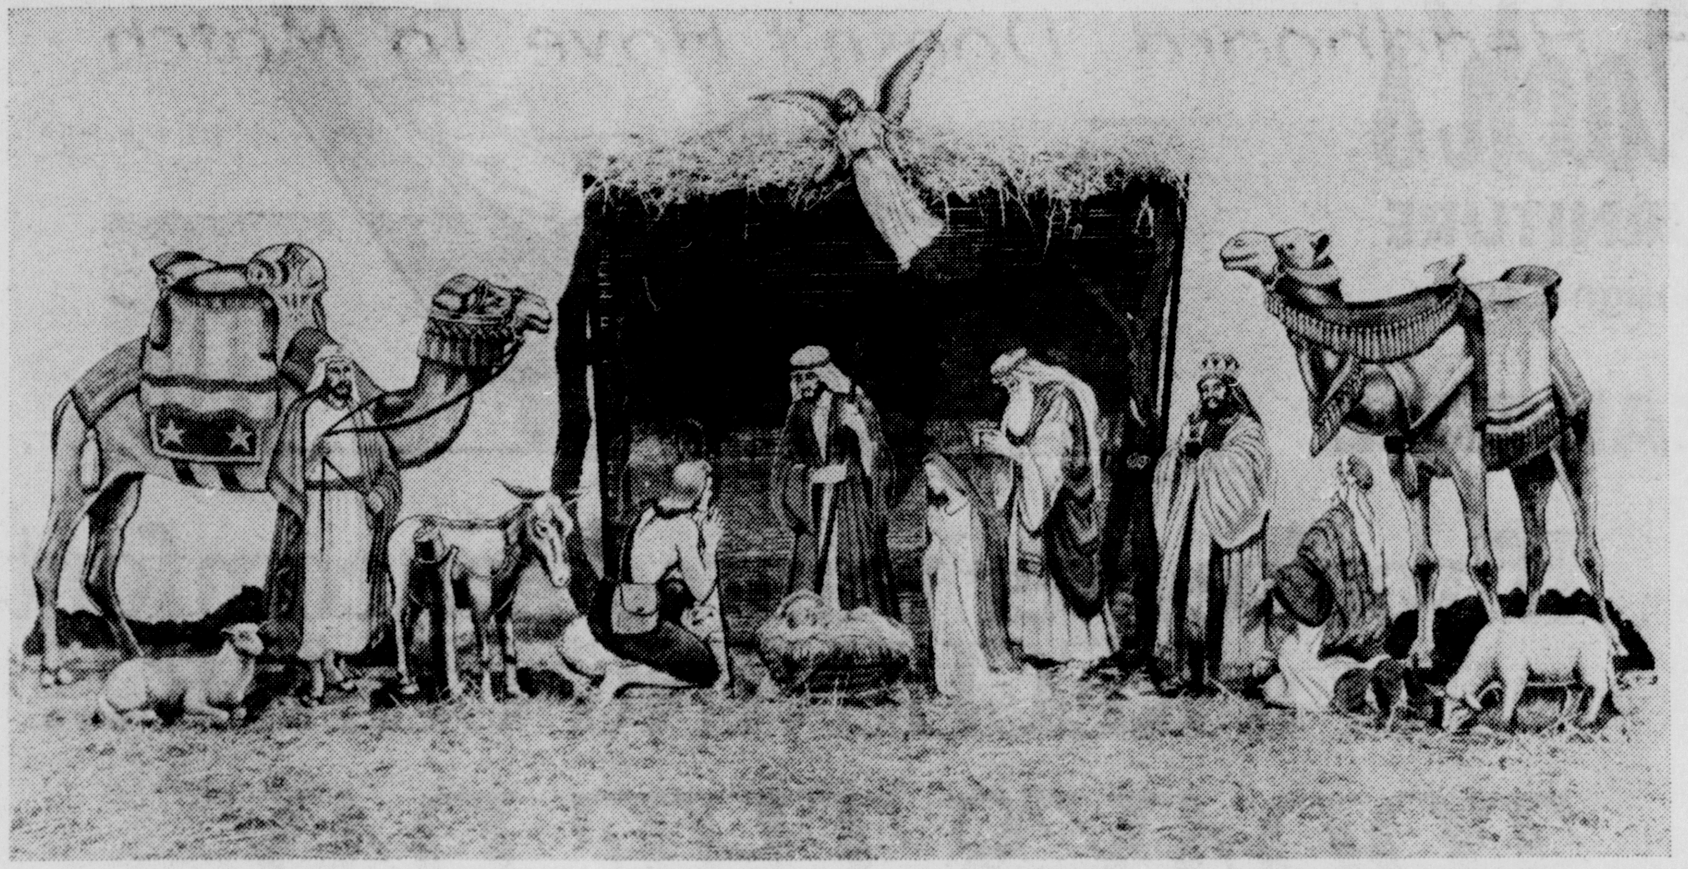
And, if your basement, attic or garage isn't heated, keep the door closed so that the heat from the heated part of the house won't escape.

It only takes a few minutes to follow these few simple preparations to winterize your home and be sure your furnace is operating properly. And it takes even less effort to keep your home heating system operating efficiently all winter long.



WITHOUT any doubt, the most frequent complaint of house owners is the absence of sufficient storage spaces in their homes. And a most practical solution to that problem is the installation of wall storage units. To install your own units, send $1 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Easi-Bild Pattern Co.'s "How to Build Wall to Wall Storage" Book No. 634. Be sure to include your zip code number. You will get illustrated instructions for the construction of a variety of useful storage units, some with sliding doors, some with wheels for mobility, and even one that can be hung inside of the kitchen door to provide storage for cans while taking up a minimum of space. It is a most useful project for the do-it-yourselfer suffering from that generations-old storage problem.

Handyman's Pages



AT LEFT, the creche remains by far the most popular and most meaningful of all the outdoor Christmas designs. This Nativity Scene was erected with the use of Steve Ellingson's picture set — No. C-7 — that he has been offering now for a number of years, and which have been used with great effectiveness by hundreds of churches, organizations, municipal and county governments and householders. Users of the Ellingson patterns have shown a marked preference, their designer says, for the more traditional settings. And thus, year after year, comes the calls for this telling in figures of the Christmas story.

The Nativity Scene: Christmas Favorite

By STEVE ELLINGSON

This is the time of year when letters pour in from do-it-yourselfers all over the country asking for outdoor Christmas displays.

Their favorite this year, as always, is the creche, and for good reason . . . it's the most appropriate and appealing of all outdoor decorations. In churches and homes, and even businesses throughout the world this Christmas more eyes and hearts will trun to the creche than ever before.

Today the nativity scene is a Christmas tradition — a symbol of joy and devotion. Its popularity constantly increases as more people and churches join the interdenominational "CHRIST in CHRISTmas" committee in its campaign to keep Christ in Christmas. This is the 17th year we have been asked to support this worthwhile cause.

The scene pictured above is something any amateur can make in a few hours. It's two-thirds life-size (camels are over five feet tall). The figures come to you printed in rich, vibrant colors. All you need do is glue the pictures on plywood, then saw them out. They are then ready to go on display.

The pictures are waterproof (like billboards) and may be used outdoors year after year in all kinds of weather. It's a project that the entire family, especially the youngsters, can help with.

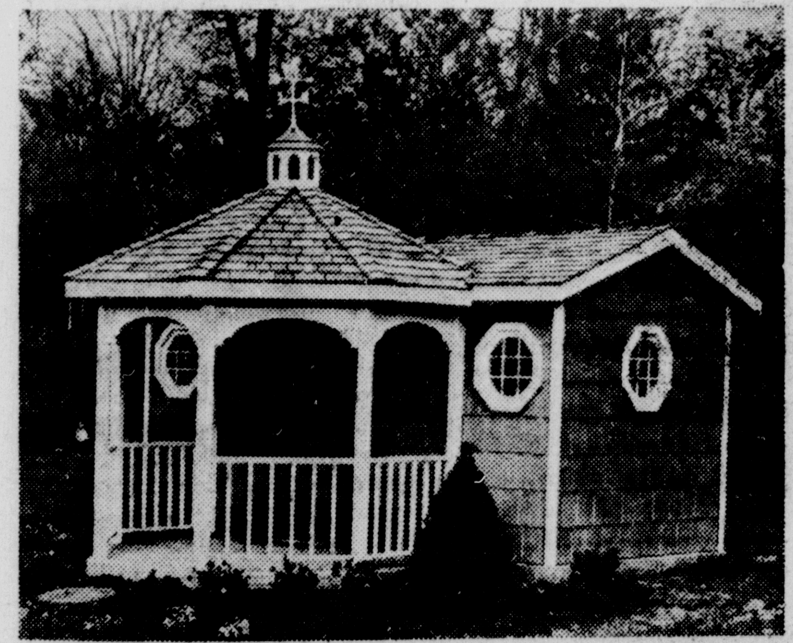
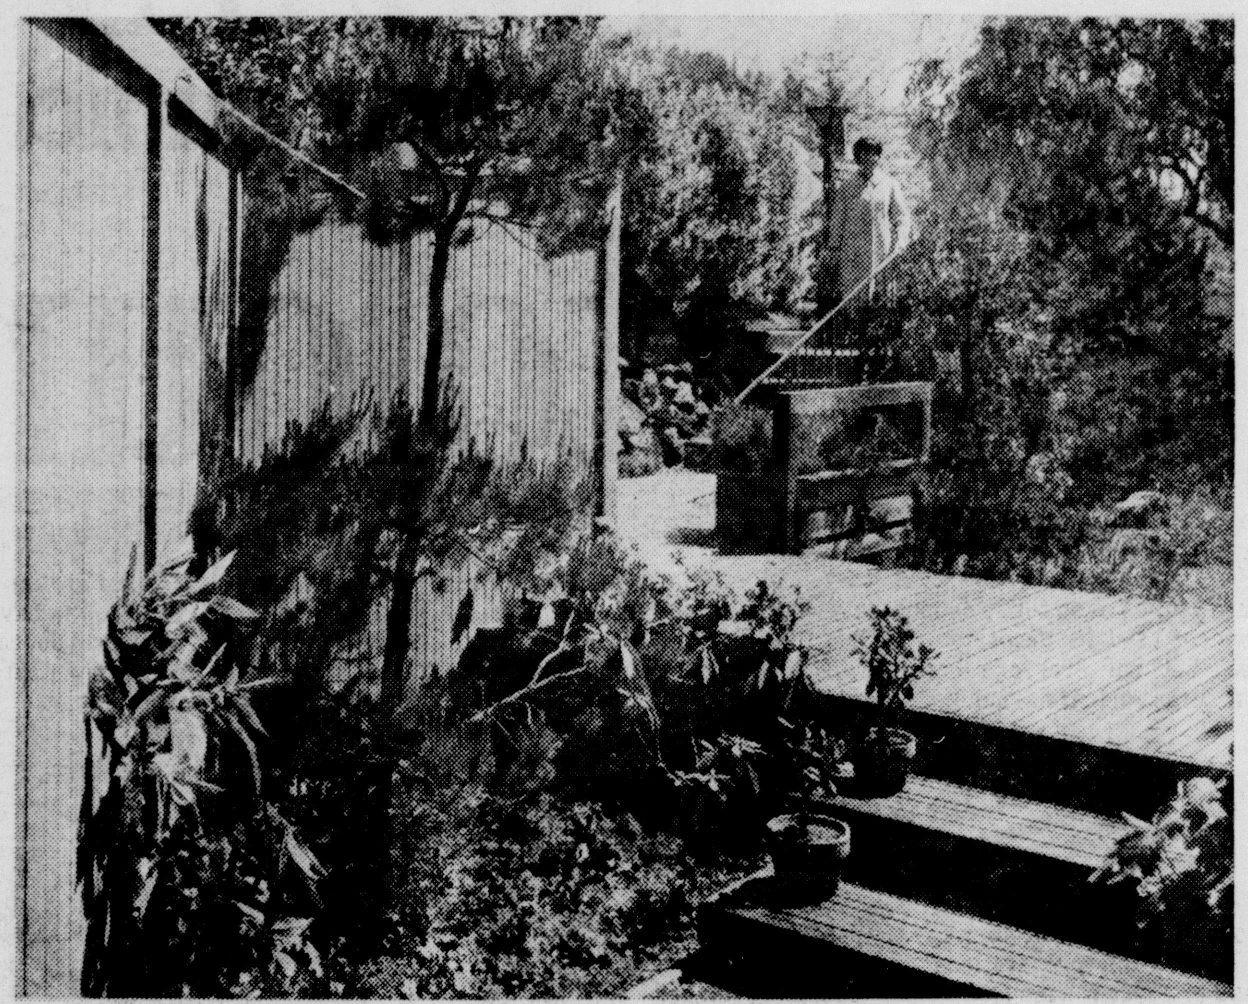
Send stamped, addressed envelope for a free folder picturing a complete assortment of outdoor Christmas displays and toys the handyman can build.

USEFUL GAZEBO



AN OUTDOOR sitting room in the backyard can add greatly to the appearance and value of a residential property. This octagon-shaped gazebo is especially attractive. And practical, too, in that it includes at the rear a storage house for bicycles, lawn tools, etc. The entire structure is built on a concrete slab. The exterior covering is a rustic, textured siding, Masonite Bayside, that looks like cedar shakes. And the two contrasting shapes are molded to form an integrated whole, while octagonal-shaped windows and a cupola topped by a weather vane add a look of distinction.



AN ENTRY DECK of two-by-four-inch western wood leading to the house has replaced a longer flight of steps, a gravel walk and a concrete porch to simplify and beautify the approach to this home. The fence is of one-by-two-inch resawn fir slats stained green. The planter box was left to weather naturally.

Remodeling Job Adds Charm

The natural landscaping look, disturbing the site as little as possible, is growing in favor, and can lend a gracious, inviting approach and entry to a home.

This often is the case with newer houses, built on sloping sites once considered unsuitable, or at least less desirable. But it's also possible to bring new charm to older homes that have long or sloping approaches.

ONE JOB of landscape remodeling recently observed added warmth and a new personality with an entry deck of western wood. The deck replaces a longer flight of steps down from the street, a gravel walk and a concrete porch.

Marking a turn as the new deck-walkway angles from the street to the house is a planter box of western red cedar and a low railing of four-by-four-inch cedar posts. Planter, railing and deck all have been left unfinished to weather naturally.

The deck of two-by-four-inch Douglas fir on edge bridges the existing walk-way around the house and leads up to the front entry. Two wide steps of two-by-four-inch fir lead down to this walk from each side of the deck, for access to the yard.

Garden steps must be at least as wide as stairs in a house, as garden equipment constantly is being carried up and down them, and wheeled equipment often must negotiate them.

A SCREEN fence across the front of the house adjoins the entry deck. It provides a backdrop for trees and plantings in the naturally landscaped yard and blocks glare of auto headlights passing in the street above. The fence is one-by-two-inch resawn fir slats on a frame of two-by-fours, and is stained green.

Entry decks also may expand across the front or around the side of the house, adding pleasant outdoor living space and improving access between separate areas of the house.

Ideas On How To Add A Room

As families grow larger, it soon becomes apparent the only housing solution, short of moving, is to add more room to the house. The problem usually is deciding where and how.

Five architect-designed add-a-room projects show how to gain living space with a loft room, master bedroom, garage conversion, over-the-garage room, and a learnning center.
